But they also gave alms for the distressed, and to support the work. St. Paul directs his people very carefully: "Upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him." But those gifts were not laid on the altar in those times, only the "gifts" of bread and wine for the Communion. A great many people now seem to think that "Offertory" means the collection of money made by carrying the plates around. But the word means the offering to God of the elements which He has ordered for His service, and also of the very best we have. The sentences are a great many, and the Priest repeats one or more, as he thinks best. These were placed in the Prayer-book in 1549.

But you want to make some note of the fact that the Offertory has always been a part of the service; so turn to the third rubric after the sentences (rubrics are the fine-print directions), where it says, "And the Priest shall then place upon the Table . . . ," and the rubric after that mark "Earliest times."

Now do you see the line below:

"Let us pray for the whole state of Christ's Church Militant."

The prayer which follows is called the Church Militant Prayer, and you can write that on the margin, if you want, and also "Earliest times, about 100 A. D." Perhaps you remember that the Apostles and their followers could not have their services in writing, for fear the heathen might get them and profane the holy mysteries; so the wording could be changed a little, as different Priests in different places went on with the prayer. Yet, by the guidance of the Holy Spirit, the substance of the prayer was very much the same as now. The actual English wording, of course, dates from 1549.

Next comes the Exhortation:—"Dearly beloved in the Lord."

This was written for the English Prayer-book of 1549

"Ye who do truly and earnestly repent you," is called the Invitation, and was written in 1549.

Next comes the General Confession. That was also written in 1549.

The Absolution, "Almighty God, our Heavenly Father," is about the same as was used in 1089. At that time some of the Bishops of the Church found that the Mass wasn't being very carefully celebrated; sometimes very important parts were left out. So some of them worked over it and made out service-books, called "Uses," which the clergy followed exactly. The best one was arranged by Osmund, Bishop of Salisbury, and was called the "Sarum Use." It was all in Latin; otherwise, a great deal of our Prayer-book is simply taken from the Sarum Use, and translated into English. Mark the Absolution 1089.

The Comfortable Words were first used in the Prayer-book of 1549.

"Lift up your hearts," brings us back again to the earliest times. The Latin of it is "Sursum Corda," and that, and most of what follows, are in the oldest service-books that have been found. One of these ancient books is named after our own St. Clement, though it probably dated back even farther, to St. James, one of the Apostles. But it is lovely to think that our dear Saint, away back in the earliest times, was one of those who did so much to maintain our worship.

"Holy, Holy, Holy," is called the Sanctus, and is from earliest times.

There are five times in the Christian year when the Priest has to read the Preface to the Sanctus. (Look at part headed "Proper Prefaces.") These have quite a history. You are so familiar with the names of Leo, Gelasius and Gregory, from your study of the Collects, that I hardly need remind you that they were Bishops of Rome, who arranged the services for the seasons, very much as we have them now. Leo was the first, but after he had his beautiful prayers all written out—they had to be all written by hand, there was no printing in those days, you know—there was a terrible invasion by the wild Huns of the North. Perhaps some of his loving work was destroyed or lost at that time; that was about 451; but Gelasius went on with it, writing in what seemed to be needed, and Gregory at last rearranged it, and wrote some prayers of his own. Not only prayers and collects, but other parts. Here are these Prefaces. The one for Christmas Day was written in 1549, and so was the one for Whitsunday; but Gelasius wrote the Preface for Easter and Trinity, and Gregory wrote the one for Ascension.

"We do not presume to come to this, Thy Table," is the Prayer of Humble Access. It was written in 1549.

What comes next is from earliest times, the language a little changed, but the meaning just the same as it always was. First there is the History of Jesus' Sacrifice for us, and how He commanded us to do this in remembrance of Him. Then we offer ourselves and call upon the Holy Spirit; then we remember the whole Church here and in Heaven. And then we Receive. And then we say the Dear Lord's Prayer all together.

The Thanksgiving, "Almighty and Everliving God," was written in 1549.

The Gloria in Excelsis is a very, very old hymn. No one knows when it was written, some one took the angels' song and added to it. But it is found in the oldest books. Although Christians everywhere seem to have known it, it was first published about 350. You might mark it, "Some time before 350."

We have to thank the Prayer-book of 1549 for the beautiful Blessing with which our Priests dismiss us after Communion. It is taken from the Blessings with which St. Paul used to close his Epistles to his people.

Now, the Collects for this month are very easy to understand. Although Advent does not begin till the end of next month, we might as well date all the rest of the Trinity Collects, and finish that study now. The Collects for the 19th, 20th and 21st Sundays after Trinity were written by Gelasius, 490. All the rest, to the end, were by Gregory; you may date them 500. The Collects for both the Saints' Days, this month, were written in 1549.

PARISH NOTES

A requiem will be said every allowable day in November at 7.30 A. M.

Bono Mors will be said every Monday during November after evensong.

Vespers of the dead will be said immediately after evensong on Tuesday, November 1.

We postpone comment upon the General Convention until next month when its deliberations will be over.

The parish tea will be held on S. Clement's night, Wednesday, November 23. All the parish is urged to attend.

Commencing November 2, a series of instructions on the Prayer Book will be given by the rector every Wednesday afternoon at four o'clock in the parish hall.

Confessions will be heard on Monday and Tuesday before the patronal feast. The hours will be posted on the bulletin board. Every parishioner should make a devout communion during the octave.

The following offerings will be taken during November: Tuesday, November 1, for the All Saints, Sisters of the Poor; S. Clement's Day, for the expenses of the parish; Thanksgiving Day, for the poor, and the Episcopal Hospital.

As the number of Sundays after Trinity exceeds twenty-five the collect epistle and gospel for the Sixth Sunday after Epiphany will be used on November thirteenth and that for the Sunday next before Advent on November twentieth.

The Rev. Dr. Barry, rector of the Church of St. Mary the Virgin, New York, is expected to preach on S. Clement's Day, and the Rev. Edward H. Schlueter, vicar of St. Luke's Chapel, New York, will preach at the Guild service Friday evening, November 25.

It is with great regret that we announce the resignation of Mr. Sears as organist of S. Clement's. Mr. Sears has held his position in the parish for nine years. During that time he has been unceasing in his endeavor to bring the music up to a high standard of excellence and has been unfailing in his kindness and consideration to the clergy. The hearty good wishes of the parish follow him to the larger opportunity which he has been called to undertake. He will remain with us until after the festival, when his place will be filled by Mr. Walter E. Hall, F. R. C. O., formerly organist at Trinity Church, Pittsburg.

Collect:—O God, who makest us to rejoice in the yearly solemnity of blessed Clement, Thy martyr and bishop, favorably grant that we who keep his festival may likewise imitate his fortitude in suffering, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Epistle: Phil. iii: 17—iv: 4.

NOVENA—NOVEMBER 14-23

Memorial for the parish (to be said daily):

Ant.—I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground: I will pour my Spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thine offspring.

V.—O Lord, look down from heaven.

R.—Behold, and visit this vine.

Let us pray:

Almighty and everlasting God, who dost govern all things in heaven and earth, mercifully hear our supplications, and grant unto this parish all things that are needful for its spiritual welfare; schools in which to train the young in Thy faith and fear; ministers to labor in this portion of Thy vineyard; a church restored to the beauty of holiness. Strengthen and confirm the faithful; visit and relieve the sick; turn and soften the wicked; rouse the careless; recover the fallen; restore the penitent; remove all hindrances to the advancement of Thy truth; bring all to be of one heart and one mind within the fold of Thy Holy Church; to the honor and glory of Thy Holy Name; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

DECLARATION ON CANON 19

(Unanimously adopted by the House of Bishops)

The committee appointed to consider what reply should be made to the Memorial presented to the House of Bishops concerning Canon 19, having considered the matter, respectfully recommend the adoption by the House of the following reply:

In reply to a memorial signed by over eleven hundred clergymen, addressed to the House of Bishops with regard to the amendment to Canon 19 adopted by the General Convention, 1907, the Bishops would assure the memorialists of their sympathy with the anxiety expressed lest the clause in question should be misinterpreted as making light of the importance either of sound teaching in our congregations in accordance with the Church's received doctrine, or of a commission to teach in the Church's name.

The clause which restricts to the Bishop the right to give permission to those who are not ministers of this Church to make addresses in any of our churches on special occasions, was not intended to alter and cannot be fairly interpreted as in the least degree modifying the position of the Church as expressed in the Prayerbook and the Ordinal, which restricts the ministry of the Word and Sacraments in our congregations to men who have received episcopal ordination.

The Bishops are disposed to regard this declaration as almost unnecessary except as a matter of courtesy and respect to the number and character of the memorialists, since the Canon, at first popularly misnamed and misunderstood as an "Open Pulpit Canon," and perhaps in a few instances so misused, is now generally recognized as containing nothing to disturb the order or disquiet the peace of the Church.

SOME MESSENGERS AND WHERE THEY WENT—XVI

There is a very general impression that the first worshipers in New England were the Puritans. As a matter of fact, the Church, both on the eastern and western coast, can claim that distinction.

"The Great Patent of Virginia" granted the right of colonization to two companies, in land lying on the Atlantic coast, between the thirty-fourth and forty-fifth degrees. The settlements in the southern part we have already studied, so now let us see who preceded the Puritans in the northern regions. The Virginia charter dated from 1606. Three or four years previous to that, explorers had been along the coast of what is now New England, and had brought back five Indians, whom they had kidnapped, really, "to bring them up to the glory of God." I am afraid the spiritual state of those Indians was rather a bewildered one at first, but they were docile, and their attention to the preaching and teaching and training bestowed on them was most edifying; they were missionary workers at any rate, for great interest was aroused in the matter of converting the American savages, and when the company was organized which sailed for the northern parts, one stated object was the conversion of the Indians. But the exiled savages had not reached the end of their adventures; two ships were dispatched, at different times, with some of the Indians as guides, and these were captured by the Spanish. But, finally, a third ship safely explored the Maine coast, brought back a satisfactory report, and on Trinity Sunday, May 31st, 1607, two ships sailed from Plymouth. One was the Mary and John, under Capt. Raleigh Gilbert, and the other the "Gift of God," under Capt. Popham. Their Indian guides directed them safely along the coast to a little cove, and then across the land about three miles to an Indian village. It was not strange that they were received with considerable suspicion at first, but after an hour or so they made friends, and visited the wigwams, made welcome and treated kindly. One of the previous explorers had set up a cross, which some of the party found. It was like a ray of light in darkness to the homesick men, this silent message from other wanderers, and the following Sunday, Xth after Trinity, they held a solemn service, the Rev. Richard Seymour officiating. This was on St. George's Island, on the coast of Maine.

"Sunday being the 9th of August, in the morning the most part of our whole company of both ships landed on this island, the which we call St. George's Island, where the cross standeth, and there we heard a sermon delivered unto us by our preacher, giving God thanks for our happy meeting and safe arrival into the country, and so returned aboard again."

The "happy meeting" refers to the fact that the two ships were separated on the way over, the Mary and John having been captured by a Dutch vessel, and held under suspicion of piracy.

The young priest who had offered himself for this expedition, the Rev. Richard Seymour, was a great-grandson, it is believed, of the Duke of Somerset, Lord Protector during the minority of King Edward VI, of prayer-book fame; and he was related to most of the projectors of the expedition. So that, while the saintly Hunt was holding the same services in Virginia, thirteen years before the Puritans landed, "God is our Refuge and Strength" was being recited in the Psalter, for the day, on the New England coast.

After the sermon, referred to above, there was the formal inauguration of the president of the colony, George Popham, also related to the young chaplain. The commission was read, a council was formed, which included the chaplain, and laws were passed.

Busy days followed; Fort St. George was built, as well as ships for exploring the coast, and a new large ship, called the Virginia. A little rough church was built, which some writers even claim as antedating the one at Virginia; but there is not much ground for that.

The death of their most influential friends at home, as well as of the president, depriving them of the support and leadership, the colony was finally abandoned. But a few brave souls refused to return. Thirty years after, there was a little colony of fifty families, known as the "Sheepscot Farms," on the banks of the Sheepscot River, and scattered settlers and traders in other parts. Year after year Sir Francis Popham sent ships over, and Gorges struggled to found a Church colony on the Maine coast. And, furthermore, the permission to settle at Plymouth had to be obtained by the Pilgrims from Sir Ferdinando Gorges. These Pilgrims were apparently a more churchly sort than their brethren at Massachusetts Bay; but it was not long before Episcopacy was crushed out of New England, and religious freedom with it; as to authority, that is, and legal rights. As a matter of fact, there was settlement by Church people everywhere. Weymouth, Massachusetts, had a colony of Church people, and their clergyman, the Rev. William Morrell, was an Ecclesiastical Commissioner.

There was one Thomas Morton, who conducted daily prayers according to the Prayerbook. It is quite possible that this sturdy gentleman was of a militant disposition, and not anxious to follow peace with all men; possible, too, that the Puritans had some excuse for disapproving his behavior at times; true, certainly, that he brought much persecution on himself by the publication of his satire "The New English Canaan." Still, he held up bravely under violent persecution, and went home at last to England to die from the effects of it.

Then there was the famous Blackstone, who said he had left England because he did not like the lord-bishops, but he refused to be ruled by the lord-brethren. He finally went to Rhode Island, where he was the first clergyman, perhaps the first white man, in that section, and began the raising of small fruits. So one of the greatest industries in this section of the country we owe to a Church clergyman. The Rev. William Blackstone worked quietly among Indians and settlers, doing the holy work of a priest as opportunity arose, and was quaintly pleased when he could reward regular attendance on Church duties by gathering children and young people in his garden and orchards for a little feast of some rare fruit.

In 1622, under the authority of the Council of New England, Gorges and Mason founded a colony at the mouth of the Piscataqua River. One settlement was at the mouth of the river, around the fort. The other, eight miles further up, was called Dover, and there, after a few years, the fishers and settlers met to organize for mutual protection and self-government. It was Mason's idea to make this a stronghold for the Church, and a refuge for homesick Episcopalians who were paying by fines and exile for any use of the Book of Common Prayer. "Piscataquack," as they called the colony, ranked with Plymouth in size and importance for a long time, and Governor Winthrop, writing of Captain Mason's death, said, as of a much-dreaded enemy, "The Lord in mercy hath taken him away!" In 1640, at Portsmouth, there was a small church and parsonage, with fifty acres of land; the church had proper Communion silver, and altar linen, all carefully selected and brought from England by Mason's orders; the building of the rectory and clearing of the land pertaining to it being the volunteer work of devoted parishioners. This prosperity was at its height when the Piscataqua settlements passed under the authority of Massachusetts, and persecutions began, hot and heavy. The Rev. Richard Gibson, a scholarly Christian gentleman, who left his books to minister to the fishermen, was ordered to submit and give up the use of the Prayer-book. Refusing, he was banished. But the Rev. Robert Jordan had begun work a year or and he was a hard man to subdue, in things temporal as well as spiritual, having already become a man of great influence and some wealth, although only twenty-eight years of age. He was often called upon by the settlers to arbitrate and advise. He took up his predecessor's work and carried it on openly for thirty-one years. In 1665 he was "imprisoned and barbarously used," an old record says, for baptizing children. The font, small and battered, but precious for its testimony to the power of the Church even then, is still preserved by a New England family. Six years later, the Puritan authorities had a warrant against him for marrying a couple according to the English Use, "contrary to the laws of this jurisdiction."

During the Indian war, his home was attacked by the savages, and the aged priest barely escaped with his life. Weakened by hard work, abuse, old age, and disease, he took refuge on an island near Portsmouth, N. H., and there in a short time died. "Weakened in body, but of sound and perfect mind, praised be God," said the old Christian soldier, and so passed away. At the time of his death, he was the only priest of the Church remaining faithful to his ordination vows, on the coast of New Hampshire and Maine. The rest had been banished or had weakly resigned their ministry. These last, however, were not numerous, and it was not many years before the Church at home was roused to look after those few sheep in the wilderness.

Psalm. Blessed is the man that feareth the Lord: he hath great delight in His commandments.

Glory be, etc.

The Lord said unto my Lord: sit thou on My right hand.

Alleluia, Alleluia.

This is the priest whom the Lord hath crowned, Alleluia.

The following comes from our friend, Fr. Wood, of the Diocese of Hankow, China.

"I spent the Rogation days in the country, in preparation for Confirmation at S. James', Hau Chuan, on Ascension Day. Twenty-six were confirmed. On the morning of Ascension Day there was an early Solemn Mass at S. James, with a fine big congregation, and eighty-four communions. Some of these dear, good people getting up before dawn, and walking miles, in order to get there on time.

"On the Sunday in the Octave, I was again at home. Fr. Cooper was with me, thus enabling us to give the S. Andrew's people a Mass, instead of their coming into the city to S. Saviour's. As a result, there were ninety-four communions in the two places.

"Our Wuchang Confirmations (exclusive of Boone College and S. Hilda's School) numbered forty. These people want the Catholic religion.

"On Whit-Sunday, there was the usual one Mass, early (Missa Cantata), at S. Saviour's. There lacked only one of the seventy communicants, besides numbers who assisted. You should have been present at a sung Mass, at S. Saviour's, and see these dear boys, in red cassocks and queues, amid a cloud of sweet incense."

PARISH NOTES.

The masses on Christmas day will be as usual, 12.01 (midnight), 6, 7, 8, 9.15, 11 A. M. Any who may desire to make their communions at the midnight mass should keep a fast of devotion from six o'clock.

The Feast of our Lord's Nativity is not kept in any true sense unless a devout communion be made. Every confirmed member of the parish should come to the Altar on Christmas day, and nothing other than sickness should be permitted to prevent. As the feast falls on Sunday this year there will be no special hours for confession, but the clergy will be in Church on Friday and Saturdays as usual.

St. Clement's tide seems always to mark a change of one sort or another in the parish life. This year the change will be felt by every member of the congregation as not only is Mr. Sears leaving us, as has been noticed previously, but Fr. Schneeweiss is to take up work in St. Mark's parish as assistant to the Vicar of St. Mary's Chapel. St. Clement's has been fortunate always in assistant clergy who have ministered in the parish and the departure of Fr. Schneeweiss is a matter of real regret. For nearly six years he has been with us and has won a place in the affections of many. It is a matter for congratulation that he is to be still in our vicinity if not in our midst. Many prayers will go up from the parish Altar that he may be abundantly blessed in his new work.

ST. CLEMENT'S TIDE:

Our parish feast proved to be one of real joy. The day was clear, the communions slightly increased over last year and the rendition of Mozart's Seventh mass, under Mr. Sears direction, was perhaps the best in many years. We had the privilege of entertaining as our guest the Bishop of Salina, who has won our hearts and our interest in his work in the mission field and the special preacher at the mass was the Rev. Rector of the Church of St. Mary, the Virgin, of New York City. The offering which is to be devoted to parish expenses amounted to $1,385.21, and there was an additional gift of $1,000 toward the fund for the restoration of the nave.

The parish tea in the evening was largely attended and a spirit of real friendliness was evident everywhere. The Procession of the Sodality was held on Friday night, with the Vicar of St. Luke's Chapel, New York, as the preacher.

SOME MESSENGERS AND WHERE THEY WENT—XV.

Under the Commonwealth, the Puritans flourished in the colonies, in New England especially. But in 1686, May 15, the Sunday after Ascension, there entered Boston harbor a "vessel freighted with woe for the Puritans." Their violated Charter had been abrogated, and the colony was a royal province. The Rev. Robert Ratcliffe looked from the deck off over the old Trimountain, one summit crowned with a windmill, another fortified, and the third bearing the "Beacon." There was a ceremonius, if not particularly hearty, reception at the wharf, and then the English priest walked up the street, "crooked, with little decency and no uniformity," to the best of the taverns, probably trying to see some spot where he could officiate on the following Sunday. Churches—or meeting-houses—there were, three of them, in different parts of the town, but the first church service was held at the Town Hall. He read the services and preached in his surplice, and a crowd gathered from curiosity; but in that place the services had to be held, for none of the three meeting-houses could be had for such purposes. The new "president," Joseph Dudley, bore in mind that he had once been a non-conformist minister, and dared not risk the popular indignation by upholding the Church too strongly. So the clergyman was granted the small room at the east end of the Town-house. A movable pulpit was made, which could be carried up and down stairs, as the congregation increased, and preaching had to be carried on both morning and afternoon to accommodate them. The missionary had as his helper for awhile Chaplain Buckley, of the ship in which he had come over. After a time "South" Church was obtained for use, at such hours as the Puritans did not use it. But there was endless bad feeling; the Puritans would gather angrily about the doors, and protest, when some extra Church season lengthened the service, when the sermon was long, or especially at the time of the Holy Communion. Those within must have felt the need of "the peace of God which passeth all understanding," as sullen murmurs came from the crowd outside, and they emerged, greeted with more or less rudeness by the rival congregations. Three or four weeks after the Church services began the Church members organized. There were ten gentlemen, beside the missionary. Their first act was to provide for a weekly offertory for the maintenance of the Church. Church wardens were elected, and a committee was appointed to prepare an address to the king and Archbishop. Twelve "forms" or benches were ordered, and a sexton appointed. There wasn't much for him to do, except dust those twelve benches, but the brave beginning won many followers, and it was only another week or two before they pledged the clergyman fifty pounds a year, besides what the Government should think fit to settle on him. Services were ordered for every Wednesday and Friday, at 7 A. M., in summer, and 9 A. M. in winter.

The record of the contention between the Church people and the Puritans is quaintly told, day by day, in an old Puritan diary. (Sir Edmund Andros had become royal governor of New England, and was actively engaged in upholding the Church worship.)

"Tuesday, Jan. 25, 1687. This day is kept for St. Paul, and the bell was rung in the morning to call persons to service; the Governor, I am told, was there.

Monday, Jan. 31. There is a meeting at the Town-house forenoon and afternoon. Bell rang for it; respecting the beheading of Charles the First. The Governor was there.

Tuesday, March 22. (Holy Week). This day his Excellency views the three Meeting Houses.

Wednesday, March 23. The Governor sent Mr. Randolph for the keys of our Meeting that he may say prayers there. Mr. Eliot, Frary, Oliver, Savage, Davis and myself, wait on his Excellency, show that the Land and House is ours, and that we can't consent to part with it to any such use; exhibit an extract of Mr. Norton's Deed and how 'twas built by particular persons, etc.

Friday March, 25, 1687. The Governor has service in the South Meeting House. Goodman Needham, the sexton, though he had resolved not to ring the bell, was prevailed upon to ring it, and to open the door at the Governor's command.

Sunday, March 27. (Easter Day). Gov- and his retinue met in our Meeting. at eleven; broke off past two, because of the Sacrament and Mr. Clark's long sermon; now we were appointed to come half hour past one, so it was a sad sight to see how full the street was with people gazing and moving to and fro, because they had not entrance into the House.

Tuesday, May 10. Mr. Bullivant, having been acquainted that May 15 was our Sacrament day, he writ to Mr. Willard that he had acquainted those principally concerned, and 'twas judged very improper and inconvenient for the Governor and his to be at any other House, it being Whitsunday, and they must have Communion, and that 'twas expected should leave off by 12, and not return again till they rung the bell, that they might have time to dispose of the Elements. So remembering how long they were at Easter, we were afraid 'twould breed much confusion in the afternoon, and so on Wednesday concluded not to have our Sacrament, for saw 'twas in vain to urge their promise * * * But see they have the advantage to lengthen or shorten the Exercises as may make for their purpose."

This last,—the postponement of their Puritan service, and the difficulties which the congregation of the South Church encountered, brought forward the best men of both sides. The matter was going too far,—there were Church people who realized that the Governor's zeal might not be altogether a holy one; most historians describe Andros as something of a tyrant. Among the Puritans there were saints indeed; some kindly tolerance on the part of the Church, some recognition of property rights, might have worked wonders; as it was, Puritans were constantly coming into the Church, many simply reading their way in. The Puritans set a special Day of Prayer, with fasting on the 1st of June. Whether those prayers included some for brotherly love, is not apparent; at any rate, there was peace for awhile. The Governor was busy with his wife, who had come over from England only to die. Her funeral was held in the South Meeting House, with as much churchly form as circumstances would permit, and the whole town turned out. This was the middle of February. Shortly after, subscriptions were raised for the Church, and "King's Chapel," was built. Andros was the largest subscriber, but before the new edifice was ready for use, trouble came thick upon him. In England, James II had put down all Protestantism with a heavy hand, and the Non-conformists suffered death, imprisonment and torture.

Then came the English Revolution, and the ascension of William and Mary. News of these things coming to New England, the Boston people proceeded to have a little revolution of their own. They took the day of a "weekly lecture," when the coming of many people to town would not attract attention especially, and assembled, —many Church people among them,—to put down Andros. The Governor fled to the fort, but was seized and imprisoned, amid general rejoicings. His downfall was a blow to the temporal prosperity of the little church building which had just been erected with so much pains and pride, and the Church people generally had much to bear. It is witness to the Christian courtesy of the Rector that he was treated with considerable consideration, though his ministrations were greatly hindered by the insurrectionists. The saddest instance was in the case of a devoted communicant whose funeral was interrupted at the grave, the Puritans not permitting burial in the consecrated ground set apart for it. The Church, a little wooden affair, on an exposed corner, was defaced and degraded in every way that any mischevious person pleased. Still the faithful priest kept on for three years longer, when he broke down, and was obliged for that and other reasons to return to England. There was a young student, one Samuel Myles, who had left the Puritans and prepared for Orders. He was probably in Deacon's Orders by this time, so the Rector waited long enough to give the people the Holy Communion, on Trinity Sunday, 1686, and then went to England. After awhile, a governor came over who was a Churchman, and the Church flourished in Boston. All sorts of furniture, cushions, prayer books, and so forth, were provided; the most handsome were ordered by Queen Mary, and sent by the King, after her death, as well as a massive set of Communion silver. Just to conclude the story of this interesting church, we have to tell, that at some later time, just before the Revolution, it was entirely rebuilt of stone. It was closed during the War, and after that its congregation took up Unitarianism, and separated from the Church, but retaining their building; and the Unitarians have had it ever since. William Price, who died in 1780, founded a lecture course, the lectures, six in number, chiefly on Church topics, such as "The Value and Necessity of Fasting," were undertaken later by Trinity Church, Boston.

GRADUAL:—Out of Sion hath God appeared in perfect beauty; Our God shall come manifestly. Gather my Saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me with sacrifice. Alleluia. Alleluia.

The powers of the heaven shall be shaken; and then shall they see the Son of Man coming in a cloud with power and great glory. Alleluia.

Third Sunday in Advent.

INTROIT:—Rejoice in the Lord alway and again I say rejoice; let your moderation be known unto all men; the Lord is at hand; be careful for nothing, but in everything by prayer let your requests be made known unto God.

And the peace of God which passeth all understanding shall keep your hearts and minds.

Glory be, etc.

(Repeat antiphon.)

GRADUAL:—Show Thyself, O Lord, Thou that sittest upon the Cherubim; stir up Thy strength and come.

Hear, O Thou Shepherd of Israel, that leadest Joseph like a sheep. Alleluia. Alleluia.

Stir up Thy Strength and come and save us Alleluia.

Fourth Sunday in Advent.

INTROIT:—Remember us, O Lord, according to the favor that Thou bearest unto Thy people; O visit us with Thy salvation, that we may see the felicity of Thy Chosen; and rejoice in the gladness of Thy people and give thanks with Thine inheritance.

We have sinned with our fathers; we have done amiss and dealt wickedly.

Glory be, etc.

(Repeat antiphon.)

GRADUAL:—The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon Him; Yea all such as call upon Him faithfully.

My mouth shall speak the praise of the Lord, and let all flesh give thanks unto His Holy Name, Alleluia, Alleluia.

Come, O Lord, and tarry not; release Thy people Israel from their sins. Alleluia.

Christmas Day.

INTROIT:—Unto us a Child is born; unto us a Son is given; and the government shall be upon His shoulders and His name shall be called Wonderful Counsellor.

O, sing unto the Lord a new song, for He hath done marvellous things.

Glory be, etc.

(Repeat antiphon.)

GRADUAL:—All the ends of the earth have sung the salvation of our God; Show yourselves joyful unto the Lord all ye lands.

The Lord declared His salvation; His righteousness hath He openly showed in the sight of the heathen. Alleluia. Alleluia.

A hallowed day hath enlightened us; come ye Gentiles and worship the Lord, for this day a great light hath come down upon the earth. Alleluia.

MASTERS IN THIS HALL.

To Bethl'em did they go, these shepherds three;
To Bethl'em did they go, to see whe'r it were so or no,
Whether Christ were born or no
To set men free.

Masters, in this hall,
Hear ye news to-day
Brought over sea,
And ever you I pray,

Nowell! Nowell! Nowell!
Sing we clear!
Holpen are all folk on earth,
Born is God's Son so dear.

Going over the hills
Through the milk-white snow,
Heard I ewes bleat
While the wind did blow.
Nowell, etc.

Shepherds many a one
Sat among the sheep;
No man spake more word
Than they had been asleep.
Nowell, etc.

Quoth I, "Fellows mine,
Why this guise sit ye?
Making but dull cheer,
Shepherds though we be?
Nowell, etc.

"Shepherds should of right
Leap and dance and sing;
Thus to see ye sit
Is a right strange thing."
Nowell, etc.

Quoth these fellows then,
"To Bethl'em town we go,
To see a mighty Lord
Lie in a manger low."
Nowell, etc.

"How name ye this Lord, Shepherds?" then said I.
"Very God," they said,
"Come from heaven high."
Nowell, etc.

Then to Bethle'm town
We went two and two,
In a sorry place
Heard the oxen low.
Nowell, etc.

Therein did we see
A sweet and goodly May,
And a fair old man,
Upon the straw she lay.
Nowell, etc.

And a little Child
On her arm had she:
"Wot ye who this is?"
Said the hinds to me.
Nowell, etc.

Ox and ass Him know,
Kneeling on their knee:
Wondrous joy had I
This little babe to see.
Nowell, etc.

This is Christ the Lord,
Masters be ye glad Christmas is come in,
And no folk should be sad.
Nowell, etc.

PARISH NOTES.

The annual dinner of St. Vincent's Guild will be held in the Clergy house on Wednesday evening, January 18.

The Rt. Rev. W. W. Webb, Bishop of Milwaukee, is expected to preach at S. Clement's on Sunday, January 1, at the Solemn Mass.

The Crèche has been placed in the Church this year at the head of the South aisle. It has received an addition in the shape of three camels and their attendants, and three sheep. These were presented by a friend of the parish and reached us from France the latter part of November.

A Missionary Meeting, under the auspices of S. Clement's Branch of the Girls' Friendly Society, will be held in the Parish Hall, on Tuesday Evening, January 10th, at eight o'clock. The speakers will be the Rt. Rev. W. W. Webb, Bishop of Milwaukee, and Dr. Mary V. Glenton, of the Chinese Mission.

The first meeting of S. Clement's branch of the Women's Auxiliary for the season was held in the parish on Wednesday, December 7. The same officers were appointed as last year, and the following were added to the special committees. To the foreign committee Miss Connelly and Mrs. Chas. Joline; Committee on Colored Work, Mrs. Decatur Smith. It was voted to send envelopes to every woman in the parish asking for contributions to the work of the Auxiliary.

The annual missionary offering will be taken on the second Sunday in February. It is hoped that each member of the parish will contribute something to the general apportionment, and let the contribution be as generous as possible. Amounts may be "designated." That is, if any person is interested in any one portion of the mission he may signify that the contribution be sent to that special work. We should make our missionary offering this year larger than ever before, that S. Clement's may take its place among those parishes that care enough for the spread of the Gospel to give to the support of the men and women who have pledged themselves to work in the mission field. Let us not be selfish.

THE EPIPHANY.

Three Manifestations.

Three great manifestations of our Saviour are commemorated on this festival, all of which Saint Chrysostom says happened on the same day, though not in the same year.

(1) The first was His Manifestation by a star which conducted the wise men to come and worship Him. They were no sooner informed by the apparition of this extraordinary star of the birth of the Great King Who was to rule the world, but they set out to seek Him in Judea, where they understood, by ancient tradition and by the prophecy of Balaam, He should be born; and, as it was natural for them to expect to hear of Him in the capital city, they went thither to inquire after Him; but as His Kingdom was not of this world, He chose for His birth the humble stable of Bethlehem before any palaces of Jerusalem. To Bethlehem they were directed by the priests and scribes, who, however, while directing others to the Saviour, took no pains to seek Him themselves. The Wise men on their way were again favored by the sight of the star, which went before them and pointed out to them the place where our Saviour was. This heavenly light filled their hearts with exceeding great joy; and going in they found Him Whom their souls desired, and they paid their homage to Him. Happy are they who follow the example of these Wise men. Let us imitate them in their ready compliance with the Divine call, in their diligence in inquiring after Christ, in their perseverance through all difficulties, then we may confidently expect, like them, to find our Lord, and to rejoice in Him.

(2) The second Manifestation was that of Christ as the Son of God at His Baptism. When a multitude of Publicans and sinners resorted to John and were baptized by him in Jordan, confessing their sins, our Lord also came among them as if He had been one of their number and stood in need of the Baptism of repentance. The Baptist was astonished at the humility of the Lamb of God, Who came to take away the sin of the world, and yet here associated Himself with sinners and was willing to pass for one. He refused to baptize Him, but Jesus insisted, saying "Thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." And He Who thus humbled Himself to fulfill all righteousness was presently exalted by His Heavenly Father, to teach us that humility opens Heaven, and conducts us to God and to all good; for lo! the Heavens opened and the Holy Ghost descended upon Him like a dove, and there came a Voice from Heaven, saying "Thou art my beloved Son, in Whom I am well pleased." Then did the Son descend into the waters, to sanctify them for Sacramental purposes, making the element of water to be to us the laver of regeneration.

(3) The third Manifestation was in Cana of Galilee, where Christ turned water into wine, and His disciples (astonished at His power) believed on Him. By this miracle we are reminded, that the pleasures of this world often fail us, when we expect the most from them. It is Jesus alone Who can furnish our immortal souls with the true that cheereth the heart of man; it is His love alone can present us with pure delights, which bring with them joy and peace and a certain foretaste of Heaven. He often changes, for His friends, the waters of the "brook by the way" into "good wine," by the consolations He gives them in their labors and afflictions. But the miraculous change made by our Lord on this day typified another and more momentous change which He made (by His ministers) even to the end of the world, of bread and wine into His own Body and Blood. With this wonderful miracle He daily honors the Wedding Feast of His Espousals with our souls. The corporeal food we take is (by means of our natural heat) daily changed into our flesh and blood; but this Spiritual Food, like fire which changes all things into itself, is not changed into our subtsance, but changes and transforms our souls into His own nature, to make us one with Him the Bread of Life, here by grace, hereafter by glory. Let us be thankful for all the wonders which the Son of God has wrought and continues daily to work for us. But particularly let us join with the Church in this Festival, in celebrating with love and gratitude these three Manifestations which were the forerunners of all our good. (1) In His Manifestation to the Wise men is revealed our vocation to the true faith. (2) By His Baptism in Jordan we are promised regeneration in Him in Baptism. (3) His changing water to wine at the marriage feast prefigures our admission to His Heavenly Feast in the Blessed Eucharist.—Rt. Rev. R. Challoner.

LETTER FROM ONEIDA.

From One of the Sisters of the Holy Nativity.

It is regular country; no modern conveniences and the nearest market eight miles away, and that a poor one. The good one is ten miles. We have just had a wedding; this time a great six-foot Sioux, a grandson of old Sitting Bull, who came a-wooing one of our Oneida maidens. Our maid, of course, is a Christian, and although she has been away at school and working for several years, she has not been weaned from the Church, and insisted on being married in Church. The Sioux "Strong Heart" was unbaptised and of course the missionary refused to marry them until he was baptised, so he thought about it for awhile and returned last Saturday saying he was ready for baptism if Fr. Thorne would receive and then marry him to our Leah. So on Monday at 2 p. m. James William Strongheart was baptised and at 2.30 married. The bride and her attendants always come here for the Sisters to put on their veils. Strongheart came along too and as Sister Lillian veiled the bride and I, the bridesmaids, Leah asked me to put on Strongheart's boutonniere and I had to make him sit down in order to reach. I made the maids adorn the ushers.

The romance of the work is all gone now. Our Indians are all civilized and have received their rights as citizens and Oneida is no longer a reservation, but a township. I am sorry they have been admitted citizens, because as a whole, they are not ready for it, and I fear the white man is going to crowd in and spoil the dear simple people.

House of the Holy Nativity, Oneida, Wis.

Oneida has become a township and our Indians are confronted by the same problems that are before the white man.

The educational question has been settled by the introduction of district schools, several of which will be established at no distant day.

The more difficult liquor problem excited much discussion. No liquor has ever been allowed to be sold on the Reservation, and the question as to whether license should be granted was bravely settled by a vote of 18 yeas to 89 nays. The Indians do not want the saloon.

The Bishop came in August, as usual, for Confirmation, and a class of forty-seven was presented. Some of our hymns have been translated into the Oneida language, and one of these is always sung at the service. On this occasion they sang the Te Deum, which has also been translated.

When the Indians sing in English, it is just good ordinary singing; but when they use their own language, which is soft and lends itself naturally to music, the result is glorious, and at the same time so pathetic that tears come to one's eyes.

I will not weary you with a description of the festivities which follow the Church service, but just ask you to imagine a gathering of about six hundred Indians spending the day in merry making. Your imagination may fancy an accompaniment of loud shouts, boisterous laughter and sometimes quarreling; but not a sound of any thing of the kind was to be heard. They had a good time and enjoyed the day immensely, but their voices were low and refined and wherever one heard laughter it was gentle and sweet.

There is nothing that strikes the visitor to our Oneida Indians more than this; their quiet, gentle, refined way of enjoying themselves.—From the Associate Chronicle.

THE HOSPITAL OF THE RESURRECTION OF HOPE.

IMPRESSIONS.

"Through the Shadow of an Agony Cometh Redemption."

Just outside the City of Kumamoto, on a little green hill, stands a group of buildings within a tall hedge.

Pass up the path and within the wide entrance gate.

A sense of peace and order will come to you as you look around. The walls of the low-storied houses are white, the roofs covered with curved grey tiles, a deep protecting porch shades the front door, pretty shrubs and trees meet the eye. What is this pleasant place? It is the home of the lepers.

Here more than fifty of these saddest of beings are gathered in, from all parts of Japan, and their lives are made full of interest and gladness.

They "find themselves" again as human beings, after having believed that, because they were lepers, they were "cursed of the gods" and without souls.

Who can wonder that if left to themselves they either try to end their wretchedness by suicide, or else sink into deep degradation?

Resignation and happiness are the characteristics of the dwellers in this Hospital and Home combined.

Each individual is thoughtfully considered and cared for according to his special need, and each finds scope for some special form of usefulness and of service for others.

The lepers are encouraged to make the best of themselves; they all try to dress neatly for each other's sake.

One woman is clever at hair dressing; she arranges the coiffure of others as prettily as she can, in the way so dear to the Japanese heart. Often the dread disease attacks the hair, but even then the best possible is made of it.

The men, too, help each other to dress and shave, literally supplying as fellow-members the lack of lost hand or foot; thus all live together as a self-respecting community, in charity and sympathy.

Entering by the big front door we notice first the spotless cleanliness of the floor matting and the perfect neatness everywhere. A delightful little dispensary is beyond the waiting room, looking very businesslike. Here the patients come to a side door to receive their medicine.

Here, too, people come creeping up after dark, to ask advice from the kind and clever resident doctor—perhaps in mortal terror to enquire whether the awful plague is manifesting itself in them.

A bright young medical student is in charge of the dispensary. He is gaining his experience, and studying up for his examination.

We pass on to see the kitchens and outhouses, all with special arrangement to avoid infection.

The greatest interest, however, centers in the wards, so let us go on there, through the gardens, which show promise of beauty when the spring comes.

The pergolas of vines are a special interest to the patients, some of whom are great at gardening, and some looking after poultry. Both vegetables and fowls were worked at a good rate of profit to the Hospital last year.

The wards are designed on the model of a Japanese one-storied house. They are built in two blocks, those for the men in one part of the compound and those for women in another. How homely and pleasant each little set of habitations looks.

Four patients only are in each ward. By this arrangement each can have their sleeping mats in their own corner, and their cupboards to contain special treasures. A low table in the center serves for simple meals and each has his own table for reading and writing. As we draw near, the sliding shutters which form one whole side of the ward fly open and the four inmates appear. They make low bows, touching their heads to the floor.

How glad they are to welcome Miss Riddell again after a long absence from Japan. Each patient has something to show or tell.

One young man produces a photograph taken of the chrysanthemums they had been growing in December. Another very clever man, who was formerly a University student, brings out two really beautiful large maps that he has drawn, one of Palestine, the other of the Mediterranean sea, with St. Paul's journey traced on it.

Sometimes, though, it is a pitiful affliction that we see. A poor leg, with the foot absolutely gone as far as the ankle; a poor hand, swollen and distorted beyond words. Even then these "Brave Poor Things" smile and make the best of their condition.

In the women's quarter a poor soul is lying who has been attacked internally by the disease. Day and night a terrible and distressing hiccough never ceases. She is very weak, but raises herself "little" on her "futons" to give the best bow she can and a welcoming look.

One patient has recently died; his place is at once filled by a lad of fourteen, sent through a missionary. The boy's age is a hopeful one for alleviation, but he is a very bad case.

Quite away in another part of the grounds are the isolation ward and the mortuary. In the latter stands in its case the ashes of the patient who has been so lately delivered from the "body of his humiliation," and gone with joy in Christ to find the fulfillment of hope.

The ashes are waiting to see whether the relations who could not acknowledge the leper while he lived may yet be glad to have the remains for their own funeral rites.

If not, they must be laid in a Buddhist graveyard, where they will almost certainly be desecrated, partly because they are Christian, but mostly because they are leper.

The very great need now for the Hospital is a little Church and a piece of holy ground by it, for God's Acre.

Will any reader, who perhaps has his own dear ones laid to rest in some loved corner of the earth, be moved to give for this sacred purpose? It would be a great witness to the faith to those Japanese who come to see the Hospital.

At present a large room serves as centre of the community life, but it has to be used both for worship and for other purposes. This room is a happy and pleasant place, but of course it is not really suitable for the services of the Church. Here the Christmas party was held.

How delightful it was to see the real enjoyment of the leper men and women and the leper boys and girls. They loved their presents of every kind, but the dolls were the first favorites with all. To hear their merry laughter over some selections on the graphophone did the heart good.

Here too they assemble for quiet, earnest prayer meetings, and here the Sunday services are held, under the ministry of the very able Japanese clergyman who is the chaplain of the Hospital.

It is very touching to hear the leper voices join in some familiar English hymn. How full of meaning those words must be to them—

"Nearer my God to Thee;
E'en though it be a cross
That raiseth me."

For many of them life is truly a crucifixion, but now to many of them it has become a martyrdom with Christ, and they enter into the life of peace and gladness which that means, in a way, perhaps, that others whose cross of suffering is not so heavy, can hardly imagine.

Nearly all of the fifty-two lepers who are now in the Hospital are earnest believers in the Christian faith, daring to believe in the love of God Incarnate, through the human love manifested to them there.

How beautiful it is to feel that such work is being carried on in His Name, Who was so tender in His compassion for lepers.

We came away from our visit to the House of Hope not sad, but very glad. May all who are helping in this work of direct ministry to some of the most forlorn of mankind, by their prayers, their gifts, their money, their sympathy, receive a blessing from the God of Hope.

PARISH NOTES.

Candles will be blessed as usual on the Feast of the Purification at the 7 o'clock mass.

Bishop Whitaker has appointed the evening of April 25 as the date for our episcopal visitation. The Bishop of Wyoming is expected to administer the sacrament of Confirmation at that time. Classes for instruction will be formed at once. The girls will meet Sister Catharine Angela at the Mission House on Thursday afternoons after school and the women on Tuesday afternoons at 4. Any who may be unable to join this class will have a special appointment made for them. The boys will meet the rector on Fridays at 5 o'clock. The clergy will be very glad to receive the names of those who are unconfirmed, but who may be anticipating it.

A very beautiful processional crucifix has been presented to the parish for use at guild services and at funerals. The design is by the Gorham Company, and is executed in hammered bronze. The halo about the head of the figure is of brass, which relieves the severity of the whole. The inscription reads, "To the Glory of God and in loving memory of Stephen Decatur Smith, Jr., who entered into life eternal December 17, 1909."

The parish retreat will be held on Shrove Tuesday. Addresses at 10, 12 and 3 o'clock. A light lunch will be served in the parish hall at 1 o'clock. Those desiring refreshment are asked to send their names to Sister Catharine Angela, 2016 Race street.

The missionary meeting held under the auspices of the Girls' Friendly Society in the parish hall on the evening of Tuesday, January 10, was exceedingly interesting, although the attendance was small. This was a disappointment, as only two of the several parishes that had accepted our invitation "with pleasure" sent representatives. The evening was much enjoyed by those who had the privilage of being present. Dr. Glenton gave an interesting account of her work in the hospital at Wuchang, China, and Bishop Webb, who has something to say always, spoke of the work of the Church in his diocese of Milwaukee. He spoke of the great need of proper linen for the Altar in some of the poorer mission stations, and asked that corporals and purificators might be included in the articles sent to the Middle West in missionary boxes.

During Lent there will be service of intercession every weekday afternoon at quarter of 5, in the Church. This seems to be a more convenient hour for the majority of persons than at noon. It is hoped that a great many of our people may avail themselves of the opportunity of joining with the clergy in this charitable work. We had an encouraging number last Lent, but there should be many more who are willing to give fifteen minutes daily in praying for others. It is also hoped that the men of the parish may at least make an effort to be present once a week, if not oftener. It will be a great assistance to the clergy if the members of the congregation will send names and subjects for intercession. Last year many were heard to say that the Lenten season had been particularly helpful. This was of course due to the many prayers that were offered to God daily in the Church. Prayer is an essential in the life of every Christian soul. If we were more earnest about it we would be far happier and would find greater strength to fight the battle against sin, the world and the devil.

CHRISTMAS TIDE.

The Christmas festival brought real joy to many hearts. In many other parishes than our own there seems to have been a more intense appreciation of the meaning of the festival than has been the case in many years. The number of communions at St. Clement's was slightly in excess of last year, which is always an encouragement, and many confessions were heard in preparation for the feast. The solemn mass on Christmas day was well attended, the choir, under the direction of Mr. Hall, rendering Cruickshank's Mass, with the Kyrie and Sanctus from Gounod's S. Cecilia.

The Sunday School festival was held on Holy Innocents' night. A brief service was held in the Chapel at 8 o'clock, followed by a play in the parish hall, after which the presents and candy were distributed. Incidentally it may be said that the number of pupils in the Sunday School is increasing, and that a new interest seems to be manifest in the children.

On Saturday in Christmas week two guilds held their Christmas parties. S. Nicholas' Guild met in the gymnasium at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and after the gifts had been presented and ice cream and cake disposed of the entire Guild accepted the invitation of the Guild of the Holy Child to be present at the mystery play to be given in parish hall at 3 o'clock. The play, which was exceedingly well rendered by the members of the Holy Child Guild, was composed and directed by Miss Rogers, and was an unqualified success. After the play the boys were dismissed, but the young ladies remained for their feast. The crucifix given each year in "memory of Eleanor," was won by Edith Boyle. It is given to the Guild member who is most faithful in her Guild duties for a year.

The turkey supper was given on Thursday in the octave. A larger number were present than in any previous years, and the evening was thoroughly enjoyed by every one.

The Guild of S. Mary celebrated its festival on the 5th of January. The office was sung in S. John's Chapel by Fr. Underhill, and then all adjourned to the parish hall, where ice cream and cake was served and the Guild of the Holy Child repeated the mystery play. Mr. Woidill very kindly brought his graphophone with some excellent new records, and his selections were very much appreciated.

The feast of the Guild of S. Katherine was postponed until the Monday in the octave of the Epiphany. The office was sung by the chaplain and the evening spent in merrymaking.

Altogether, the Christmas season has proved most happy for every one.

SOME MESSENGERS AND WHERE THEY WENT—XVI.

Church people had a hard time in Connecticut, where the Puritans were strong. There was a brave little effort made by some Churchmen, in 1664, for a share of that "religious liberty" for which they were supposed to have left their home in England. William Pitkin and six others petitioned the General Assembly, asking that they might be relieved from "paying for the support of ministers who neglected their spiritual needs." No attention was paid to it, however, and no influence was strong enough to do anything till nearly forty years after. One memorable Sunday, the Fifteenth after Trinity, 1702, the Revs. Keith and Talbot, in the course of their missionary tour through New England, held services at New London.

The people at Stratford finally applied to the rector of Trinity Church, New York, for some sort of care, in 1705. The distance was considered too great, but the matter was referred to the Rev. George Muirson, of Rye, and he gladly attended to it. The state of things may be realized from the fact that with the clergyman went that same zealous Col. Heathcote, of New York province, whose zeal for the Church has already been noticed, and he went "fully armed." The town authorities would not grant the use of the meeting house, so the Church people met where they could. Many of the Puritans were greatly surprised at the beauty and simplicity of the services, as they straggled in from curiosity or to spy on their neighbors, and the feeling of friendliness shown in their comments alarmed the town authorities. There were twenty-four baptisms, chiefly adults, at the first visit.

The second time a few more were baptized, and then preparations were made for a communion. The night before this service, one of the council, accompanied by a justice of the peace, called on Col. Heathcote and the clergyman, and read a formal protest against the Church services as illegal. The next day, one of these gentlemen stood in the street and paid a number of persons to help him in declaring to the people, as they went, that they would have to pay a fine of five pounds each.

One of the leading men of the place was the Independent minister, Mr. Reed. He inclined so strongly toward the Church that he was deposed. Had it been possible, he would have gone to England for ordination, but this was not possible. He was succeeded by the Rev. Timothy Cutler, who became a yet stronger champion of the Church. Finally, when president of Yale College, sacrificing position and friends to his convictions, and publicly declaring his belief in the necessity of Episcopal ordination.

At the third visitation, the parish of Christ Church, Stratford, was organized, church wardens and vestrymen being chosen.

The Rev. Evan Evans, of Philadelphia, who was about to return to England, visited Stratford with its missionary, and reported the state of things:

"Though every Churchman in that colony pays his rate for building and repairing their meeting houses, yet they deny us the use of them, though on week-days. They are so bold that they spare not to speak reproachfully and with great contempt of our Church. * * * I beg that proper remedies may be taken for remedying the evils that are among them, and that our Churchmen in that colony * * * may obtain a liberty of conscience, and call a minister of their own communion, and that they may be freed from paying to their ministers, and may be enabled to obtain one of their own."

The death of Rev. Muirson, in 1708, was a blow to the struggling Church. It seemed to the people of Stratford, when at last they obained their own clergyman, in 1712, that their troubles were over. Bitterly were they disappointed at first; the rough, discouraging position of the new parish received no sympathy and but little help from its first incumbent. He spent most of his time in New York, and resigned in less than four months, to the derision of the Puritans. This state of things did not last, however. After the long, tiresome waiting, Trinity Sunday, 1722, the Rev. George Pigot took charge, and the homesick Church people had a priest. There was work, and a great crisis, waiting for him; there were over thirty baptisms in a few weeks, and thirty were prepared for Holy Communion. But the most important event was his conference with the president and some of the faculty of Yale College, who had long been studying the Prayer book—indeed, one or two of them had made use of it in their ministrations—and were only waiting for a clergyman of the Church who could answer their questions and advise them.

On their return from England, the Rev. Timothy Cutler found his work in Boston. The Rev. Samuel Johnson, whose copy of the Prayer book, the gift of an old friend, had started him Churchward, took charge at Stratford, where he officiated on Christmas Day, 1723, for the first time in the new church building—the only one in the colony.

He was a learned man, and wrote able treatises in reply to the attacks upon the Church. The degree of Doctor of Divinity was bestowed upon him by Oxford, and his friends on both sides of the ocean were the ablest men of the time. The clergy of Connecticut looked up to him for advice, and he personally attended his flock in their sufferings for conscience' sake. One of his letters says:

"Feb. 10th, 1727.—I have just come from Fairfield, where I have been to visit a considerable number of my people, in prison for their rates to the dissenting minister, to comfort and encourage them under their sufferings."

The Church's influence grew in spite of persecution, so alarming the Puritans that, in 1723, they selected a very popular young Independent minister, John Beach, and sent him to Newtown and the adjacent region, to uphold and encourage the opposition to the Church. He was very acceptable, not only to his own flock, but to many who were inclining Churchward; the delay caused by sending to England for a clergyman cooled the ardor of many Church members, and for a time Mr. Beach carried all before him. But difference of faith had not cooled his love and admiration for his old tutor, and the frank discussion of their differences led to conviction. In 1732 John Beach made his Easter Communion in Stratford church; a little later he went to England to be ordained, and returned, to make a record for himself as a pioneer of the Church in Connecticut. It was a great disappointment to him that he was not able to do much missionary work among the native Indian tribes. This was tried faithfully by others as well; but as a matter of fact, many or most of the northern Indian tribes spoke French, and had been reached by the early Jesuits; there were many of them who had travelled long distances to Canadian towns every year, back to the French priests who had baptized them; and added to this was the feeling still lingering of prejudice against the English. Rev. Mr. Beach did his best for them, at the risk of his life, on several occasions, but was obliged to desist. One thing he did do, however; a few of the Northern people owned slaves. These he ministered to, teaching and baptizing them.

Some work of this kind was done, however, in the southern parts of New England. Dr. Johnson carried on a work among the negroes and Indians during the summer months, having between seventy and eighty in attendance, among them a few communicants. At Narragansett and Newport were still larger classes; in fact, the king of the Narragansetts, George Ninigrett, made over to the Church about forty acres of land, to be used for the benefit of the clergy.

We have seen how our dear Church, among difficulties of every sort, became firmly planted in the New World, God in His goodness raising up defenders from among the very midst of her enemies, and supplying the needs left by indifferent and neglectful rulers, roused the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel to great and still greater deeds of love. In another article, we will try to get a general idea of the position of the Church throughout the Colonies, and its hold on the people through the trying period of the Revolution, and its final organization into the Church in America. And then we will go on learning about our own Messengers; for as soon as the Church began to grow, its missionary work began. Say, rather, it began to grow as soon as its missionary work began. It is good for us to realize these things. We find so much undone, and forget that the full-grown man must have more work than the infant. Comparing our times with those of our fathers, may the God of our fathers help us to realize that what He is showing us now is what He showed them—not heavier tasks, but greater opportunities.

INTROITS AND GRADUALS FOR FEBRUARY.

Fifth Sunday after Epiphany.

INTROIT:—Thou art my defense and shield, O God, and my trust is in Thy Word; Away from me ye wicked; I will keep the commandments of my God.

Psalm. Blessed are those that are undefiled in the way: and walk in the law of the Lord.

Glory, etc.

GRADUAL:—Truly God is loving unto Israel, even unto such as are of a clean heart: nevertheless my feet were almost gone, my treadings had well nigh slipped.

And why? I was grieved at the wicked; I do also see the ungodly in such prosperity; Fret not thyself because of the ungodly, Neither be thou envious against the evildoers; for they shall soon be cut down like the grass; Alleluia, Alleluia.

Yet a little while and the ungodly shall be clean gone: But the meek spirited shall possess the earth and shall be refreshed in the multitude of peace. Alleluia.

Septuagesima Sunday.

INTROITS—The sorrows of death compassed me: the pains of hell came about me: in my trouble I called upon the Lord, and He heard my voice out of His holy temple.

Psalm. I will love Thee O Lord my Strength; the Lord is my Stony Rock, my Defense and my Saviour.

Glory, etc.

GRADUAL:—The Lord will be a refuge in due time of trouble, and they that know Thy Name will put their trust in Thee; For Thou Lord hast never failed them that seek Thee. For the poor shall not always be forgotten and the patient abiding of the meek shall not perish forever. Up Lord, let not man have the upper hand.

Tract. Out of the deep have I called unto Thee O Lord; Lord hear my voice: O let Thine ears consider well: the voice of my complaint.

If Thou, Lord, will be extreme to mark what is done amiss; O Lord who may abide it.

For there is mercy with Thee; therefore shalt Thou be feared.

Sexagesima Sunday.

INTROIT:—Up Lord, why sleepest Thou, awake and be not absent from us forever, wherefore hidest Thou Thy face and forgettest our misery and trouble. Our belly cleaveth unto the ground; Arise and help us O Lord and deliver us for Thy mercy's sake.

Psalm. We have heard with our ears O God and our fathers have told us: what Thou hast done in their time of old.

O my God make them like a wheel; and as the stubble before the wind.

Tract. Thou hast moved the land O God and divided it; Heal Thou the sores thereof: for it shaketh.

That they may triumph because of the truth; that Thy Beloved may be delivered.

Quinquagesima Sunday.

INTROIT:—Be Thou my strong rock O Lord and house of defense, that Thou mayest save me; for Thou art my strong rock and my castle, be Thou also my guide and lead me forth for Thy Name's sake.

Psalm. In Thee O Lord have I put my trust: let me never be put to confusion, deliver me in Thy righteousness.

Glory, etc.

(Repeat antiphon.)

GRADUAL:—Thou art the God that doest wonders; and that hast declared Thy power among the people.

Thou hast mightily delivered Thy people; even the sons of Jacob and Joseph.

Tract. O be joyful in the Lord all ye lands; serve the Lord with gladness.

Come before His presence with a song; be ye sure that the Lord He is God.

It is He that hath made us and not we ourselves: we are His people and the sheep of His pasture.

THE SACRIFICE OF THE WILL.

Laid on Thine Altar, O my Lord Divine
Accept my will this day, for Jesus' sake.
I have no jewels to adorn Thy shrine—
Nor any world proud sacrifice to make;
But here I bring, within my trembling hand,
This will of mine—a thing that seemeth small—
And Thou alone, O God canst understand
How, when I yield Thee this, I yield mine all!

Hidden therein, Thy searching gaze can see Struggles of passion—visions of delight—
All that I love, and am and fain would be,
Deep loves, fond hopes, and longings infinite.
It hath been wet with tears and dimmed with sighs,
Clenched in my grasp, till beauty it hath none—
Now, from Thy footstool where it vanquished lies,
The prayer ascendeth, "May Thy will be done."

Take it, O Father, ere my courage fail,
And merge it so in Thine own will, that e'en
If, in some desperate hour, my cries prevail,
And Thou give back my will, it may have been
So changed, so purified, so fair have grown,
So one with Thee, so filled with peace divine,
I may not see, nor know it as my own,
But gaining my will, I may find it Thine.

Sir Morell Mackenzie, Surgeon to the late Emperor Frederick of Germany, wrote of the celebrated Charles Lunn; "He is a worthy representative of what I believe not only to be the best, but the only method of training the singing voice."

PARISH NOTES.

Ashes will be blessed as usual at 6.30 on Ash Wednesday, and imposed before each mass.

The choir boys, with Fr. Quin and Mr. Hall, recently attended the lecture on "Hunting With Roosevelt."

The men of the choir dined at the clergy house on the evening of February, and then enjoyed a performance of "The Country Boy" at the Walnut Street Theater.

The annual dinner of the Guild of St. Vincent was postponed from January 18 to the 24th. Twenty sat down to the banquet and the evening was spent in the parish building with games, music and dancing.

Requiems were said at St. Clement's for Bishop Whitaker on the day of burial at 6.45, 7 and 7.30, and a Solemn Mass of Requiem was sung at 10 o'clock. The Sacred Ministers were Fr. Hutchinson, celebrant; Fr. Quin, deacon, and Fr. Underhill, sub-deacon.

The women of the parish will meet as usual every Friday during Lent for the missionary sewing. Any one who may be willing and able to give the time will be cordially welcome. A much needed and very substantial chest of drawers has been purchased for the use of the Society, and has been placed in the work room in the parish building.

At the January meeting of St. Clement's Branch of the Auxiliary, Mrs. Walter Penrose was made treasurer and Miss Emily Wood secretary. The February meeting was largely attended, and it is hoped that succeeding ones will be equally so. Every woman of the parish is a member of the Auxiliary, and needs no special invitation to come to the meetings. A branch of the Junior Auxiliary is to be started in St. Clement's under the leadership of Miss Geordie Joline.

WEEKLY ENVELOPES.

The envelopes for the ensuing year will be ready on the 12th of March. The fiscal year of the parish ends on Lady Day, March 25. It is hoped that many who have not taken envelopes heretofore will do so this year.

With the weekly envelopes will be issued also a monthly envelope, to be used for the missionary contribution. Money given in this way will apply on our apportionment to the Board of Missions, and if each person does his duty and contributes what he is able to afford it may prove possible to do away with the special collection which is taken each year. We who have so many blessings at St. Clement's ought to be eager to make the same privileges possible for others.

THE MISSIONARY OFFERING.

The missionary offering this year was larger than we have ever taken before at St. Clement's for general missions. This is an encouragement, as it shows a real growth in piety and devotion to our Blessed Lord. At the same time, we shall have to increase our offerings very substantially before we reach the amount which is asked from us by the Church. The suggested amount to be given by St. Clement's is $2,000. All offerings, whether from the Sunday School, Woman's Auxiliary or individual gifts sent through the parish help to make up the sum. Our offering on February 12 was as follows:

DOMESTIC.

Salary for Bishop Griswold	$333.62
Special for priest's salary for Bishop Griswold	85.00

FOREIGN.

Salary for Father Wood	276.38
Work of Father Cooper	1.00
	$746.00

A quiet day for Associates of the Girls' Friendly Society and other women will be held at St. Clement's Church, Twentieth and Cherry streets, Philadelphia, on Thursday, March 9, 1911, to be conducted by the Rev. Shirley C. Hughson, O. H. C.

Holy Communion, 8 A. M.; Breakfast, 8.45 A. M.; Matins, 9.15 P. M.; address, 10 A. M.; intercession and instruction, 12 M.; lunch, 1 P. M.; address, 2.30 P. M.; address, 4 P. M.; Evensong, 5 P. M.

It is hoped that those attending may be able to remain throughout the day. There will be a collection for the expenses. Those desiring breakfast or lunch are requested to send their names to Miss Neilson, 325 South Twelfth street, before Tuesday, March 7.

OZI WILLIAM WHITAKER.

The death of Bishop Whitaker brings to the people of S. Clement's a keen sense of personal loss. He has been in the truest sense the friend of the parish ever since his coming into the Diocese, over twenty years ago. Of a type of churchmanship which differed from our own in its outward expression, he was nevertheless sympathetic in his relations with S. Clement's, and always nobly honest and straightforward. A man of intense conviction himself, he was singularly gifted in his ability to discern both sides of any question and quick to recognize sincerity and devotion to principle under whatever guise.

S. Clement's received the most generous and fatherly treatment at his hands. He was never too busy to give careful consideration to any matter proposed to him. Whether it was the licensing of our special service for S. Clement's day, the granting of a dispensation for a fast, the appointment for a special Confirmation, or his advice on a question of Canon law, his response was always prompt, courteous and kind, and he knew and appreciated the loyalty and affection of clergy and people.

"They are a praying people at S. Clement's," he said on one occasion. Let us then justify his estimate of us by offering our intercessions for his "refreshment, light and peace" in the presence of his Lord and ours.

LENTEN READING.

The following books are suggested for reading during Lent:

The Blessed Mother—Bp. Churton.
The Church and English Society—Figgis.
The Warfare of the Soul—Hughson.
Principles of Anglicanism—Kinsman.
Christian Progress—Congreve.
The Message of the Church in Collect, Epistle and Gospel—Sanders.
The Interpretation of the Character of Christ to Non-Christian Races—Robinson.
Studies in St. Luke's Gospel—Ritchie.
The Gospel and Human Needs—Figgis.
Personality and Power—Walpole.
The Altar and the Life—Brett.

LENTEN SERVICES.

During Lent there will be an address every Thursday at 10 o'clock in the chapel, as well as a sermon every Friday night, with the Stations of the Cross. The Prayer Book Instructions will be continued on Wednesday afternoons. As noted in the last number of the Magazine, there will be a service of intercession in the church every weekday at 5.45 P. M.

The Retreat for women and girls will be held on the Second Sunday in Lent.

LENT.

Blessed are they who keep the Master's Lent,
Upon His holy Will alone intent.
Blessed the feet that choose not their own way,
Willing to tarry where He bids them stay.
Blessed the hands—they do His work the best
That meekly fold them when He bids them rest,
Nor let them think they work for Him no more
Called to a higher service than before.
The thorny path He trod for us to share,
For Him the pain and weariness to bear.
He to Whose courts they would so gladly go
Will come to them instead, and make them know
His Presence and His Peace all joys above, Clasped in His arms of Everlasting Love.

O blessed Fast, so near to Jesus spent!
O blessed Easter after such a Lent!
A Feast of joy indeed, whose heavenly light
And Allelulias sweet and blossoms bright
Shall be a foretaste of that Easter Day
When sin and sorrow shall be passed away.

ST. JOSEPH'S SCHOOL, WUCHANG.

Schools are a very important feature of our work in China.

At St. Saviour's, Wuchang, our middle school for boys is under the patronage of St. Joseph. There are about 90 boys in the school, over half of whom are "boarders," the others coming as day pupils.

On a plot of ground no larger than that on which St. Clement's stands, there is a residence for the Chinese priest, a rambling Chinese building that takes a great deal of ground space; a primary school for girls, with about 30 pupils; one for boys, with about 50 in attendance; a church; St. Saviour's House, where Father Wood lives; and a school of 90 boys, 50 of whom live in the buildings. I think this is a good recipe for noise and for big family life of the most strenuous kind.

Formerly in China boys went to school at dawn, and with two intervals for "rice," stayed at their desks all day long. There were no recesses for games and recreation, and the pupils moved about in tneir long blue gowns as gravely as men.

It is quite different at St. Joseph's. They have regular study periods and periods for exercise and play. They are cheerfully overcoming the old inertia which looked with astonishment at games and pastimes, which used to say "you foreigners have plenty of money, why do you not hire coolies to knock that ball around for you, instead of getting yourselves hot and tired at tennis?"

St. Joseph's boys play tennis and football; they have track sports and drill, and a fife and drum corps.

On rainy afternoons, and sometimes for a social evening, they come into the "monastery" and play various indoor games, stage-coach, clumps, spelling bee (which they translate, spelling battle), blind man's buff and the Virginia reel.

To sing in the choir or to serve is a much coveted honor. Music, as we know it, is unknown in China. The monks chant in the Buddhist temples, and the actors sing in a falsetto pitch. It is with great difficulty that they learn to sing in a pure tone and rhythm.

St. Saviour's Church is a remodelled Chinese dwelling. It is small and cramped, but withal homely and simple, and a Mass sung with acolytes and choristers literally crowding around has a warm and human quality that we lose in our big churches. "For us men and for our salvation," with all the fresh young life crowding around of a people, the masses of which know not God, is a message that comes home with a directness that we, with our every-day Christianity, often miss.

St. Joseph's boys come and go. After three or four years' study they go on to Boone College, or some other school. They learn to love St. Joseph's and show their loyalty in an enthusiastic alumni association. They come back at commencement time and in Boone College they hold together very closely. Confucius said, "the pupil should be reverenced." The students come and go in St. Joseph's with all the latent possibilities of the highest and best service.

God grant that each may find his place, high or low, in the service of the country, in usefulness to his fellow man and in the perfection of his manhood in Christ.

LETTER FROM VERMONT.

We are apt to feel that all the romance and hardship of the mission field are to be found in our foreign work alone. The following letter from a missionary in the Diocese of Vermont will prove interesting reading:

"It has been a howling day. The wind has blown the Stowe stage over three times, I am told, and the driver finally had to put his mail bags on the forward runners and drive in, leaving the body of the stage in the ditch. That is blowing some! Our stage from Waitsfield didn't blow over, because it had a ton of heavy baggage to hold it down. But it blew off the road sidewise time and again. My train at Middlesex was over an hour late, so I missed the connection with the northbound express at Montpelier and had to come around via St. Johnsbury, 165 miles, to get home. When I get there tomorrow I'll be just twenty-five miles from where I started, having changed cars three times and been out all night.

"I left home last Thursday, and have been in the heart of the big mountains ever since. If you remember the stories of the poor whites on the "Big Turkey," and add the fury of a Vermont blizzard to the natural wildness of that region, you may imagine the surroundings. Yesterday I had an early celebration, then preached in the Whitfield Methodist Church to a good congregation, with the local pastor sitting at my elbow. It was a little exceptional when a young lady with a very fine voice sang "Jerusalem" as an offertory anthem. But, then, Waitsfield has a good deal of culture. In the afternoon a friend drove me fifteen miles into the mountains back of Camel's Hump. The road ends up there in a series of mountain basins, in each of which is a lonely farm. The people are all Irish (Church of Ireland), and nearly all were more or less ill. I had prayers with the sick at five houses. They were pathetically glad to see me, for the only service they have is an occasional Methodist meeting, in a bleak little red school house, and it doesn't appeal to them much.

"But weren't those mountains grand! Once we stopped short to listen to what sounded like the roar of Niagara. I asked, 'Where is that big waterfall?' and my mountain driver said, 'That is a storm forming in the top of Mount Lincoln—Look!' I looked, and there was a great cloud tilted up, so that you could measure the thickness of it. The trees beneath were swaying, and shortly the ground was covered with evergreen twigs torn from the branches. My friend said, 'We'll catch it on the way back,' and we did! On the ridge beside the road a herd of six fine deer—two big bucks and some does and fawns—followed us for some distance. They seemed glad of the company.

"It is wonderfully interesting to be in the mountains in snow time. It is totally different country from that the summer visitors see. On the way home the storm broke, and the darkness shut down on the woods so that we had to leave the horse to find the way. We got in late for supper; but that didn't matter, as every farmer's wife had made us eat something. One old Irishman had fought in a Vermont regiment alongside the Twentieth Connecticut, and told me a lot of things about it. Also about the stormy times in Fayston, where the Roman Catholic Irish were Copperheads and the Orangemen went to the war, and they fought the whole thing out first at home. Men were tarred and feathered, and feuds started which looked serious for awhile. Now, the two sets of Irish are all intermarried and make a strange mixture.

"Our chapel additions and guild rooms at Hardwick are finished, except for varnishing floors and casings. I hope to move into my new study this week. But it has cost $200 more than the estimate, and we'll have to borrow the money. I can't ask the Diocese for more, as I'm asking them to build a chapel at Concord. Our present plans call for a new church building every year now. Next year it will be at Barton. I have had to arrange for monthly services at Rochester this year, and they will want a church soon. I had a lot given me at Stowe last month, and they hope to be among the early ones to build. It is interesting to see how the work grows."

HYMN OF ST. CLEMENT.

The following hymn has just been sent to us by our old friend, Fr. Longridge. He tells us that it was written by a layman in the Parish of St. Clement's, City Road, London, of which Fr. Longridge's brother was vicar:

Anchor of souls, in life's tempestuous ocean,
Jesus our Lord, be present, we implore Thee,
So by Thy grace shall each unruly motion
Bend to adore Thee.

Fain would we celebrate Thy martyr's praises,
Clement, our Patron, throned with Thee in glory,
Surely, with hope the feeble heart upraises,
Telling his story.

Bishop supreme of Rome's majestic city,
Blest by S. Peter of the Lord appointed,
Ruling his flock, with Christ's own love and pity,
Truly anointed.

Noble in life and simple in his teaching,
Pointing in faith unto the One Salvation,
By word and deed Thy Holy Gospel preaching,
Kept he his station.

Then, when the foeman made his last endeavor,
Seeking, by Death, that God's dear Faith should perish,
Clement was constant, brave and true as ever,
That Faith to cherish.

'Whelmed in the flood, the anchor fast beside him,
Emblem of hope, in Christ's unfailing merit,
Firm as a rock, tho' pain and death betide him,
Yielded his spirit.

Humbly we praise him, tho' with joyful gladness,
Fervently raising solemn invocation,
That we, like him, may breast the flood of sadness,
And gain salvation.

Christ is our Anchor, 'mid the waves of sorrow,
Holding us fast when troubles are o'er pressing,
Till we shall reach our Haven on the morrow,
Saved by His blessing.

Therefore, dear Clement, we, with thee adoring,
Jesus, the Fount of peace and joy and glory,
Join in His praise, thy kindly help imploring,
Telling thy story.

And when our story also hath an ending,
Sin-stained and marred, yet by His grace forgiven,
May we again our songs of praise be blending,
With thee in Heaven!

PARISH NOTES

The retreat of St. Mary's Guild will be held on the Thursday in Passion Week.

Contributions are asked for flowers for the Altar of Repose on Maundy Thursday.

The offering on Easter Day will be devoted to the payment of the deficiency in parish treasury.

The annual parish election will be held in the vestry room of the parish building on Easter Monday. Polls will be open from 12 to 2 o'clock.

The retreat of Holy Cross and St. Katharine's Guilds was held on the second Sunday in Lent and was well attended, there having been seventy-five persons making the retreat.

The parishioners are requested by the Bishop of the Diocese to contribute one dollar each to the Church of S. Barnabas, Philadelphia, as a memorial to Bishop Whitaker. Mrs. Geo. H. Lea, 345 South 19th Street, will act as Treasurer of the fund.

The weekly envelopes have been distributed. They are in a much more convenient form than heretofore. There are a great many members of the congregation who haven't yet taken envelopes. Every one who claims the ministrations of the parish should be giving something regularly to its support. There are few who cannot afford at least five cents a week for the Church.

Will persons who are ill be good enough to communicate with the clergy personally and not rely upon the information traveling by indirect roads. Persons desiring the Blessed Sacrament in case of illness are also asked to request the ministrations of the clergy and not wait for the suggestion to come from the parish priests. The clergy are always ready to carry the Blessed Sacrament to the sick at any hour of the day or night. No one is intentionally neglected, and no one need be neglected if he will have the courage to ask for what he wants.

Will the communicants be good enough to make out communion cards this year as usual, giving any change of address. The clergy are constantly calling at empty houses, where the sign "for rent" is the first intimation received of a change of residence. As a result communicants drop out of sight and are offended that the gift of omniscience is not given with the grace of Orders. Several times this winter certificates as "Communicants in good standing" have been refused because the former parishioner has failed to inform the clergy of a change in residence made some years ago, and the consequent falling away from communion at the parish Altar.

Of your charity, pray for the repose of the soul of

EMILY YARNALL

May she rest in peace.

THE YARNALL LEGACY

By the sad and unexpected death of Mrs. Emily Yarnall the estate left by her husband, Ellis H. Yarnall, reverts to St. Clement's Church. As the reports of the extent and value of the inheritance have been numerous and exaggerated, it may be as well to inform the congregation the true facts of the case.

In the first place, the Church has the use of the income only, the Girard Trust Company being named as trustee. It is stipulated that the teaching and ritual practice of the parish are to follow the same lines as now prevail, otherwise the income is to be paid to the Episcopal Hospital until the present conditions are restored, but this transference of the income cannot be effected without the consent of the Bishop and Standing Committee of the Diocese.

The entire income at present will probably amount to a little less than $5,000 a year. This is to be divided into four equal portions, and only half of it can be used for the benefit of the parish.

One quarter is to be used for keeping the buildings in repair or for making alterations if necessary. Another quarter to be used for the expenses attendant upon the worship of the Church, but not for the salaries of the clergy. The third quarter to pay for the education of one or more boys for entrance to a theological seminary. The remaining quarter to be used in establishing a library of theology for the benefit of the clergy of the diocese and theological students.

It will be readily seen then that of the entire income only one quarter (about $1,200) can be used for the current expenses of the parish, and only about $2,500 benefits the parish directly.

We feel it the more necessary to make this statement as we have been informed that an idea is prevalent in some quarters that from now on St. Clement's will not need to be troubled about its running expenses. Nothing could be further from the truth or more calculated to do harm to the parish. We shall need now, as always, the earnest and generous co-operation of the entire congregation if we are to maintain the present parochial equipment. The inheritance will undoubtedly be a real help in meeting the yearly expenses, but we are not yet, and by God's Mercy never will be, in the condition of being a "wealthy" parish.

We are grateful to our faithful communicant who has entered into his rest, for his loving thought for the parish to which he owed his spiritual nurture, and his example of unselfish generosity should spur us on to do greater things for God than heretofore.

We trust that no member of the congregation will consider himself released from his obligation to do all that lies within his power for the support of St. Clement's Church, because of some mistaken notion that the parish no longer stands in need of the generous aid of every member.

LETTER FROM HANKOW

The influence of the printed page in China is very great, and Christian books and tracts go into thousands of homes where the voice of the preacher or Christian visitor is never heard. Mr. Huntington, of Ichang, wrote recently of a trip he had just taken in the great region for 200 to 300 miles west of Ichang, where very little mission work has been attempted, but where we are starting work. He traveled on foot for thirteen days to the city of Tzylan, and on his way came across a man off in the woods who had read a story of Tolstoi translated by a missionary, telling of the moral transformation wrought in a shoemaker by the Gospel. The man had a neglected New Testament which he had acquired somewhere, and reading the story made him think, "Well, there must be something in this Christian religion if it can do things like this." He hunted up the Bible, and when Mr. Huntington came along received him with great cordiality and hospitality while he explained to him fully the Way of Life. It was just one case that happened to be discovered of what is happening in many places, I am sure, where men are reading Christian books and tracts and having their eyes opened and hearts turned.

Keep praying for China! It is the great day of her opportunity and her prime need is for leaders, men of character who can take China safely through her crisis and lead the people unto peace, faith and righteousness. Her need is not so much intellectual as spiritual, moral and social. Oh, for men of courage and faith! Christian men to lead China. There is a promise of their coming in Christian schools and colleges here, and from those Chinese students who have gone to America to study. Would that more of these could come back Christians, for they will return to have a great influence on China's future.

SOME MESSENGERS AND WHERE THEY WENT.—XIX.

In concluding these papers, we will try to make a sort of synopsis of the history of the Church in the Colonies—taking them in geographical, rather than chronological order, as that is easier for most people. The narrative has been, perhaps, rather "sketchy," but the purpose was simply to fill in the blank that confronts Churchpeople sometimes, when they try to understand the time between the beginning of Elizabeth's reign and the beginning of the American Church as a self-governing body.

I. Maine.

1. August 9, 1607. First public service held on St. George's Island, under the stone cross erected two years before by either Pring or Weymouth. The severity of the winter, the death of the leader, and the lack of help from home, forced the little colony of five houses to be abandoned within a year; but the English claim to this northern region rests upon this early church settlement.

2. When Maine came under the control of Massachusetts, in 1652, the Rev. Robert Jordan was stationed at Portland. The Puritans led him a hard life—in fact, some believed that his death in 1679 was hastened by the cruelty, including imprisonment, with which he was treated. The success of his labors may be inferred from the fact that a complaint was made to Governor Winthrop that the people along the northern coast were "much addicted to Episcopacy."

3. When the Church was organized, Maine was included with Rhode Island, New Hampshire and Vermont, in a section known as the "Eastern Diocese." The Bishop of this great region was the saintly Griswold, who was consecrated in 1811, having previously endured hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ. He had practiced law until 1794, and this probably was a great help in upholding the Church against the claims of her enemies. He was fond of telling, anent the opposition to Episcopacy, that when he was a child, neighbors had impressed upon him that if bishops came to America, they would claim the tenth of everything, including children. Being the tenth child of his parents, his youthful prayers besought that the dreaded bishops might not come. Maine became a separate diocese in 1820, but remained under Bishop Griswold's care until his death in 1843. The first Bishop of Maine was the Rt. Rev. George Burgess, D. D., consecrated October 31, 1847.

II. New Hampshire.

1. After Pring and Gosnold had explored the coast, and settlers had come in, there was an earnest little colony of Churchpeople at a place called Strawberry Bank, the site of the present Portsmouth. In 1640 a grant of fifty acres of land was made by the people of Strawberry Bank to two men who were the church wardens, whose successors in office hold the land to this day. We have already told how unusually well the little parish was supplied with churchly belongings. When Massachusetts assumed charge of the northern settlements, outward observance of the Church's ways was crushed out without mercy, the Rev. Richard Gibson being a shining mark for persecution.

The subsequent history of New Hampshire was similar to that of Maine. It was organized as a diocese in 1802, but did not receive a bishop of its own till the consecration of the Rt. Rev. Carlton Chase, D. D., on October 20, 1844.

IIa. Vermont.

(New Hampshire Grant.)

Just how the Church first found its way into Vermont is hard to learn, but many country parishes in that diocese are proud to date their organization back to the pioneer days. The diocese was organized in 1790; its first bishop was the Rt. Rev. John Henry Hopkins, D.D., LL.D., consecrated October 31, 1832. He remained in office till his death, in 1868, and to him as Presiding Bishop, belong the honor and glory of reuniting the Northern and Southern Dioceses after the Civil War. Lovingly he wrote to the Southern bishops and delegates, beseeching them to attend the convention of 1865, in Philadelphia. They came, but did not enter the procession. At the Holy Communion, however, they knelt with their Northern brethren before the altar, amid joy which "could hardly be repressed within the bounds of the propriety belonging to the occasion and place."

III. Massachusetts.

The beginnings of a regular Church ministry, under the Rev. Robert Ratcliffe, have been described. June 15, 1686, the first parish was organized in Boston. After the labors of Revs. Keith and Talbot, to the old King's Chapel were added Christ Church—from whose belfry shone the lantern signals for Paul Revere—and Trinity Church. The clergy of Massachusetts and New Hampshire elected a bishop in 1789, but there was some delay, a question having been raised in the struggling young Convention as to whether its three bishops had power to consecrate, and the candidate withdrew his name. Later, however, the Rt. Rev. Edward Bass, D. D., consecrated May 7th, 1797, became first Bishop of Massachusetts.

LAZARUS.

"Remember that thou in thy lifetime received thy good things and O likewise Lazarus evil things."—St. Luke, xvi 25.

Still he lingers where wealth and fashion
Meet together to dine or play.
Lingers, a matter of vague compassion,
Out in the darkness across the way;
Out beyond the warmth and glitter,
And the light where luxury's laughter rings,
Lazarus waits where the wind is bitter,
Receiving his evil things.

Still you find him when breathless, burning
Summer flames upon square and street,
When the fortunate ones of the earth are turning
Their thoughts to meadows and meadow-sweet;
For far away from the wide green valley,
And the bramble patch where the white-throat sings,
Lazarus sweats in his crowded alley,
Receiving his evil things.

And all the time from a thousand rostrums
Wise men preach upon him and his woes,
Each with his bundle of noisy nostrums
Torn to tatters twixt ayes and noes,
Sage and Socialist gush and glamor,
Yet little relief their wisdom brings,
For there's nothing for him out of all the clamor,
Nothing but evil things.

Royal commissions, creeds, convictions,
Learnedly argue and write and speak
But the happy issue of his afflictions—
Lazarus waits for it week by week.
Still he seeks it to-day, to-morrow,
In purposeless pavement wanderings,
Or dreams it, a heap of huddled sorrow,
Receiving his evil things.

And some will tell you of Evolution,
With social science thereto; and some
Look forth to the parable's retribution,
When the lot has changed in the life to come,
To the trumpet sound and the great awakening,
To One with healing upon His wings,
In the house of the many mansions making
An end of the evil things.

In the name of Knowledge the race grows healthier,
In the name of Freedom the world grows great,
And men are wiser and men are wealthier,
But Lazarus lies at the rich man's gate;
Lies as he lay through human history,
Through fame of heroes and pomp of Kings,
At the rich man's gate an abiding mystery.
Receiving his evil things.

ALFRED COCHRANE,
In the London Spectator.

PARISH NOTES.

The Paschal candle was decorated this year by Miss Edna Hagert.

The class in the Prayer Book, which has been held on Wednesday afternoons during the winter, has been discontinued.

The Mothers' Meeting have been working hard all the winter sewing rags for rugs. These have now been woven, and the result is very pleasing.

A missionary mass meeting for men only is being planned for Friday evening, May 5, in the Academy of Music. The music will be rendered by the choirs of the Philadelphia churches.

The earnest prayers of the congregation are asked for the guidance of the Diocesan Convention. This year we shall be electing a Bishop Coadjutor and a Suffragan. It is a time when the Diocese needs many prayers.

It is proposed to sell the rugs and send the proceeds to Father Lobdell's Mission. They will be on sale at the Parish House on Thursday, May 4, and it is hoped that purchasers may be found among the ladies of the congregation.

The banner of St. Katharine was blessed and used for the first time on Easter Day. The work was done by the members of the Altar Guild, and much time and thought were spent upon it. The banner is a memorial to Mrs. Alice Elizabeth Leigh.

The collections on Ascension Day will be used as last year, to pay the expenses of any who may be unable to obtain the necessary amount for a holiday during the summer. The plan was very successful last year, and it is hoped that the contributions may be generous.

The card for Rogation Intercessions will be found in the corridor Sunday, May 21. Those who are able to give a definite time in the Rogation tide are asked to enter their names upon the card opposite the hour for which they will be responsible. The Church will be open on these days from 6 a. m. until 9 p. m.

On the first day of May the Rev. Augustus W. Shick comes to us as curate. Father Shick is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and of the Philadelphia Divinity School, and was ordained to the priesthood on the 11th of last March. During his seminary course and after his ordination to the diaconate he was in charge of the mission at Collingdale.

The Magazine makes its annual appeal for funds. It does not pay its expenses, and never has. In this connection it may be well to state that many persons ask for the magazine, promising to pay for it at a future time. The future time never seems to arrive. If any one is interested enough to take the magazine and read it, he should be willing to pay the modest sum of five cents for his copy. If the magazine is not worth support, it might be just as well to discontinue it at once.

HOLY WEEK AND EASTERTIDE.

On Palm Sunday the full ceremonial of the Blessing of the Palms was carried out, and the service was most impressive and progressed very smoothly. The antiphons, which Mr. Sears prepared last year, were used by his very kind permission. As usual, many came to worship with us, and the seating capacity of the Church was severely testetl.

There were excellent congregations at the services on Maundy Thursday and Good Friday, and there was manifest a real spirit of devotion during the entire week.

On Easter Day the choir, under Mr. Hall's able direction, rendered Gounod's St. Cecelia Mass, in which the solo work is especially to be commended.

There was a large communion at the early Masses, and many have made their communions during the Easter Octave.

MESSENGERS AND WHERE THEY WENT

IV. Connecticut.

This colony was a stronghold of Puritanism, and Churchmen had a hard time. In 1664, seven of them petitioned the Assembly for better treatment, but nothing came of it. As we have already told, the regular Church services began in Connecticut, under the armed protection of Colonel Heathcote, who accompanied a missionary from New York. Still, CHRIST was preached, and the famous "Dark Day" (to Puritans) occurred when the Faculty of Yale College turned to the Church.

To Connecticut belongs the glory of being the home of the first of the American Bishops, Rt. Rev. Samuel Seabury, D. D. He was born the year before his father conformed to the Church, and was brought up in an atmosphere of "suffering for righteousness' sake." As a youth, he dedicated himself to the ministry, and resolved to spend the years in practical preparation, studying medicine in Edinburgh, till he should be old enough to be admitted a candidate for Orders. On St. Thomas' Day, 1753, he was ordained deacon by the Bishop of Lincoln, and two days later he was ordained priest by the Bishop of Carlisle. He worked as a parish priest in Long Island and New York, till the Revolution broke out. He placed his family safely in New York, and then quietly went about his old field, ministering as he could. There was no support for a clergyman, and he resumed the practice of medicine for awhile, no doubt with his priestly offices ministering to soul as well as body. In politics, he remained a Tory, and was chaplain of the King's American Regiment. Insults, humiliation, exile, and imprisonment were his reward from the colonists, when they could get at him. Yet, when he found himself, after the war in the new "United States of America," he was loyal to the new government. He was, however, still a refugee in New York, where there was a meeting held at Woodbury, Connecticut, of several clergy, who felt that now there was no possible hope of having a Bishop sent to America from the Church in England, they had better take steps to get one for themselves. No laymen were admitted to this session, which met at the rectory in deep and anxious debate. It was new and strange ground they were on, remember, acting for the Church apart from any State considerations, and this was emphasized by their choice of one who had been loyal to the old order of things. Dr. Seabury proceeded to England, bearing letters to the Church there, and private directions from his fellow-clergy to proceed to Scotland if necessary, rather than give up his object. In England it was as they had feared. The Church authorities were unwilling to incur the enmity of the new Republic by consecrating Seabury, and so he waited a whole year, while lengthy letters were written to the United States government, and weary discussions dragged along the time. At last, getting no decisive reply, he went to Scotland, to the "nonjuring Bishops," and was consecrated there November 14, 1784.

V. Rhode Island.

Owes much to the residence there of Dean Berkeley, who labored with so much disappointment to himself, and such glorious after results. He was so popular a preacher that when he officiated at Trinity Church, Newport, "even Quakers, with their broad-brimmed hats, stood in the aisles." Rhode Island came under Bishop Seabury's care in 1790.

PARISH NOTES.

The annual meeting of the Confraternity of the Blessed Sacrament will be held on Wednesday afternoon, June 14, at 4 o'clock.

After June 11 the 8 o'clock mass on Sundays and the 7.30 mass on week-days will be omitted. The 9.15 mass on Sunday will be a low mass with hymns.

In foreign missions we have been contributing towards the work of Father Wood, Wuchang, Hankon; and in domestic missions towards work in the District of Salina under Bishop Griswold. Money for general missions is, of course, solely at the disposal of the Board of Missions.

The Accounting Warden reports that quite a considerable number of these mission offering envelopes are passing through his hands, and it is hoped their use will become yet more general, as many who are using the weekly envelopes for current expenses are not using the envelopes for missions.

Those members of the Parish using the mission envelopes for their monthly missionary offering are urged to designate on the envelopes for what purpose or purposes they desire their offerings used. A great many have done so, but many have not, and undesignated offerings are divided at the Rector's direction between the different fields, though it would relieve him of this responsibility if all offerings were designated.

If those members of the Parish who contribute through the weekly envelope system, and who are planning to spend part, if not all, of the summer out of town, could conveniently pay in the amount of their contributions prior to their leaving home, it would materially help the financial condition of the Parish during the summer. Some of our people have always done this, and if all who can would do so, rather than wait until their return home in the early fall, it would be a good plan to adopt.

By resolution of the Vestry, at its May meeting, the offertory on Whitsunday will be devoted towards the current expenses of the Parish. St. Clement's, like all city parishes, suffers during the summer months from small congregations and hence from small offertories, while the expenses incident to running the Parish continue on as usual. It is hoped, therefore, that a generous offering will be made on Whitsunday so that the Accounting Warden may have some assurance of being in funds with which to pay current bills, salaries, etc., as they fall due.

On St. Mark's Day, April 25, the Bishop of Wyoming administered the Sacrament of Confirmation to a class of thirty-two persons. Three other persons have been confirmed in the Parish since the first of May, 1910, making the total for the year thirty-five. This is the largest number since the year 1895, when thirty-seven persons were confirmed. The parishioners are asked to remember in their prayers those who have received the Holy Spirit that they may persevere in the Christian life. The newly confirmed received their first communion on the fourth Sunday after Easter.

LETTER FROM WUCHANG.

(For ST. CLEMENT'S MAGAZINE.)

ST. JAMES, CHU HO (Red River), CHINA.
FEBRUARY 17, 1911.

It is raw and cold, and the wind and rain are raging outside. I am sitting here in the catechist's house waiting for the stormy lake to become calm and allow me to resume my missionary journey. I have been sitting for hours in the church, and although my cassock is lined with sheepskin I feel chilled to the bone. Our churches are never heated. Just now, however, the catechist brought me some glowing charcoal in a wicker basket-like arrangement to warm my hands and feet. No one but an Oriental would think of making a stove of wood or bamboo, but this one is certainly most convenient. The fire is in an earthen plate with plenty of ashes and the bamboo frame is not even scorched. It certainly is most "grateful and comforting." Chinese hospitality always offers its best, and a king could not do more than that. While I am enjoying the warmth I will improve the opportunity of writing a few lines about mission work in China.

The Associate Mission or "Community of St. Saviour" at Wuchang is responsible for two circuits of country stations besides the four in Wuchang, making fourteen in all, with a staff of about fifty Chinese workers. The community is now reduced to one, but the country work must be looked after some how. Work at St. Saviour's is so engrossing that it is difficult to get away except at times like this—the China New Year's vacation, when not only are the parochial schools at St. Saviour's closed, but other priests are free to take one's place and celebrate, etc.

Speaking of St. Saviour's, I must add a word which I am sure will do every Catholic heart good, and for which I ask you to thank God. It is about the Eucharist. This, the great sacrifice of the New Law, is to us very much what it was to Catholics of the primitive centuries. It is, of course, the chief act of worship of the Lord's Day and, furthermore, is always celebrated early, with sermon, music and dignified ritual (including incense). The primitive practice of frequent and fasting communion is taught. For the last few months there has been an average of about sixty communions on Sundays, with not a few on week-days. On Christmas morning there were one hundred and ten. Some seventy were either baptized or admitted Catechumens at Christmas-tide, and the confessions kept the priest busy a good part of his time for three days before the great feast.

The great Chinese New Year festival fell this year on January 30, and, according to our custom, we ushered it in with a midnight Eucharist.

Candlemas came four days later, and we sang a solemn mass—the Dean of the Boone Divinity School, the Rev. L. B. Ridgley being deacon, and the resident Chinese deacon, sub-deacon. Later in the day I crossed the river to Hankow and spent the night. My host was Father Deis, our newest arrival, a Nashotah man, on the staff of St. Luke's, Evanston, Ill., and, needless to say, a good Catholic. Early next morning I started on my itinerating trip up the Han River. The little steamer was not running, it being holiday time, so I took a small native boat for a few miles up, then put off across country for a ten-mile walk to a place called Hanchuan, which I reached in the evening. It had been previously arranged that a six days' mission should be held at this and three other stations of the circuit, a Chinese priest beginning it here and after two days passing on to the other three places in turn. I followed for the second two days, and a third missioner for the third, also passing on in the same way. When I reached Hanchuan, the first missioner had completed his two days and had gone on to his second place.

I spent most of the next day, Saturday, after celebrating early, in preaching and hearing confessions. Good seed had already been sown and a goodly number of penitents were the fruit. Oh, how my heart did rejoice. On Sunday there were about seventy communions. The Eucharist here at St. James', too, is always early and the chief service of the day.

At St. Mary's, Holy Name, and the other station which I visited there was abundance of reason for thanking God. There were some very special penitents whose hearts God touched. I returned to Wuchang for the Sunday, celebrating at St. Mark's, and started off again on Monday for the second trip, this time up the Yangtsi River. The boat was delayed until Tuesday A. M. before starting, thus bringing me to Sinti at 2 A. M. I had to get off at this unearthly hour in midstream, the steamer slowing up and a native boat coming alongside for passengers and baggage. I got to bed about 3, to be awakened again before 7 in order to resume my journey across the lake to this place. The weather was fine and the wind favorable, and the little native boat made good time. Work began in the evening with preaching and hearing confessions, and the next day was taken up for the most part in the same way. The people here have no priest, only a catechist, the Chinese priest from Sinti visiting them monthly on a week-day. For the two mornings I have been here there has been a good attendance at mass.

In these out-of-the-way places almost no one has a clock. People tell time by the sun. As it has been exceptionally dark and cloudy, and the old sun has been slow about making his presence felt, everybody has been late.

We waited a full hour for the congregation to gather, and even then, with a service of preparation and an address preceding the mass proper, some arrived late. There is always plenty of time in the Orient. One wonders how busy, hurried city clergy at home would relish this utter disregard of time which one has to put up with here.

Later.—Home once more at St. Saviour's. The bad weather which I encountered at Chu Ho delayed me so that I had to shorten my visits at the other places. This was a great disappointment, but when I think of God's great goodness to me on both the journeys, specially the sixty-three penitents He sent me, I can only thank Him with all my heart.

Yours in Him,
ROBERT E. WOOD.

THE DIOCESAN CONVENTION

The Convention of the Diocese, held in the Church of St. Luke and the Epiphany May 9 and 10, was a memorable one in the history of the Diocese. In a few hours on the second day of its session a Bishop Coadjutor and a Suffragan were elected, the first on the second ballot of the clergy and the first of the laity, and the second on the first ballot of both orders. The entire proceeding was marked by a singular quietness, and there seemed an entire absence of any sort of bitterness or rancour. When one considers conditions in the Diocese in the past and the virulent party spirit which was rife thirty years ago, one must see in the present instance the manifest working of the Holy Spirit.

Neither Professor Rhinelander nor Mr. Garland have as yet signified their acceptance of the offices to which they have been called, but we are convinced that each will act as he is moved by the Holy Spirit.

SOME MESSENGERS AND WHERE THEY WENT.

VI. In New York, when it came under English rule, the Dutch Church was used alternately by the Dutch and the English. Trinity Parish was organized in 1692, receiving that grant of land, the present value of which so worries the consciences of the magazine writers.

The Rector of Trinity Church was chosen chairman of the Convention of 1786—a memorable occasion, when in less than two days a score of clerical and lay delegates settled such momentous questions as whether the Nicene Creed should be retained and the Apostles' Creed left unchanged (cf. rubric in Morning Prayer, before the Creed, p. 11 of the Cambridge Edition).

As soon as possible afterward he went to England, was consecrated, and the Rt. Rev. Samuel Provoost, D.D., became (1787) first Bishop of New York.

VII. New Jersey.—Commissary Bray spoke of this colony as being "without priest or altar." There appeared to be not more than a dozen Church people in the whole colony, Col. Lewis Morris being one who showed untiring devotion. The missions conducted by the Rev. George Keith had a very real effect; parishes and missions were organized, and the S. P. G. sent missionaries. One of them complained that his people were willing to get salvation "without money and without price." The Rt. Rev. John Croes, consecrated November 19, 1815, was the first Bishop.

VIII. Pennsylvania.—Provision was made for the Church in the charter granted to William Penn, but the Quakers resented Church work, and occasionally summoned Churchmen before the civil courts. Christ Church, seating, in 1695, five hundred, was considered a remarkably large and imposing structure. A good move was the beginning of night services, for the benefit of those whose masters gave them no chance to attend during the day. The ministrations of the Rev. George Keith, himself a convert from Quakerism, mightily roused the colony; there was no compromise, yet in about twenty years the number of communicants increased to about eight hundred.

The Rev. William White, D.D., received his degree from the University of Pennsylvania, being the first person so complimented. He ministered both to Christ Church and St. Peter's during the dearth of clergy at the time of the Revolution, and was chaplain of the Continental Congress. His part in the reorganization of the Church after the war was so great that it can hardly be more than mentioned in a brief summary like this. He was a statesman, and his advice was sought in civil as well as religious matters. It was his advice which overruled the attempt to have religious teaching eliminated from Girard College on account of the wording of the will. He ruled that, while the clergy of no church or sect could by the terms of the will be allowed to work within the college—and in those days of strife one denomination would soon have controlled the situation and shut out many needy boys—yet "purest morality" and "principles in accordance with the law of the land" were expressly enjoined. The purest morality is found in the teachings of Jesus Christ, and the government was tactily understood to be in accordance with Christianity; therefore, there not only was no reason why devoted laymen should not teach Christianity, there was every reason why they should. Some of the most devout and earnest young Christians with whom the writer had had to deal were graduates of Girard.

During the yellow fever, in 1793, Dr. White remained faithfully at his post and ministered to all whom he could help.

First Presiding Bishop of the Church, one of the three through whom the American Church received the Apostolic Succession, when he died, at the age of 89, the whole community mourned.

As we write this, and recall the historian's words, "The whole community felt his loss as a public bereavement," almost the same words recur as just read in a daily paper concerning our beloved Bishop Whitaker.

Pennsylvania should be an earnest diocese, for God has blessed it with earnest leaders.

PARISH NOTES.

Commencing Sunday, July 2d, Evensong will be said at 5 o'clock in St. John's Chapel, and there will be no service in the evening.

During the summer the clergy in residence will be in the Church on Saturdays from 3 to 5 and 7 to 9 P. M. to hear confessions

Solemn mass was sung as usual on Ascension Day at 7 o'clock. The communion was a large one. After mass the choir breakfasted in the parish hall. The annual outing of the choir boys took place a week later. With Fr. Quin and Mr. Hall they had a boat ride down the Delaware. In spite of inclement weather the trip was voted a success.

The Chapel organ has been in use for many years and is fast reaching a condition which is beyond repair. We need a new instrument very much. It would add greatly to the services which are sung in the Chapel and would render them adequate in some degree which can not be said of them now. Will those who may feel disposed send contributions to the rector for the "Chapel organ."

THE MOTHERS' MEETING.

The mothers' meeting held its last service for the summer on Thursday evening, June 1st. The articles made for Fr. Lobdell's mission were exhibited and were as follows: For girls: 23 aprons, 18 dresses, 14 infants' slips, 13 flannel skirts, 6 waists and drawers; for boys: 12 blouses, 4 gingham suits, 2 rompers. Also 17 rag rugs were made, from the sale of which $29 was cleared to put in the box.

SOME MESSENGERS AND WHERE THEY WENT.

IX. Delaware.—Sometimes called the "Territories of Pennsylvania" or the "Lower Counties of the Delaware." Here a great deal of good missionary work was done, and the foundations laid for steady Church life. The first Bishop was the Rev. Alfred Lee, D.D., consecrated October 12, 1841. He was Presiding Bishop in 1884.

X. Maryland had the great inspiration and help of the Rev. Dr. Bray, during whose visitation the clergy were assembled, and this made their work more united and strengthened the Church's position against the Romanists, who at the outset had been hostile. Directly after Dr. Bray's return to England the S. P. G. was organized and began its work. The first Bishop of Maryland, Rt. Rev. Thomas John Claggett, D.D., was consecrated during the General Convention, which met in New York, September 17, 1792—the first Episcopal consecration in America.

XI. Virginia.—When Raleigh sent out his first expedition he donated £100 for the express purpose of planting the Christian religion in those barbarous countries." This may be called the first missionary offering for work in America. The early history of the Church in Virginia is too well known to need going over here. The first Bishop was the Rt. Rev. James Madison, D.D., consecrated in Lambeth Chapel, September 19, 1790; this made the number of Bishops necessary to securing the Succession in the American Church.

XII. The Carolinas.—In Carolina the missionaries suffered from the long and rough journeys which had to be taken, the unhealthiness of the climate, and the poverty of the people. Many of the missionaries worked during the week at almost anything they could get to do. The Rt. Rev. John Stark Ravenscroft was consecrated the first Bishop, at the Convention which met in Philadelphia, May, 1823.

XIII. Georgia.—General Oglethorpe, when he landed in June, 1733, had two clergymen in his company. A little church was made of split boards, it was 12 by 30 feet. The chalice and paten were presented by the father of John Wesley, a personal friend. Oglethorpe persuaded John and Charles Wesley to go to Georgia with him on his second trip, making their main object the conversion of the Indians. Charles was more enthusiastic than wise; he did not get on with the people at all, and remained only about four months, quarreling with Oglethorpe himself. John remained; a more lovable character than his brother, and more clear-headed. He was Oglethorpe's secretary and confident, probably the one to whom the Governor turned many times for counsel. The young secretary in his neat diaries never refers to these counsels of State except in the non-committal words: "Writ for O." His work as a missionary was devoted, but he laid down too rigid rules for a people who needed to be won by degrees. When he left he had warm friends and warm enemies; undoubtedly the colony missed him more than it was able to know.

The Rt. Rev. Stephen Elliott, D.D., was first Bishop of Georgia, consecrated February 28, 1841.

This ends the list, because by the time Florida became a diocese the Church had organized for missionary work, and the Board of Missions had been acting for some time. It is a wonderful chronicle of consecration and zeal and Divine guidance, that could be compiled from the dry-looking pages of the Spirit of Missions in the first years of its publication. There are very few complete sets of this magazine; people then didn't realize the value of its testimony any more than people do now.

God grant that the coming volumes may record still greater achievements to His glory and the coming of His Kingdom. Amen.

THE BONTOK BULLETIN—AN OCCASIONAL PERSONAL LETTER.

PRINTED, AS WE FIND TIME TO DO IT, ON THE MISSION PRESS.

We began this number in November, 1910.

Dear Friends of all SS: That "occasional" has proved to be more than yearly, I am sorry to see. Time has a queer way here in the Philippines. So long, and yet so short; and so it has been the last year.

When we think of outward things accomplished, naturally there comes up first and chiefly into which we entered first for worship on All SS. Day. Externally it is not a beautiful thing, for it is really only one corner of a church, which was so planned that we could with very little loss of money enclose for temporary use that much. And so the rough edges and incompleted slopes are very evident. But while the same is in a masure true of the interior, still it is a comfortable, well-built chapel, with some claim to be called beautiful; and the adjoining Sacristy, comprising the greater part of the space planned for the permanent use, is commodious and convenient. The altar is of native woods and of suitable proportions, elevated only one step above the sanctuary level, for it is, after all, only a chapel altar. In the center of the mensa the Japanese carpenter neatly inserted the California redwood (or perhaps it is only Oregon pine) board which I had a San Francisco carpenter make, nine years ago, for use on the "America Maru," should there be opportunity to celebrate during the voyage. There was opportunity, I think first on All SS. Day, 1901, when the slab rested on a table in the smoking room of the steamer, and as many of the mission company as could assemble were present in that peculiar place—I remember that Bishop McKim, of Japan, was one, and so we kept the day. That board has gone wherever we have gone and has supported the Chalice on all the temporary altars we have used, and now finds a permanent place in the first altar built for God's worship in our Bontok Mission.

CHAPEL TOO SMALL.

We have to say this even while rejoicing that we have the Chapel (20 ft. by 40 ft.) comfortably filled every day; it is crowded on other days. We need the church complete. If God sees this as we see it, of course, He will give us the larger fabric, and we rest content with this thought. The Romans are building a large 30,000 pesos church for their three-year-old mission.

Incidentally, in pioneer work, one may have a good deal of

—I can only call it that in familiar speech to you; the sort of pleasure one has in camping out, making furniture out of boxes, finding out how to utilize what is at hand. This had scope when we came to the interior fittings and decorations of our chapel. Pictures—we needed them to warm up the gray tones of the plastered walls. Well, here are some colored prints, really good ones, though absurdly cheap. Mount them on cloth-covered stretchers, get the Japanese to make some plain but generous pine frames. Gild the same, and the effect is very fine. The Sistine Madonna looks out from behind the altar-cross with a great glory and no suggestion of tawdriness. Father Wood, a long time ago, had assisted to furnish our altar with ornaments made up in Wuchang by the Chinese, of that peculiar white brass which polishes up like silver. And banners—for the people would expect Processions now and then. Our hints thrown out homeward had borne no fruit. But there were cheap "Chino" silks in Manila, and there were the comprehensive virtues of Diamond Dyes and Gold Paint; and we went to work. Result: nine varied-hued banners, contributed by the labors of various members of the Mission, and while none of them outrage the artistic sense, some are distinctly pleasing and all of them useful for the purpose intended. The Sanctuary Lamp problem was great. Our good agent in the States reported stock low in the kinds which could possibly come by mail and were also within the modest sum sent. Then an inspiration: why not this largest member of a set of Chinese chimes, inverted and supported by (must we say it?) dog chains, bought locally and supporting in turn a glass for the oil! Done. The effect is really excellent, artistic; might have cost $25. And so on. Such are some of the joys of trying to turn materials ready at hand, and medium talents, into that which shall be edifying and to God's glory in a remote mission station.

SPIRITUAL THINGS.

A growing loyalty not only to the Mission, but to the standards of Jesus Christ; fewer lapses: some notable indications of growth in the inner life of which one might wish to speak more particularly than he can; an average of more than one baptism per week; an increasing definiteness of instruction. The material blessing of the new chapel conduces at once to greater reverence and order in our services. The whole gives cause for great thankfulness, but not for complacency. The devil is very active in Bontok. The transition from heathenism to Christianity is a storm area and one must not be surprised to find wrecks. Old customs, tribal traditions have, of course, a deep hold upon the people. The children reverence their elders and we cannot teach them otherwise and be true to God's Commandments. Such customs as tribal feasts we think best to leave largely to the growth of conviction. It is interesting to note how, in some of the sturdiest characters the binding force of these dies out, supplanted by Christian faith. A summons came the other day from a neighboring village for the boys of that town to attend a kanyau. Two or three went willingly, while as many disregarded the call, until finally one was forcibly carried off by his father. But the customs relative to love and marriage are harder subjects. Trouble has already begun and probably we must expect more of it.

HOPE AND DETACHMENT.

How to carry these both, is the problem. I supose it is in most missions. There is so much in these people of good human nature. One thinks, if so much, why not this farther step? Ideals are raised, and expectations built. They become centered in interesting cases that surely deserve to be "written up" for your information. Then comes the slip, the fall, the unaccountable desertion. Hopes are crushed, affections violated, and we are tempted to say, No more pathetic "write ups," no more hopes, but just plodding on in a mechanical sort of routine.

You will put your finger upon the defect in such hopes and such detachment. We must learn to work more directly for God, and that too with unfailing joy and enthusiasm, and not to be so profoundly affected by the temporary issue of what is, after all, His work.

CONVERSION.

It is hard enough, using all the helps that Catholic Christianity knows, to sufficiently impress the natives with an objective notion of Christianity. Service and songs, ritual and pictures, banners and processions, are all needed for this. But these and a humanly unattainable power are required for the still more necessary task of effectively touching hearts and lives that are veiled from us by the distinguishing features of a wholly different race. Only God can do this. Equipment, more workers (both sadly lacking, it seems to us), have this for their highest end. A deeper faith and more earnest prayer must be the chief agents.

THE ANGELUS ECHO

is an unnumbered society of those who are sufficiently in sympathy with this mission to pray with us and for us in this work for real conversion, in all its spiritual and temporal ramifications. (See the enclosed leaflet.)

THE MISSION PRESS

is a small affair, but it is kept very busy. Most of its products are in the vernacular, either Igorot or Ilokano. A little while ago it issued the first book ever printed in the Igorot and done in the people's own territory, viz., a book of such parts of the Book of Common Prayer as are used in the choir offices at the Mission. Other issues have been hymns and devotions for public or private use, and we project still more literature of this sort. The Gospel, and ultimately (when we know the language better) the Altar Service should be done; and we want to print also some stories and simple tracts on subjects secular and religious.

Remember that just now, for the first time, a few of the rising generation of Igorots are learning to read their own language. It is awkward to have to wield two native languages at once; but the influx of a large number of Ilokanos into the community, and the consequent tendency of a part of the Igorot population to adopt it, makes it necessary. Miss Waterman has begun to study the dialect, and it may be that we shall all have to know something of it.

THOSE WOMEN.

It may be remembered that in the last Bulletin I spoke rather disparagingly of a certain class of adherents, women who have departed enough from Igorot life to adopt some of the customs and the language of the Ilokanos and to form alliances with them. They certainly did seem an inert, hopeless lot; but, perhaps because we have tried harder to do our duty by them, there are really some signs of life among these women. They have their own instruction hour now, and while some of them go to sleep, a goodly number have learned to give attention and, I hope, take in something of what is said and sung.

THE BOYS AND GIRLS.

Not mentioned thus late because they are not important; you know they have always constituted, and they continue to constitute, the forefront of our work. We are profoundly grateful for the appropriations which will probably enable us to close the account for maintenance without deficit to be supplied from discretionary funds. Our prayer is now for decent housing. The old house, where Father Sibley exists with something over thirty boys, is rotten in roof and foundation and unwholesome in every part. How Miss Whitcombe can be so uncomplaining with her seventeen girls in a one-story building 25 ft. by 30 ft. is a mystery to me. So the need for an equipment where order, regularity, cleanliness and the other simple elements which should make up the training of these children can be enforced, and for helpers to give proper and constant oversight, without killing the workers through overstrain, is very great.

THE "THEOLOGICAL COLLEGE."

Quotation marks because, really, there isn't any Theological College. But every morning, for an hour and a half, five or six of the older boys gather around our table for study and instruction. There are three half-hour periods, and they study the Bible, arithmetic, geography and history, current events and map sketching. Thus they can keep a hold on what they have previously learned and add something to their breadth of vision. The opportunity is given for explanations and advice, which, under God's blessing, may bear fruit in Christian character in those who may prove capable of leadership in future years. Pray for the "Theological College," its students and "faculty."

HOW TO MAKE A CONFESSION.

This instruction is needed even by those who have been coming to their confessions for a long time. Much time is often wasted and a great deal of unnecessary conversation held, much of which ought to take place outside of the confessional.

In the first place it is better to use a very short form as a preliminary for the confession: "I confess to Almighty God, before the whole company of heaven and to you, father, that I have sinned," is quite enough and is to be recommended especially at the great feasts when many persons are waiting to make their confessions. The longer form may be used at other times, as the devotion of the penitent may suggest, but it is not essential and some persons waste a great deal of time saying it.

Then the confession should be quite clear and definite: "Father, I told three lies, but not against any one's character; I lost my temper four times and spoke sharply once. I omitted my morning prayers once and once in Church I was not recollected. For these and all the sins I cannot remember I am truly sorry, promise amendment, ask pardon of God and of you, father, penance, counsel and absolution. Amen."

It is not necessary to elaborate details more than this. If there is any special counsel to be asked it is usually better to have a special appointment and not to keep others waiting by a long narration of entirely irrelevant circumstances.

JOHN SWORD, PREIST.

On St. Peter's Day, Almighty God called to Himself one of His faithful priests, who for more than thirty years served Him with devotion and singular holiness of life. Fr. Sword's death removes from the Church Militant one more of those sincere and true Catholics who were the direct outcome of the Oxford Movement. We look in vain in the Church to-day for such men as Fr. Paine, of Baltimore; Fr. Prime, of Brighton, and Fr. Sword; men who fought battles in the early days of the Catholic movement in America, and who, persecuted and suffered for their faith, developed characters of purity and holiness that were as rare as they were beautiful.

Fr. Sword had been for many years a friend of St. Clement's. It was here that he made his first confession—it was probably here that he made his last one. It is an honor to the parish that it should have had the privilege of his burial.

May he rest in peace!

MY KING.

I hastened to the trysting-place,
To meet my Lord the King;
I went, I trow, at such a pace
I made the pavement ring,
And, as I went, a hungry crowd
Did ask an alms of me,
And foreign pilgrims cried aloud
For hospitality.
I saw the sick man's ambulance,
The prisoner in chains,
But such was my exuberance,
I reck'd not of their pains.
I hastened to the trysting-place
To meet my Lord the King;
The Sheriff stood with sword and mace
But gave scant welcoming.
He eyed my visage through and through,
At length he spake aloud:
My Lord went forth to welcome you;
You missed him in the crowd!

THE BONTOK BULLETIN—AN OCCASIONAL PERSONAL LETTER.

PRINTED, AS WE FIND TIME TO DO IT, ON THE MISSION PRESS.

THE BAGUIO BOYS.

Of the original boys—we call them this because they were, in some sense, the first-fruit of our labors here, and because they were the ones selected to go to the "Easter School" under the Reverend S. S. Drury, in Baguio, the following account may interest those who used to read of the mission's work in those days.

HILARY PITAPIT spent more than three years in Trinity College School, Port Hope, Ontario. There he did good work, taking prizes in Divinity, French, Writing, Greek and other subjects, and winning a good stand in athletics. He is now with Bishop Brent in Manila, attending the Normal School, with the medical profession in view.

JAMES ROBERT AMOK has been teacher of a barrio school in Bontok, has been a trusted employe of the government, and is now teacher and overseer in the Mission.

EDWARD CHARLES MUKET was for a time enlisted in the Constabulary; is now employed as helper in the Mission.

HENRY HUDSON ANAMOT died of malignant malaria in Baguio in 1907.

NARCISO CARIÑO, after a considerable period of service as interpreter, language teacher and helper at the Mission, was offered, and accepted, a good position in the civil service under the government. He was recently married to Mary Ayachi, one of our Christian girls. He still serves the Mission as interpreter and language teacher.

CLEMENT IRVING stayed in Baguio and has been for some time the very efficient helper of Mrs. Hargreaves in the transformed Easter School.

STANLEY KALINGAN is in the employ of a Constabulary Officer, but still attends school; wins a good share of athletic honors.

FRANCIS PADSING attends school; lives at the Mission; developing into a good helper.

BENJAMIN PILIU deserted us for the Roman Mission, with some younger boys, under the inducement of material advantage.

ROMANDO WAIANG came back from America and England, where he had been with an exhibition company, and has been very steady in school work; is also employed by a Constabulary Officer.

OUR PERIODICAL FRIENDS

—That is, our very steady friends, who have been sending periodicals to us. The Church Periodical Club has been very good to us always, and two or three others, individuals. We will not mention names, for some of them, we think, prefer to remain incognito, even to us; but we thank them. The papers and magazines, after edifying our community of five, are usually passed on to others, often sent to Sagada, so that they fulfil a multiple service. They give us a bird's-eye view of the world's doings. Meantime we await the day when some of our friends shall depart from the usual Transpacific aeroplane routes and glide down into our little mountain valley for a visit! The level ground by the brickyard near the river would be the best landing place. Any wearer of a g-string will point out the Mission. W. C. C.

THE PRIEST'S HOUSE.

After eight years of waiting, we see it actually going up. The main building will cover an area of 42 by 48 feet, the kitchen addition about 25 feet square; connecting passage, 15 by 15 feet. The fabric is of wood, single boarded (cheaper, and no rat space), single floored, i. e., no ceiling-in of the floor beams; the whole resting on stone piers, to which it is bolted, so that a typhoon cannot easily pick it up. The balloon frame is well braced against collapsing. Roof of corrugated iron with lattice ventilators in the ends. The rooms downstairs are for work and storage, viz., printing, carpentry, priest's office, sewing room, laboratory (or "messing-room"), photographic dark room, rice-pounding, general storage, wood storage, house boys' quarters. The priest's office will have in it a simple tablet with the inscription:

To the Glory of God, Who hath made of One Blood all Nations of Men, this Room has been erected, in loving memory of
GEORGE H. BOKER,
Doctor of Laws, Author, Diplomat, and Citizen of the World.

The upper floor will be living quarters for the priest-in-charge, viz., sala or common room, three bedrooms, oratory, dining room, two porches, bath and toilet room, pantry, kitchen, storage for food supplies.

The site is a fine one, directly overlooking the river and affording a good view of the two beautiful mountain gaps which open out to the north and east.

ABOUT CURIOS AGAIN.

After we sent out the last Bulletin with its notes concerning certain curios, we were somewhat embarrassed by the enactment of a customs law which, if strictly enforced, would have made it impossible to get articles from here to the States without more bother and expense than they would be worth. But recent rulings have removed this difficulty, and any native products of less value than $10 United States currency can be sent without customs annoyance. We therefore reiterate our willingness to send curios, and will supply the original announcement to anyone specially interested. W. C. C.

ELIZABETH

A little more than two years ago, as the four little girls, who were then the only baptized Igorot girls living at the mission, were sewing with me one afternoon, a girl, a little larger than they, appeared at the door of my room. She was rather unkempt looking, no "aklang" or waist, just the tapis or piece of cloth that does duty for skirt about her. She said, looking at one of the girls, "Ivfakam man!" ("Ask her!") I said. What does she want, Rose? thinking it was probably a request for a needle or some cloth, or perhaps to be allowed to come and sew. "Laichina ai enpafunyag," answered Rose, "She wants to be baptized." I asked whether the girls knew her; and they did. Her name was Yadchau and she lived in Bontok; had come to school that day and was going to live at the school, but wanted to be baptized. I sent her to Fr. Clapp with Rose and soon they came back with directions about instruction, etc. I asked her whether she would like to sew, and of course she would; so she stayed awhile and sewed. In a day or two the girls came in rather excited with Yadchau, who was crying. They said that some of the bigger girls at school, Ayachi in particular, the recognized leader among the girls, had told her to go away, that they did not want her there if she was going to be baptized. I mention Ayachi especially because in a few months, when the school closed, she came and asked to live here, and was later baptized and confirmed, and she and Elizabeth (Yadchau) became the best of friends. They were confirmed together. So, the girls asked, couldn't Yadchau live with us? Of course she could; and she came forthwith and the girls were very nice to her, and soon she was happy again. In a short time I learned her history. She had no parents and no brothers or sisters, although later she proved to be related to nearly everybody in Bontok, it seemed to me. She had evidently decided on her life all by herself. No other girls came voluntarily to school and she was not known to anyone at the mission. She had not been to sew as our other children had, for a long time before. They came to live with us because they had been compelled by the government authorities to go to school. Yadchau chose to come.

It has always seemed to me, and especially in the light of later developments, that it was a distinct leading of the Holy Spirit; and she responded at once. Here was a rather big girl (about 13 or 14, almost grown up for an Oriental) in the midst of a heathen village, suddenly throwing up that life, coming out of it, and at the very beginning, enduring persecution, because she wanted to become a Christian. I asked her once or twice what made her come, and she would always laugh (the jolliest laugh she had) and say "Laichik ankai"—"I just wanted to." And she never wavered except when I think she was not responsible, which I shall come to later. She seemed to take everything in such a whole-hearted way, and her religion meant so much to her. I recollect that one of our children died after a short illness at her town just across the river. Elizabeth said that it was too bad that she had gone home, and I said, yes, perhaps, if she had stayed here, even if she had been ill, we might have seen that she took her medicine, and she might have got well. Elizabeth said, "Ulai natoi," "Never mind that she is dead, she has gone to God," but she was afraid that her people would not let her have Christian burial—which proved to be the case. In Elizabeth's own illness (we found not long after that she had consumption. Her mother had died of it soon after her birth, I learned later), she was afraid that something would happen to prevent her burial in the Campo Santo and there is still the scrap of paper with these words in my writing and with Elizabeth's signature, "Mo matöiak, laichik ai mikaob iska Campo Santo"—"If I die, I want to be buried in Campo Santo;" and I remember the whispered "Kawis"—"Good," after the little document was safely deposited with Fr. Clapp.

I used to tell her how good it would be for her to sleep out of doors. This is an unheard-of thing among the Igorots. One must fasten everything up tight or else one must lose one's head in the night. I was greatly surprised then one night when she announced her intention of sleeping on the porch. I made her a blanket-gown, with a hood; and every night I used to tuck her up. After she began that, she never slept indoors, except part of one night, after a little fainting fit, and she had become frightened. The other girls could not get used to it at first and would ask her if she were not afraid. Once she said, No, she had God and the stars. She woke us all up to see the comet. One night there was a kanyau at a house near by and as she was going to bed she whispered that she was afraid. I asked why, and she said she was afraid that those people who were having the kanyau were doing it because later they were coming to take her head. I asked why they should want her head and she said she didn't know, but she felt it in her bones. I said, "Well, do you want to sleep indoors to-night? Or, I will sleep in the room opening on to the porch." She hesitated a little, then said, "Let God take care of it"; then, "Perhaps He doesn't want me to die here." I told her the doors through to my bedroom could be open and she could call if she wanted me. She did not call, however, and the next morning I said, "Well, Elizabeth, he didn't come, did he?" "Who?" she said. "The Enemy," I answered. "Nobody but God." At one time an old man had been killed, not far from us, by the brother of one of our girls, and one day when the girl's mother came in to see her, she was alarmed at the glass windows and thought the enemy would surely come and kill some of us. Elizabeth laughed at her, and the woman asked her if they were not afraid, and Elizabeth said, "No, we are not afraid when we are baptized," and then she went on to give reasons for the faith that was in her.

I am going to digress for a minute to tell something that was so funny that this woman said. She was looking at the pictures and among them several Saints and Madonnas; and the thing which interested her most was that they all had their heads on one side. Why did they do this? she asked. "Katsawiancha," said Elizabeth, "it is their custom."

Some of the girls, all, in fact, got some of Elizabeth's courage about sleeping out of doors and used to take turns in sleeping on the porch. Until she was very ill, and a good deal even then, she was always full of fun and laughter, loving a joke, and a most sociable little being. Old women would come and sit and gossip with her just as they would with each other. I used to wish they were at the other end of the earth when she was so ill, because they brought all their superstitions, and in her weakened state they affected her as they could not have done had she been well. I suppose that with her strong faith, it was natural that the devil should do his utmost against her, and I think he did. She had some desperately hard times before the end.

One or two old women used to come and blow on her—a sovereign remedy for all diseases. Only certain old women can do it. They rub their hands over the patient and blow hard and call on Lumawig, the Igorot heathen god. I used to ache to see them doing it to Elizabeth. Once when we had decided that we would not have that any more, and one of them came, she whispered to me over the old woman's head, "Ipawam!" "Forbid her." But one in particular used to tell her that she ought to go back to town, that she could not get better without, and the poor child, in her distress of mind and body, was overpersuaded sometimes and would go off, although she hardly ever stayed over night.

Once in particular I recall the last time she went. I had been away from the house and, on going back, found her gone. I guessed at once what had happened, but thought it best not to go after her, but I could not get her out of my mind all day. She was so weak that I could not see how she could stand the discomfort in a native house, just a board to lie on. So in the afternoon I sent two of the girls to ask her if she did not want to come back, and they came back carrying her. The poor little thing had got up there, but was too weak to get back. All the people of the house where she had gone were in the fields at work and she had stayed there all alone all day. Her face was covered with tearstain and soot. I asked her later whether she was glad when the girls came, and she said, "Yes, but I thought they would come. I thought you would know that I was crying and send them." I told her that I had not felt happy about her because I had felt that she was unhappy. I told her that she was a "naliwliw" little girl (crazy), and she said, "Naliwliwak," "I am crazy." It was after this that we wrote the paper about her being buried in the Campo Santo. She was afraid she might die up in town and the people would bury her there and not tell us.

All went well for a time, but then she began to refuse to eat anything, even chicken, which she had always seemed to enjoy, and after a time I discovered that some of the old of the women had heard that we bought vegetables, chickens, etc., from a certain region, and lo! people from that place had killed Elizabeth's father—I think it was—at any rate, a close relative, and it seems that dire are the consequences of eating anything from such a place. The old women had told Elizabeth that our purchases had been the cause of all her sickness. If one finds that one has eaten of the enemy's food, like this, the evil may possibly be averted or lessened by putting one's foot on the spear or axe of someone from there; and only the Saturday before she died, some people came to me to change some money, and from her cot around the corner of the porch Elizabeth called to me to come quick. I went and she said that those men were "Ilakud," men from her enemy's region, and asked me to get a spear or head-axe from one of them, so I did and she put it down and with much difficulty got up and put her foot upon it. I wonder sometimes what she thinks of it all now. Poor little soul! I used to ache so to understand better. It is so hard to get at their thoughts. Often they will keep it all to themselves for so long, just as Elizabeth did about this.

A thing that seemed hard for her to understand was that she got worse in spite of our prayers. For some months after she began sleeping out-of-doors she seemed to gain a great deal and she was jubilant because she felt so well. She loved to work, especially to weave, and she was quite the best weaver among the girls. Indeed, I think her love of it hastened the end. She undertook to weave a large blanket and a small one for one of her friends, and would weave all day if I did not stop her almost by main force; and when she had finished these she wanted to begin at once on something she was going to weave for me. I made her rest for a few days, but her strength was gone. She wove for a day or two and then one day she put it down, saying that she was going to lie down, that she was tired. That was the last weaving. In about seven weeks she was gone.

But about the prayers. She used to love her Communions and prayers, but one day she said that she would not make her Communion, that it was no good, and that her prayers were just words, words, no use. It seemed pretty hard that with all the discomfort of body, for dropsy set in and the poor child was in pain a good deal of the time, she should be tormented in her mind and soul too. Three days before she died, she kept on saying something to me which I did not understand, and I went and asked the girls what it was. They seemed a little horrified and said, "Oh, she wants to die!" Then one of them showed most graphically. She wanted to end it all by hanging herself. The children said, "As they do in town." I said, "What! kill themselves!" "Yes, when they are very sick," they said. I said, "But not little girls like Elizabeth!" "Yes," they said, "everybody. They take a wakis (girdle) and do it." And Elizabeth would beg them to give her a girdle. Once she told one of them that she only wanted to look at it, but I shook my head at the other child and she did not give it. She made her confession and Communion, however, the day before she died, and the day she died was very peaceful. She roused a few times, but said she was tired. Once in the afternoon she asked to sit up, and when I held her, she smiled quite brightly and said, "Suaaak adwani," "I am going home now." I told her I was sure God was calling her now. I was not sure whether it was the old love of making fun and teasing—the children sometimes try to tease me by saying that they are going home—or whether she knew that she was going to her true home, for we had talked a great deal about Paradise and what she might perhaps do—of how well she would be, no cough, no tiredness when she walked. The Sunday night before she died, when the girls asked to sing, as they almost always do on Sunday evenings, she said she did not want them to sing; so we did not, but after a little while she said, "Sinyola, laichik 88," "I should like 88," and it seemed almost prophetic: "Lord, in this Thy mercy's day." She knew so little English and yet it seemed as if some of the meaning of this must have come to her.

She died on the evening of the twentieth of September, perfectly, quietly, out on the porch, and just afterwards the full moon came up and the whole place was bathed in its light. She got her wish and was buried with the beautiful Church burial service instead of with that horrible heathen rites. We were a little afraid that some of her relatives would try to have her taken to town for burial, but they did not. Some of them came quite early in the morning and they said they had come to bury her, but it was only that they wanted to be present. One very old man helped to dig her grave, and they came to the church and followed to Campo Santo. There is an Igorot custom of putting a new blanket on the body and they brought one up to the cemetery and asked to be allowed to put it over her body. We felt that it could do no harm and it seemed to comfort them to do it. We could not understand just what the old man was saying as he spread it over, probably some regular form to Lumawig and to the anito or spirit.

LETTER FROM FATHER WOOD.

I have been off in the country preaching parochial missions and hearing confessions. It was all a joy, but it is still greater joy to have my whole Lent at home at St. Saviour's. I know you would all love it, too. On Sundays Matins, Litany and Sermon (all plain) begin at 7.30. Then comes a short break while the altar is lighted; the priest puts on his chasuble, and the thurifer runs to my kitchen for the coal. The High Mass is the joy of my life. There is no other service until Sunday School, for old and young, in the various class-rooms, at 2.00 P. M., followed by Evensong at 3.00. Being "in partibus infidelium," we have permission to use as the second lesson the same passage of Scripture we have just been studying in Sunday School. A brief exposition is given as it is read, aided wherever possible by a large colored picture. During the week, except Saturday, there is daily religious instruction to the children by the Parochial Schools and any others who may come. On Wednesdays the Penitential Office precedes Mass; and the Litany is sung in procession in the P. M., the priest in violet cope. On Fridays, the Litany is said in the A. M., the Stations of the Cross in the afternoon—a beautiful, hearty devotion. And in the evening the Penitential Office, with instruction on the Passion, illustrated with lantern slides. The Children's Mass is on Saturdays. I celebrate Tuesdays at the Women's Hospital, Thursdays at the Industrial School, and Fridays at St. Andrew's. On Mondays I have the pleasure of a Mass in English, which I say occasionally at the Oratory in the Boone Divinity School, or at the Lady Altar here at St. Saviour's House, when I renew the Blessed Sacrament in the Tabernacle.

WATER LILIES.

The old boat had carried them safely, if slowly, across the little lake, to the place where the pond lilies grew. Patience preferred to row, for reasons which shall presently appear. But it was not so easy, after they had left the center of the lake, said by credulous youngsters to be "bottomless." The lily-pads clung to the oars, and as Patience toiled at them dank weeds and mud showed themselves from time to time. Finally, she took in one oar, and used the other for poling and pushing, while her brother gathered the lilies. "Horrid, muddy place," said she,—"Ugh!" as a big dragon-fly bumped her forehead, "I'd rather row all day than grope around in this muddy water. I'm glad you're here to do it for me," and she smiled at her brother. "I'll change places with you, and row back, after I get the lilies," said he; "push over to the left a little, Pat." "That's the mussiest and hottest place yet," said Patience; but she shoved the boat around. "The rank, mussy-looking places sometimes have the very sweetest flowers," said her brother, "and the mud they come from is worse than anything we see above water. That's an allegory, little sister," he continued, as they changed places, and he took the oars: "I often find the most wonderful virtues of courage, and love, and endurance growing in the homes of the miserable; sometimes I see them in poor wretches brought up in homes of vice." "Everybody says you have so much faith in human nature," said Patience, smiling. "Since the Son of God took human nature on Him, and was made Man," said her brother, "there is no limit to what one may expect to see, since He

Years after, Patience, now an experienced worker among subnormal and defective children, took up some special work in a large city. There seemed to be no end to the disagreeables to be encountered; the conditions were made as favorable as possible by her employers and patrons, and friends gave generously, from time to time, in specific cases. But the people themselves were the difficulty. It was a region in which the saloon reigned supreme. It seemed to be about the only resource for the people, in their off-hours; they were of a sort who don't take kindly to charity; they had pride enough to object to having "swell guys come snoopin' around, tryin' to give us somethin' for nothin'.". So they had none of the usual allevi'ations—bathhouses, playgrounds, milk stations, settlements. "We'll have nothin' but what we pay for," they said, and Patience sympathized, enjoying this sturdy pride. But, alas, they had not yet reached the point where they knew what was best for themselves; or perhaps their weary, overworked lives gave little time for planning. Anyhow, the men, after rising and getting off to work at 4 A. M., returned in the evenings, fagged and depressed. There was the saloon, with its drink to refresh, and its lively bits of news to cheer and rouse—many of the men were in a chronic state of "booze," and could hardly have worked otherwise.

Then the women, with their dreary little lives one long round of monotonous work, baby-tending, and sickness. With hardly an exception, they began by taking "just a little," to keep up in the hopeless treadmill, and it pulled them down, and kept them there. Then the children of such parents—sickly as babies, dull and backward in school as children, familiar with vice as they grew up. Not one boy in ten could get through a day without cigarettes; a common occurence was for a crowd of little fellows to steal whiskey, and go off on the lots to drink. There were more things, and worse, but any day's paper will give you more of it than you can bear.

This was worse than the mud of the pond, and harder to push one's way through. One day Patience, sick at heart, took her home-bound car, after a morning of what seemed like utterly useless toil. It was oppressively hot, many were drinking heavily, many more little children needing country and seashore than could possibly be sent, and the heat made people reckless and ugly. The dirty, sordid streets were horrible to her, as she rode through them, and she had that sensation, which every social worker knows, of wading through mud, to the very ears.

Mud! that reminded her of something—what was it? Closing her eyes a moment, the weary brain rested, half-dazed with the noise and heat, on something that had been once; something pleasant—

Oh, yes; the lake, and the lilies, and her brother's kind, half-quizzical face, as he pulled the lilies out of the mud which she shrank from touching. What was that he had said? "I find often the most wonderful virtues * * * in poor wretches brought up in homes of vice."

Brother knew. True, they were then living in a pretty country village, and there was little in the way of vice to be seen. But brother took long tramps up into the mountains, where there were queer doings, and most men did not like to go; down by the iron mines, from which he returned with a very sober face and clay-stained clothing. Yes,—he certainly knew. Well, then the virtues—could she find any in her own mud-patch? She smiled to herself a little and opened her eyes. Then she smiled still more, for she encountered the anxious gaze of a French boy, whom she knew slightly. She had not seen him for a year. Then, the child, although barely fourteen, did really seem to be smoking himself to death; he certainly smoked an enormous number of cigarettes daily. But her remonstrances were of no avail, and as the boy did not buy the cigarettes himself, but procured them from older boys, she could not watch and report the cigar store to the authorities. Louis come over and sat beside her. "I want to tell you something," he said. "You thought I was terrible bad to be smokin' all them cigarettes, didn't you?" "I don't know about that," said Patience, "it's hard to break up the habit, and you boys begin when you're too little to realize the harm. But I will tell you, that I've praved many times that you might be able to quit; have you cut it down at all?" Louis looked pleased. "I had to smoke then; you see, I was makin' good money at the glass works, and Mom, she couldn't go out to clean while the baby was so little, and Pop, he went off—thank goodness!—so we had a little peace, and Mom and me could make out pretty well, but I tell you, I couldn't quit smokin', my head would ache so ter'ble I couldn't work." "But, Sonnie," said Patience, "you smoked twenty a day then, and they cost money; how could you even get the money for them?" "I cleaned stables for a fellow on Sundays, and he gave me all the cigarettes I wanted; he offered me whiskey once, but I said, 'Not for mine; Pop's enough fer one family!' Now, you know, I'm not a kid any more—I was fifteen last winter—and last time Pop came home I got chesty and told him he could work or I'd get the Cruelty on him. I was kinder scared, but I had ter do somepin, and Mom, she didn't dast. But he's pretty fair now;—and say, this is what I wanted to tell you: you said I could quit by stopping off one cigarette a day, and I did, and now I can go without 'em, if I want to.' He had reached his own corner, and stood at the car-door looking back at his friend, and Patience returned the look with one of deep respect and admiration. He was growing up through the mud, unfolding the virtues of devotion, courage, and self-discipline.

A pitiful voice hailed her from a street corner, and she signalled the conductor, getting out hastily, not knowing what was wanted. She almost regretted it, when she saw Michael McCall, whose young daughter had been rescued by the local authorities from the wretched conditions, the drinking, swearing, and stealing, of her home and its neighborhood. Michael had resented this, and Patience had been more sorry for him than she had thought wise to show. The chief fault lay with the mother, a miserable creature, and "a man can't go back on his own wife, can he?" Patience, half afraid of him, could only say that if he ever got his home into decent shape she would do all she could to have his daughter returned to him. But now she hardly knew the man. He was neatly dressed, and perfectly sober; the old bullying manner was gone, and he begged her to step down the side street and have a look at the house he had rented. She went, gladly. The house was neat as wax, in a decent neighborhood—and, wonders of wonders, Mrs. McCall was there, also perfectly sober, and clad in a new gingham dress. Her usual costume in other time had been so ragged and dirty that the materials could not be imagined. Michael waved his hand,—"Rent paid in advance, lady." He pulled out the receipt and showed it. "Give me my little girl back, she'll forget her old Pop before I have ever a chance to show her what I can do. Get her back for me, lady!" Patience could hardly believe her eyes, but gave the man the necessary directions as to papers, and so on, promising to write a letter in his behalf. She went out into the glaring street again, so happy that she hardly minded the blistering sun. Another virtue—father-love — triumphing over the jeers and sneers of "th' old set back there," not to mention the long, patient struggle it must have been to get that poor wife into respectable ways again. But Patience had been wiser to have reckoned with that noon-day sun, in the dog days, on The Flats. Suddenly, the cartrack seemed far away, even the shady side of the street seemed unattainable, but she staggered toward it—

"There, there, lady; there now; where's the Wagon?'

Patience sat up, bewildered, and looked around. She was in a little house which she had never visited since the day, three months ago, when she made an "investigation," which had resulted very unpleasantly for the inmates of said house. They had "had it in" for her ever since, she was well aware, and she had been advised not to go there again. In fact, a friendly policeman had hovered anxiously about, whenever he saw her going in that direction. Well, they had called the patrol wagon; were they having their revenge, now that she was faint and helpless? She didn't realy care much, and closed her eyes again. "You, Johnny, you let that ice alone; I want it all for the lady's forehead." Ice, in that neighborhood, is scarce and expensive. Patience wondered who had bought it; perhaps her friend, the policeman—

"There's the wagon, thank God; yis, sergeant, the lady do be laid up a bit wid the heat; I bought three cents' worth o' ice fer her head; shall I help yez into the wagon with her?"

But Patience sat up, weak and dizzy, but again happy. The rough faces that surrounded her were the faces of her most dreaded foes; she had all but broken up their home, and caused their arrest; yet here was the virtue of hospitality blossoming in the midst of the mud. She made no allusion to the "late unpleasantness," but declared herself able to take another car, with help. At the last moment, however, she suddenly asked one of the young girls of the house to ride home with her, and Nellie did so, showing a remarkable knack at making her comfortable. They had a long, cosy talk, after they reached the boarding-house where Patience lived, and went up to her room. Patience found herself really glad of the girl's surprisingly deft ministrations, and Nellie stayed a long time. As she was leaving, she looked around the room, and then at Patience with a queer little smile. "If I had a room like this, by jingo I'd want to stay in it. I shouldn't think you'd like it much down there on the Flats." "I do like the Flats," said Patience, drowsily, and I like the people, and I like them better all the time." "Well, so long," said Nellie; "come and see us; you haven't been to our house for a long time."

The door closed on this flower of Christian courtesy, and Patience went to sleep, while the room seemed to her to be full of the scent of water lilies.

THE BONTOK BULLETIN—AN OCCASIONAL PERSONAL LETTER.

PRINTED, AS WE FIND TIME TO DO IT, ON THE MISSION PRESS.

The girls have been much interested in the R. I. P. on the cross at the head of the grave. Every time we go, they read it all, saying to the last over and over:

ELIZABETH YADCHAU
Died September 20th, 1910
Aged 15 Years
R.I.P.

"Rest in Peace," "Rest in Peace," they say. The peace of a departed spirit is new to them. For them, unless conciliated by feasts and ceremonies, it returns bringing sickness, disaster or death. The girls were a good deal afraid for some time after Elizabeth's death. At first they wanted to go home, but we persuaded them from this, telling them that God was taking care of Elizabeth's soul, that she was there learning more and more every day. I reminded them that what I had said of Christina's spirit (she was the little girl who had died across the river) had proved true, that she had never come back to trouble anybody, and they said that that was so, and it seemed to reassure them a little; but I noticed that it was some time before they would go into another room at night without a light; and they slept very close together with their blankets over their heads, a thing they had not done for months, but which is quite customary in town—for fear of anitos.

Much as I miss her, I think the way Elizabeth lived and died with us has been a blessing to all, especially to the girls of the mission.

A word as to the apparent yielding to the practice of heathen customs by our baptized children. In the very early stages of Christianity it is sometimes necessary to yield, or to appear to yield, more especially in cases where there is great weakness because of illness, as in this case. I think all will see the reasonableness of this.

A REQUEST

Just before dinner to-night (Shrove Tuesday) Josephine thrust this letter into my hand and hurried away.

"Dear father Clapp. Laichinmi ai maid tinfami isnan mikalma önkanas Ester Lachinmi ai ichowam nan lakun nan Tinfa isnan teken ai Mission.

(Signed) THE GIRLS."

[Translation.]

"We want to have no sugar on Fridays until Easter. We want to give the value of the sugar to some other mission."

"The girls" are fourteen bright-eyed children who have come to us as the second-fruits of our work here; very dear children, though full of faults; selfish, yet generous. At Epiphany they earned money to make a special missionary offering. It is little things like this that help us over many rough spots.

TUKUKAN.

The Church building at Tukukan, a small barrio five miles north of Bontok, is now nearing completion. It is built on a site overlooking the town and from which is a splendid view. The site chosen, though it necessitates a steep climb from the village, was the one the people themselves wanted. And as they have to do the climbing, not we, it was thought best to build the church where they wished it to be. The truth of the matter is, I think, that they do not want a white man living in the village, where his presence is often an inconvenience during their kanyas. Their customs might consciously or unconsciously be interfered with.

The building is divided into three parts. In the front portion is the chapel, then comes the schoolroom, and in the rear is the room or rooms for the priest. It is not intended that he should live there. Services will be held but twice a week, and as Tukukan is so near to Bontok—it takes but an hour and a half to get there—it is not necessary that the priest in charge should move from Bontok.

It is, however, our purpose to open a school there. There is no public school in Tukukan and there is not likely to be any. But there are many little boys who want to go to school and whose parents are willing that they should, provided they can do so and not leave Tukukan. I consider the school very important, as it will be an entering wedge for the teaching of our Christian faith. Practically all of the children in the mission at Bontok have come to us through attendance at school. For some reason or other it is very difficult to get those children who do not attend school at all interested. Their whole life in the native barrio, with its heathen superstitions and customs and its irregularity, is against it. For this reason we feel that the school is very important. It will be necessary to have a native teacher who knows enough English to teach it; and who can also teach them to read their own language.

When I go up to Tukukan and see the bright faces of these little boys who come to tell me that they want to be baptized or that they want to go to school I feel that I can hardly wait until we can begin in earnest.

These little brown folks are God's children just as much as we are, and, believe me, they are just as capable of being loved. One who has learned to love them—and it has not been hard to do so—must long to give them a vision of better things than they now have. Not more material things—though they are not to be despised—but, best things of all, a knowledge of the Father's love for them and a planting in their hearts of a love for God, no matter how feeble it may be at first.

I have said nothing about the little girls, and why not? Because they are very timid as yet, and will not let me come anywhere near them. But that will pass away with time; and I do not care to give the false impression that the little girls are not worth consideration.

With the adults I confess to a feeling that little can be done with them. The Igorot here is very tenacious of his customs, and is not at all convinced that the ways and beliefs of the white man are superior to his.

Your prayers are earnestly asked for the work of this mission at Tukukan.

E. A. S.

LAST WORD.

The first words were written in November, the last are written in the second week after Easter. Pablo has a good many duties besides printing. We cannot write many times a year at this rate. We do not know the future; but, strengthened by your prayers, the mission may go on and many souls won to the standards of the Lord Jesus, to Whom be the glory.

PARISH NOTES.

The Bishop of Salina is expected to preach in St. Clement's on Sunday, October 29th.

By the will of Mrs. Elias Boudinot, a bequest is made to the parish of $36,000, to be used in the erection of a lady chapel. A further gift of $5,000 provides for its endowment.

We need very much a set of table silver for use in the parish building. The kitchen is being increasingly used aud we are at present obliged to depend on the generosity of those who are willing to lend spoons and forks when they are needed.

We need, very much for our work in the guilds and Sunday School, a stereopticon lantern. One can be obtained from the Sunday School Commission, in New York, which would be adequate for our uses, for about fifty dollars. Contributions for this object will be welcome.

The special preachers for the parish festival will be as follows: Thursday, November 23d, the Rev. Dr. Van Allen, rector of the Church of the Advent, Boston. Sunday, November 26th, A. M., the Rev. Fr. Bull, S.S.J.E., Provincial Superior of the Society in America; P. M., the Rev. W. A. McClenthen, rector of Mt. Calvary Church, Baltimore.

The Bishop of Salina writes that he has at last procured a priest for the work of which he spoke at St. Clement's last year. It was suggested at that time that the parish make itself repsonsible for the salary of the man, for whom the sum of $300 must be obtained. It would be a happy thing if we might do this. Contributions for this "special" missionary object may be sent to the rector.

On the Feast of St. Simon and St. Jude, the Bishop Coadjutor and Bishop Suffragan are to be consecrated in the Church of the Advocate. On that day the seven o'clock mass at St. Clement's will be said in the church, and as many of the parishioners as are able are asked to be present, and to unite with the priest in offering the Holy Sacrifice for a blessing upon the Diocese and those to be elevated to the Episcopate.

We have on our desk a copy of "The Origin of the Red Cross," a translation of Henri Dunant's famous book, "Un Souvenir de Solferino," by Mrs. David H. Wright, one of our parishioners. This is probably the first English translation of a book that has had wide influence, and with it is printed a letter of appreciation from President Taft. The price of the book is $1.00, and it may be obtained from the John C. Winston Co., of Philadelphia.

We are passing through the customary changes that, as we have often noted, seem to fall to the lot of the parish in the autumn. Mr. W. E. Hall, who has been our organist since December, has accepted a position in Chicago, and entered upon his new duties the first of September. His place is to be filled by Mr. Henry S. Fry, organist at Trinity Memorial Chapel, who has already taken charge of the choir but will not play at St. Clement's until December first. Mr. Fry is not a stranger to us as he has presided at our organ, under Mr. Sears, for three successive St. Clement's days.

An alteration has been made in the second floor of the parish house during the summer, which will provide better and more convenient accomodation for the kitchen arrangements. The two rooms at the east end of the building have been connected by a door and a proper sink has been installed, the gas range set up, and all the cupboards placed in the larger room. This gives us not only a larger kitchen, but also provides a serving room, which has been needed for some time. The old retiring room has been made into a room for the wafer baking and the "cott a crimping."

The Sunday School will open on the first Sunday of October. Again, as in former years, the rector urges parents to send their children on the first day, and see to it that they attend regularly. The children of the parish are also expected to attend the 9.15 mass on Sunday. A record of attendance will be kept. It is manifestly impossible for the clergy to provide for the religious instruction of the young people if the parents themselves fail to take any apparent interest in the matter. Last winter was more encouraging, in point of numbers, than has been the case heretofore, and it is hoped that all who came last year will be present on October first at the children's mass.

ELIZABETH COLEMAN BOUDINOT.

Elizabeth Coleman Boudinot entered into eternal life on the fourth day of August, at Munich, Bavaria. Mrs. Boudinot was one of the oldest members of the parish, of whom too few are left. In her girlhood she accepted intuitively the Catholic Faith, and on coming to Philadelphia found her spiritual home quite naturally at St. Clement's. In later years she loved to talk of the early days of the parish life, and of Father Prescott, whom she knew well and for whom she cherished a warm affection. Attached to the parish as she was, she was yet more firmly devoted to the Truth for which it stands, and her devotion found expression in the gift she bestowed upon St. Clement's at her death.

As has been fittingly said by one who knew her well, "to her the Catholic and Apostolic Faith was an earnest reality. It was to her the Mass that mattered, and for many years it was her custom to begin each day at the Altar of God. Like a true child of Holy Church she was ever jealous for the honor and devotion due to the Mother of God, whose protection and intercession she sought at all times."

May she find rest and peace in the Presence of our Divine Lord and His Saints.

SOME MESSENGERS AND WHERE THEY WENT. XXI.

Our study of the Missions has now brought us to the period when the American Revolution had left the Church in this country somewhat in the condition of a very young child trying to walk alone for the first time. We have seen how the "Venerable Society" amid discouragements and difficulties of every sort, persevered in maintaing the work of the Church, and the S. P. G. missionaries pursued their calling in the true spirit of martyrdom.

And now, before the American Church could become a power in the mission field, it had to find itself, organize, formulate plans of action. This took nearly half a century—the difficulties were many, and the perplexities great.

The Revolutionary War ended with the Peace of Paris, which took effect January 20th, 1783, although the announcement was not made in New York till March. Church people now found themselves members of a headless body, struggling with the new problem of self-government, every avenue of duty in Church as well as State leading to new and untried ways. Especially, the management of the Church without the direction of Bishops—what should be done about this? There were those, even within the Church, who were unwilling to be governed by Bishops, perhaps being unable to dissociate the idea of temporal power of some kind from that office, as they had always known it in the Established Church in England.

It took some courage, then, for the churchmen who met at Annapolis, Maryland, in August, to formulate the "Declaration," which may be taken as an expression of the minds of the most devoted Church people of that time, and was constantly used as the basis of discussions resulting in other Declarations, until the mind of the Church was settled. The Maryland Declaration is noticeable especially as being the first use of the name which became the legal title of the American. Although long, it shall be quoted here entire, and can we, as we read it, not try to put ourselves in the place of its framers, and realize their courage and devotion?

A declaration of certain fundamental rights and liberties of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Maryland, had and made at a convention or meeting of clergy of said Church, duly assembled at Annapolis, August 13th, 1783, agreable to a vote of the General Assembly passed upon a petition presented in the name and behalf of said clergy.

Whereas, by the Constitution and form of government of this State, "all persons professing the Christian religion are equally entitled to protection in their religious liberty, and no person ought (by law or otherwise) to be molested in his person or estate, on account of his religious persuasion or profession, or for his religious practice, unless, under color of religion, any man shall disturb the good order, peace, or safety of the State, or shall infringe the laws of morality, or disturb others in their natural, civil, or religious rights;" and

Whereas, the ecclesiastical and spiritual independence of the different religious denominations, societies, and congregations or Churches of Christians in this State necessarily follows from, or is included in, their civil independence;

Therefore we, the clergy of the Protestant Episcopal Church of Maryland, (heretofore denominated the Church of England, as by law established), with all duty to the civil authority of the State, and with all love and good-will to our fellow-Christians of every other religious denomination, do hereby declare, make known, and claim, the following, as certain of the fundamental rights and liberties inherent in and belonging to the said Episcopal Church, not only of common right, but agreeably to the express words, spirit, and design of the Constitution and form of government aforesaid, viz:

I. We consider it as the undoubted right of the said Protestant Episcopal Church, in common with other Christian churches under the American Revolution, to complete and preserve herself as an entire Church, agreably to her ancient usages and profession, and to have the free enjoyment and free exercise of those purely spiritual powers which are essential to the being of every church or congregation of the faithful, and which, being derived only from Christ and His Apostles, are to be maintained independent of every foreign or other jurisdiction, so far as may be consistent with the civil rights of society.

II. That ever since the Reformation, it hath been the received doctrine of the Church whereof we are members, (and which, by the Constitution of this State, is entitled to the perpetual enjoyment of certain property and rights under the denomination of the Church of England), "That there be these three orders of ministers in Christ's Church, Bishops, Priests, and Deacons," and that an Episcopal Ordination and Commission are necessary to the valid administration of the Sacraments, and the due exercise of the ministerial functions in the said Church.

III. That, without calling in question the rights, modes, and forms, of any other Christian churches or societies, or wishing the least contest with them on that subject, we consider and declare it to be an essential right of the said Protestant Episcopal Church, to have and enjoy the continuance of the said three orders of ministers forever, so far as concerns matters purely spiritual; and that no persons, in the character of ministers, except such as are in the communion of the said Church, and duly called to the ministry by regular Episcopal ordination, can or ought to be admitted into or enjoy any of the "churches, chapels, gebes, or other property," formerly belonging to the Church of England in this State and which by the Constitution and form of government is secured to the said Church forever, by whatever name she, the said Church, or her superior order of ministers, may in future be denominated.

IV. That as it is the right, so it will be the duty of the said Church when duly organized, constituted, and represented in a synod, or convention, of the different orders of her ministry and people, to revise her liturgy, forms of prayer, and public worship, in order to adapt the same to the late Revolution and other local circumstances of America; which it is humbly conceived may and will be done, without any other or future departure from the venerable order and beautiful forms of worship of the Church from whence we sprung, than may be found expedient in the change of our situation from a daughter to a sister-church.

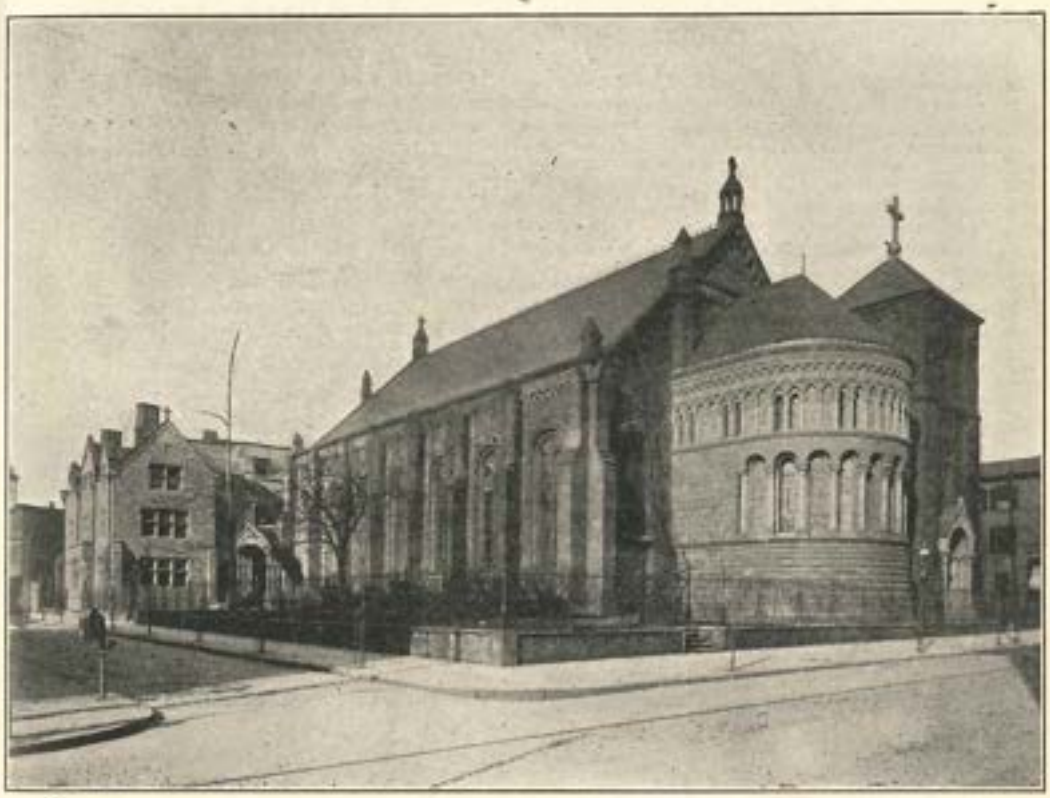
Do we hear a little sound of homesickness in that last paragraph?—a thought of the land across the sea where, worthily or unworthily, the Church was led by its Bishops as a matter of course, and no questions raised? Even there, it was not much more than a century since Presbyterianism (1646) had been established, and had held its own for some years. True, the English clergy had gone about their duties using the services,—from memory, when deprived of their service-books,—and the English nation as a whole had despised the new order. The question once raised, however, went on disturbing the church-people in the Colonies. The feeling as to an Episcopate was divided, both within and without the Church. Prominent Quakers are said to have desired it in America, to keep down the Presbyterians, whom they dreaded. The Southern clergy included some who were opposed to it, probably the chief difficulty was that they could not dissociate the idea of temporal power from the office of the Bishops, having known them only as heads of the Established Church of England. There were odd ideas on this subject among the people throughout America. We have spoken of this difficulty above, and the dread of the Bishops as a temporal power was not confined to church people. One of our early Bishops—the saintly Griswold—used to say that as a child he was seriously told by the neighbors that if Bishops came to this country, they would take one-tenth of everything, including children. In childish dreams he shuddered at the thought of the terible Bishops, and he wished that if one did happen to land, he himself might escape by an immediate death!

In the Church, especially in the South, the feeling against the Episcopate did not die out for years. When the First General Convention was being planned, South Carolina sent a message stipulating that no Bishops should be settled in that State! And for some time after, there were those among Virginia churchmen who declared that Bishops and Presbyters were of equal authority in ancient days.



Realizing the turbulence of the times, and the bewildering new sense of liberty, we may thank God for the clear-headed and loyal churchmen who met at Annapolis in 1783, whose Declaration sounded through the leaderless ranks of the Church as a trumpet that gave forth no uncertain sound.

THE RESTORATION OF THE NAVE.

As will be noticed in another column of the magazine the offering on St. Clement's Day will be devoted to the fund for the restoration of the Nave. In this connection it may be as well to give some idea of the suggested plan that has been in the mind of the vestry for some years. At the time that the High Altar was erected Mr. Sellers was asked to suggest a scheme for the re-decoration of the Church with the probable cost of such an undertaking. A tentative plan was submitted, but nothing further was done in the matter, as it was thought wiser to wait until the parish finances should be in better condition. After three years the vestry feels that the time has come to begin at least to make a definite effort to raise a fund for this purpose. The suggested improvements are as follows:

The side walls to be faced with stone ashlar to a height of about eight feet above the floor with stone window sills, jambs, and quoins to frame and finish the window openings. The wall surface above the stone wainscoting to be finished in stucco. The roof is to be repaired and alternate trusses removed and replaced with new trusses of hammer beam construction of oak, the remaining bowstring trusses to be reinforced with oak casing to make them conform with the new work. All trusses to be finished at the wall with carved stone brackets conforming with the stone work introduced elsewhere. The plaster ceiling to be removed and replaced with oak boards. These changes, particularly the introduction of the stone facing, involve some reinforcement of the foundation below, giving an opportunity at the same time to provide for the better support of the floor joists, which are doubtless to a greater or less extent affected by decay where they rest in the existing walls. It is also proposed to make some improvement to the cellar window openings for better light and ventilation. According to an estimate submitted at the time this matter was under consideration, the cost involved in the above improvements to the Church building amounted to about $19,800.

At this time we must also take into consideration the question of the organ. This is becoming increasingly important. While our organ is unusually fine in certain respects, the action is very antiquated, and only one who plays upon it can appreciate the real difficulty of the undertaking and the amount of physical strength involved. The time is not far distant when we shall find it difficult to procure a competent organist who is willing to put up with existing conditions. We have been fortunate in this respect, but we ask a great deal of the musician of the present day when we place such an instrument at his disposal.

The plan for the Nave then necessarily calls for the rebuilding of the organ. It is proposed to divide the organ into three sections, one, containing the loudest pipes, to be placed in the tower over the sacristy, connecting with an opening cut through the east wall, to which this section of the instrument would extend and terminate in an arrangement of pipes bracketed on the face of the east wall. On the opposite side of the sanctuary arch there would be a second group of pipes bracketed to correspond with the others, thus forming two principal sections on each side of the arch. The third section it is proposed to place on the west wall, bracketed out over the confessional stalls, the bracketing being a feature of the stone work at that point. The cost of such an organ, irrespective of the alterations necessary to the building, would involve not less than $12,000.

The arrangement of the organ at the east end of the Nave opens the way for the erection of a Lady Chapel at the head of the south aisle.

At the time these estimates were given they included repairs to woodwork, refacing exterior surfaces of walls, cornices, etc., and the construction of a yard wall of medium height to take the place of the iron fence.

These estimates would now be subject to revision, but it is well for us to have in mind something approaching the probable cost.

We can at least commence the building up of a fund for this purpose, and the offering on St. Clement's Day will be applied to this end.

THE DEDICATION OF ST. MICHAEL'S MONASTERY.

On the Feast of the Holy Guardian Angels, October 2d, the Holy Cross Fathers dedicated their new monastery at Sewanee, Tenn. The hour for service was set for 9.30, and long before that hour the friends of the school and of the order began to arrive, driving in from the country round about. Many persons came from the University, and the girls from St. Mary's School were given a holiday that they might attend the dedication services. A number of the members of Battle Creek Mission drove up the mountain, and Squire Tait brought his eighty-two years and his six feet seven inches of stature, riding up the mountain trail on his mule.

The day proved propitious and the congregation were gathered under the trees before the door to listen to a sermon by Bishop Weller, who came from Fond du Lac to be present at the service. The sermon was a splendid vindication for the religious life and a declaration of its need in the Church to-day.

After the sermon all went to the Chapel of the Monastery, where Bishop Gailor confirmed five persons, one a boy of the school and the others old ladies from the Battle Creek Mission.

Fr. Hughson then sang mass. The plain song was well rendered by the St. Andrew's boys. Nothing could be more touching or edifying than to hear the mass sung by these mountain boys. There is a perfect simplicity combined with rare devotion and reverence that one finds only in places where the Catholic faith is not only taught, but consistently practiced.

After the mass the Bishop of the Diocese blessed the house, saying an appropriate collect in each room.

The new monastery is built of tile and stucco, with the second story of wood. On the first floor is a commodious chapel (St. Michael's), a large refectory with convenient kitchen and pantries, and the offices of the father in charge and the house father.

On the second floor are a cheerful library containing an excellent collection of books, the fathers' common room and cells and the guest rooms. Eventually there will be a garden to the north of the house.

After the service the guests were entertained at lunch at the school, and the boys and girls made merry until evening.

It is indeed a wonderful work that is being done at St. Andrew's. If one has the privilege of sharing in the life of the little community for a few days only, one finds heaven very near upon the mountain top and sees the shadow of the angels' wings.

SOME MESSENGER AND WHERE THEY WENT. XXII.

Many meetings, many prayers and much excited discussion went on during that first year of civil and religious freedom; the idea of the Church uniting as a whole, the "entire Church," of the Annapolis Declaration grew in people's minds. It is not strange that Brunswick, N. J., which had once dreamed of being the home of the first American bishop, kept this thought alive. The Rev. Abraham Beach, of Brunswick, for some time corresponded with the Rev. Dr. White on this subject. The next year there was business concerning the reorganization of some charity in which, before the War, the governments of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania had exercised some authority. Clergy from these three States met at New Brunswick to represent the different parts of the corporation, and some business men who were in town were invited to attend, being Church members as well. The Pennsylvania clergy seized the opportunity of discussing a general meeting in the interests of the Church. As the business in which they were engaged required another meeting in New York, during October, it was decided that the clergy should be notified, in the hope that every State would have at least one parish which would respond.

Dr. White succeeded in gathering the clergy and laity of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia. Maryland held another stirring meeting. Massachusetts and Rhode Island Churchmen met at Boston. This last meeting addressed a letter to the clergy in some other States, in which they said, "It is wrong to attempt to organize before we have a head."

However, the plan was carried out, and a metting was held in New York. It was too loosely organized to be called a convention, as Rev. Dr. White points out in his notes on the early Convention Journals:

"The greater number of these deputies were not vested with powers for the binding of their constituents." Feeling this themselves, their only act was the formulating some articles, under which they recommended that the clergy and laity unite throughout the States.

These are the articles:

I. That there shall be a General Convention of the Episcopal Church in the United States of America.

II. That the Episcopal Church in each State send deputies to the convention, consisting of clergy and laity.

III. That associated congregations in two or more States may send deputies jointly.

IV. That the said Church shall maintain the doctrines of the Gospel as now held by the Church of England, and shall adhere to the Liturgy of the said Church as far as shall be consistent with the American Revolution and the Constitutions of the respective States.

V. That in every State where there shall be a Bishop duly consecrated and settled, he shall be considered as a member of the convention ex-officio.

VI. That the clergy and laity assembled in convention shall deliberate in one body, but shall vote separately, and the concurrence of both shall be necessary to give validity to every measure.

VII. That the first meeting of the convention shall be at Philadelphia, the Tuesday before the Feast of St. Michael next, to which it is hoped and earnestly desired that the Episcopal Churches in the respective States will send their clerical and lay deputies, duly instructed and authorized on the necessary business herein proposed for their deliberation.

Before that first convention could meet, Clause V of the above was to become the most important of the articles.

The first American Bishop was consecrated November 14, 1784.

In Maryland and some other parts of the South, what had been the Church's strength under the Colonies, became its weakness. Maryland's "Declaration of Rights," given in the last chapter, was a prompt action necessitated by the fact that their's was an established Church, with property under the control of the Government, and therefore liable to be appropriated by the new Government to such an extent as to threaten their very existence. So, looking back at the Declaration, we note such clauses as: (Clause I) . . . "to complete and preserve herself as an entire Church" . . . (II) "and which by the Constitution of this State is entitled to the perpetual enjoyment of certain property and rights" . . . (III) "and that no persons, . . . except such as are in the Communion of the said Church, . . . can or ought to be admitted into or enjoy any of the . . . property formerly belonging to the Church of England in this State and which, by the Constitution and Form of Government is secured to the said Church forever, by whatever name she, the said Church, or her superior Order of Ministers, may in future be denominated." So these Maryland clergymen, fighting for the bare existence of their Church in that State, laid, as Bishop Perry says, "the very foundations of the Ecclesiastical Constitution of the Church in America."

In Connecticut, however, wordly prosperity had not generally been the Church's lot. Puritanism was strong, and Church people were a minority; most of those men had come back to the Church from the Puritans to find again those high ideals which they had missed among the "Lord's brethren." Consequently, having been sufferers for their faith for one or two generations, the lax ideas of some Southern brethren shocked and alarmed them, especially the Rev. Dr. White's proposition, in an anonymous pamphlet, entitled "The Case of the Episcopal Churches in the United States Considered," published just at the close of the War at a time when the prospect of having a Bishop in America seemed very doubtful. Dr. White's idea was to move immediately, without waiting for a Bishop, to consolidate and arrange what there was of the Church in America. But while his plans showed remarkable statesmanship for a man of thirty-five, and many of them were adopted in later Church legislation, the point which shocked churchmen at the North was, that Dr. White advised a sort of superintendents of the Church, who should be authorized to ordain, if necessary, and should possess powers similar to those of Bishops. The Connecticut and New York clergy would like to know who was going to "authorize" these men, and hot discussions and correspondence ensued. Dr. White replied that it should be understood by some sort of preliminary articles that as soon as a Bishop could be obtained, any "irregularities" in the so-called ordinations might be rectified. Thank God the weakness of this arrangement and its un-Catholic attitude were too apparent to the great body of Church people to be carried out. Dr. White himself conceded that it was not good; "but," he said, "we must limp, if we can't walk." Sometimes it is well to stand still:

"They also serve who only stand and wait."

Dr. White's proposal, and some Southern utterances against the Episcopate, alarmed the Northern clergy, and shook their confidence. So they proceeded to act and kept their doings to themselves till God should please to show approval by sending success.

As we have mentioned, the Articles of Peace were received at New York in March, 1783. A few weeks after, on the Feast of the Annunciation, some clergy met with the Rector of the Church at Woodbury, Conn. There was one matter wherein they were in peril, more than their brethren of the South; the majority of them had been loyalists, some on account of their ordination vows, and what their standing would be in the community after things were settled remained to be seen. They were missionaries in the pay of an English society, and in serious doubt as to their own future. They planned rapidly a move which should secure a Bishop who could, in the event of not being permitted to land in the United States, make his home right over the Canada border, and so be accessible for ordinations. Their first choice was the Rev. Dr. Jeremiah Leaming, who had been exiled for his Churchmanship, and was now an old man who had lost all in the cause. He had lost his health, among other losses, and so wisely declined the election. Then they chose the Rev. Samuel Seabury, who had been a fearless and untiring worker, and was now in the prime of life. He was a man of many gifts, having studied medicine in Edinburgh, where he early learned Church's ways. His course was definitely laid out for him; he was to go first to England and apply for consecration there, urging the need of Bishops in America. Failing there, he was to go to Scotland and try to get consecration from the Nonjuring Bishops. Then, if not allowed to return to the United States, he was to go to Nova Scotia, to be within reach and wait for happier times.

It took courage and unselfish patience, to a very marked degree, to undertake all this, but they had found the right man, and Dr. Seabury started on his difficult mission.

Difficult it proved to be. The chief obstacle was that a Bishop must take the Oath of Allegiance. After many delays an Act of Parliament was actually passed, allowing a dispensation from the oaths in the case of Bishops consecrated for foreign countries. This done, there was the deep-rooted objection of the English Bishops themselves, who could not see how the office of Bishop, as they knew it, could be carried on under the conditions of the new country, and were too stupid to imagine. They might have understood by reading certain parts of the New Testament, which do not make a coach-and-six indispensable to the sacred office.

Time dragged along, and when Dr. Seabury had passed a whole year in struggling and had reached the end of his purse, he felt obliged to do something. He was not a wealthy man—no Tory could be after the War, and he had done all this at his own expense. So he went to Scotland, the scene of his earliest Church connection, to see what could be done there.

ALEXANDER MACKAY-SMITH, BISHOP AND DOCTOR.

The sudden death of our Diocesan, on Thursday, the 16th of November, came as a great shock to the Diocese. We find cause for rejoicing, however, that his sufferings were not prolonged, and that he was the incumbent of the See when God took him to Himself. During the last year of his life Bishop Mackay-Smith stood as a really heroic example of devotion to duty, in spite of well-nigh overwhelming physical disability. In his personal relations toward St. Clement's, he was always cordial and sympathetic. May he rest in peace, and may light perpetual shine upon him.

PARISH NOTES.

Three new alb girdles have been made and presented by friends of the parish.

We are in need of money for the purchase of flowers with which to adorn the High Altar during the week.

The offering on Christmas Day will be devoted to the current expenses of the parish. The Accounting Warden hopes very much for a generous offering, which may clear up the present indebtedness.

As the Feast of the Nativity falls on Monday this year, there will be no special hours for confession other than the usual Friday and Saturday appointments. Persons are urged to come at the time appointed.

The Bishop has appointed the 9th of February for his visitation. Classes for confirmation will begin at once. The girls will meet at the Mission House every Thursday at 4 o'clock, the women on Tuesdays at 8 o'clock, the boys at the Clergy House on Tuesday afternoon at 4, and the men at the Clergy House on Friday evening at 8.

On the Eve of the Epihany, Friday, January 5, a missionary service will be held in the Church at 8 o'clock. Dr. Garland, the Bishop Suffragan, will preach, and a collection will be taken, which will be devoted to the apportionment of this parish for the Board of Missions. It is earnestly hoped that there may be a large attendance, not only because of the importance of the object, but because it will be the first visit of Bishop Garland to the parish.

The Midnight Mass at Christmas will be omitted this year. For many reasons it seems wise to give it up. It is not a suitable time for making a devout communion, and it brings people from their homes at an unseasonable hour. Those who have been accustomed to communicate at this service will find it much more helpful to come to one of the early services on Christmas morning. In this connection it is interesting to read the following item, taken from the December number of St. Clement's Magazine in the year 1882, when Fr. Maturin was Rector:

"The clergy have decided not to have the midnight celebration of the Holy Communion on Christmas Eve, as has been hitherto the custom. They have noticed that this service has been attended less and less by the parishioners, and has seemed to be attended by strangers, drawn together more from curiosity than devotion. They feel that the abandonment of this service will be regretted by a few earnest persons, yet that they will gladly yield up their own private feelings for the sake of protecting the Blessed Sacrament from almost unavoidable irreverence."

It is strange how the echo of the days of persecution and misrepresentation comes to our ears, even to-day. There are certain prejudiced and untruthful persons who are still willing to malign our parish, and to make statements concerning our worship which are utterly devoid of truth. It has come to our knowledge that a person, not of this parish, came to St. Clement's a week or so ago and reported to sympathetic ears that the Mass was sung entirely in Latin. The report would be ludicrous, were it not for the sad disregard for truth which is evident in the statement.

ST. CLEMENT'S TIDE.

We have had an unusually blessed festival. Commencing with a large communion on St. Clement's Day, there has been evident a spirit of devotion and reverence, which must be a distinct encouragement and happiness to us all. At the High Mass, at 11 o'clock, the choir sang St. Cecelia's Mass, under the direction of Mr. Fry, who came to us for the first time for a solemn service. He was assisted by Mr. Gaff at the organ and a number of musicians from the Philadelphia Orchestra. The service progressed very smoothly, and was the subject of favorable comment by many who worshiped with us. We were happy in having with us our friend, the Bishop of Salina, in the sanctuary, and Dr. Van Allen, the Rector of the Church of the Advent, Boston, preached for the first time in St. Clement's. He emphasized the need of cultivating the spirit of worship in our American people. The one jarring element in the service was the presence of some sightseers, among these, a priest of the Roman obedience, who disturbed many around them by their irreverent behavior.

In the evening the annual parish gathering was held, and a larger number than in any previous year were present. On the Sunday in the octave there was another large communion, and at the High Mass Fr. Bull, the Provincial Superior of the Society of St. John the Evangelist, preached the sermon. At the procession of Guilds in the evening the preacher was our good friend, Fr. McClenthen, of Baltimore.

The collection on the festival amounted roughly to $1,290, which is an encouraging amount. The entire fund for the restoration of the Nave has now reached $6,000.

ALFRED COCHRAN LAMBDIN.

Again the time of our patronal feast brings with it a note of sadness. Suddenly, on the 7th day of November, Alfred Cochran Lambdin was called to his rest. Since the early days of the parish, of which he was at one time a vestryman, Dr. Lambdin had been a devout worshiper at St. Clemant's Altar, and never until failing health made it a necessity, did he absent himself from the Offering of the Holy Sacrifice on the Lord's Day. Of a singularly sweet and guileless nature, and a modest and retiring disposition, he spoke but rarely of the hidden experiences of his spiritual life, but the fruit of that life was abundantly manifest to those who were privileged to know him. May he rest in peace.

AFFAIRS DIOCESAN.

The present autumn has been an eventful one in the history of the Diocese. The consecration on St. Simon's and St. Jude's Day of Dr. Rhinelander and Dr. Garland to be Bishop Coadjutor and Bishop Suffragan was a unique event in the history of the American Church. Never before have two Bishops been consecrated together for the same Diocese. The service was wonderfully impressive and reverent, and marked by extreme simplicity. Nothing could have been more excellent than the sermon preached by the Bishop of Connecticut. It was a splendid plea for the recognition of the Catholic Ideal of the Church, and incidentally he urged the elevation of the Sacrifice of the Altar as the chief service on the Lord's Day. Fortunately a notice was read, bidding only the families of those to be consecrated to communicate, and the whole arrangement of the order of the service was carried on in a more dignified and reverent way than has been the custom of our Church on similar occasions in the past.

We are especially fortunate in the men God has consecrated to be our Bishops. We should show our appreciation of the fact by a whole-hearted interest in the affairs of the Diocese, and by our generous support of Diocesan Missions.

LETTER FROM HANKOW.

DEAR ———: When I wrote you on the river boat coming from Kuling last month, I did not think I should write again so soon, and this time as a refugee. We came across last night under the escort of the American Consul and the captain of the gunboat Helena.

Since last week we have been more or less apprehensive of an outbreak. A quiet warning was given Dr. Glenton a week ago that the Revolutionists were preparing to attack the Viceroy's yamen. Dr. Glenton and Miss Higgins were asked to come over to sleep on the compound, also Miss Byerly and Deaconess Ridgely. This they did several nights, but the town remained peaceful. We learned that the Viceroy was taking every precaution, that he had sent a hundred soldiers to protect his yamen, and that the ammunition in the camps was being locked up at dark each night.

Then, on Tuesday morning, Mr. Ridgely's teacher reported a disturbance on the street the night before; that twenty odd suspected Revolutionists had been arrested, and two leaders executed in the yamen enclosure.

Also, we learned that in a house in Hankow dynamite had been found, with other preparations for an attack. Tuesday night we were sure we heard firing, but thought it might be firecrackers.

In the night we were awakened by clear sounds of constant shooting, and then came big reports. Mr. Ridgely threw on some clothes and went to the lawn, where he met Dr. Jackson and Dr. MacWillie coming for him. Dr. MacWillie and Mr. Fell had been up to the top of Serpent Hill, when they met two soldiers, with white bands on their arms, who said: "Don't fear, go back, no harm will come to you; but do not come here. We have taken the Viceroy's yamen and are taking the city. We are Revolutionists. All the soldiers are now."

Presently we saw a big blaze, but we could not learn anything further. We simply had to listen to the steady rattle of shot or the roar of guns which had been mounted on the hill. Our side of the town was perfectly quiet; the people seemed stunned into silence. Instead of running about to rob and burn, they hid in their houses.

It was hard to keep still and go on with work, not knowing what was happening; but the great thing was to teach the students. Wednesday morning the cook came back to say that he could not get out of the city gate near us to go across to the market; that we were shut in and every gate was closed.

By noon many terrified Chinese were escaping over the wall by the east side of the MacWillie house. Men with ropes were stationed at the loop holes in the walls. Before night two of the families of our Chinese teachers had taken fright and gone down in a basket, screaming lustily.

All this time we had not been able to get over to Miss Byerly and Miss Ridgely. Dr. Glenton and Miss Higgins had come into the compound Tuesday evening.

Finally, as the battle on the hill seemed to be less furious, Dr. MacWillie said he must go to the hospital, and would also see if he could get to Miss Byerly. Father Wood insisted upon going, although Mr. Ridgely felt it was his work, but there were many things to attend to in quieting the teachers, etc. In two hours' time the two men were back, bringing the ladies. They had come on foot, as there were no chairs allowed, and skirted the back streets to avoid the line of firing. This by the kindly advice of the soldiers.

Wednesday afternoon we were advised by the gentlemen to put things for immediate use in suit cases and to pack all we could into a steamer trunk, in case there might be an opportunity to get the baggage out. By that time reports were coming in that the Viceroy had escaped in a gunboat, and that every Manchu man, woman or child in the city was being shot. On our side of the hill, you remember, there are no officials, so we were saved the terrible sight of the slaughter. The hill was so guarded that no one could flee on our side. Thursday morning we got our first answer to the many notes which our men had tried to get sent over the wall to be taken across to Hankow. All of Wednessday the people in Hankow had been trying to reach us. The gunboat Helena had been over all the morning bringing the Vice-consul, who had tried for some hours to gain admission to the city.

They said there would be another attempt made that morning. Before 10 o'clock the north gate was opened to let in a cannon, and the American Consul, British Assistant Consul, the captain of the Helena and Mr. Deis. You may fancy we were glad to see them, although we had not felt that we were in immediate danger. Supplies were getting low in the town, and the question of feeding 400 boys and 70 odd girls had to be faced. The rescue party, with Dr. Jackson, went over the hill to the camp of the general, where they had a very polite reception. While they promised all the protection in their power, they said if the troops came from Pekin there might be a big battle and the city might be shelled.

The Consul heard that the gunboats already on the river were about to begin firing, so he urged haste.

On the whole, they thought the general was rather relieved to have us go. He promised safe conduct to the girls of our school and to those of the London Mission and the Roman Catholics. All the missionaries in Wuchang were quickly notified to bring what they could carry in their hands and gather in our compound in front of Ingles' Hall. I wish you could have seen the procession when we filed out of the gate. About 300 pupils (the boys had gone early by way of the wall), 17 men, 25 ladies and 3 children. The Chinese in the lead, the foreigners in the rear.

The one hardest thing was to leave Father Wood and Mr. Tyng behind, but they stayed in the face of advice to go. Father Wood said his place was with his flock. But I can't tell you of the struggle there was among the men as to who would stay with him. Mr. Tyng said it was his right, as the only unattached man. God will keep them safe, I am sure. Brave men!

A crowd of our missionaries and other people met us here. Really, crossing came near being our nearest danger, for as we were politely bidden by the guard at the gate to hurry through, the gate was slammed and barred on our backs as the first shell from a gunboat sped over our heads.

While we were waiting on the bank it was rather unpleasant to hear a shell go whizzing over. The fire from Wuchang was quick in return, and two torpedoboats were hit, turned tail and fled. By the time our tug started across the river the firing had been stopped by the foreign gunboats, as they feared the destruction of the foreign concession at Hankow. They told the gunboats to move up the river for such play, but they were evidently afraid to do so, and ceased firing. Really, we found less order in Hankow than on our side. The soldiers are now keeping the streets in perfect order.

As we came into that last space between the double gates the line of soldiers on either side held the people back with bayonets or pointed revolvers at any who tried to follow us out.

Last night we felt less secure than for either of the past nights, as big fires raged on either side of the concession, and we had orders to go to the bund if the alarm was rung. It is time now for the mail to go, the steamer is leaving as usual to-night, strange as it seems. We hear other cities are in the hands of the Revolutionists.

Hankow, Friday, October 13, 1911.

SOME MESSENGERS AND WHERE THEY WENT. XXIII.

He found men after his own heart in the Nonjurors. These were the men, or their successors, who had steadily resisted Presbyterianism in Scotland, espousing the Stuart cause, and had suffered the loss of positions and property. Their places were filled by clergy from England whenever possible, and these and the Presbyterians alike despised the Nonjurors. About the middle of the eighteenth century there was a deliberate effort made to get rid of them; it was against the law for more than five Nonjurors to assemble for worship. They kept alive in Scotland, however, the beautiful Liturgy of Edward VI, which is the richest in Catholic teaching of any, and after the feeling against them had died out to some extent, this was made the Liturgy of the Church in Scotland in 1764. In Edinburgh and the South the English clergy were in power, so Dr. Seabury went to Aberdeen, and there, in a modest chapel, fitted up in his own house by Bishop Skinner, he was consecrated by Bishops Kilgour, Petrie and Skinner. He had no trouble in returning to Connecticut, and there called together the clergy, showed them his certificates of Consecration, and received their pledge of canonical obedience.

And now our American Church faced a great crisis, full of danger; the material for organizing a branch of the Catholic Church was here, and no longer in peril from outside, but the feeling between the two factions was intense. The New England Churchmen stood for the Catholic view of the ministry, especially as refusing to act in any "Convention" without the leadership of a Bishop, and were accused of sacerdotalism by their brethren of the Middle and Southern States. They, in turn, distrusted these, and called them latitudinarian. No doubt the Northern clergy, especially those in Connecticut, were often prejudiced, and inclined to be narrow and lacking in sympathy. It certainly was not brotherly to let the Church in other parts of the country learn about Dr. Seabury's consecration merely through accident, giving no formal notice. It was high-handed, and it hurt the kindly Dr. White, who, whatever his ideas as a Churchman, certainly gave himself devotedly to the work of the Church. He showed himself a saint in this matter; he rejoiced that a Bishop had been obtained, and his gentle influence gradually brought about a better feeling among those who resented Connecticut's action.

But one finds it hard to understand those who, calling themselves Churchmen, were willing to relinquish the Apostolic succession, and apparently put patriotism first and Churchmanship second.

So the meeting in 1785, and those which followed in succeeding years, could not be called "General Conventions," in the sense of representation of the whole Church.

Connecticut sent letters and messages to the Conventions, stating her position and that of New England generally. The Church cannot be said to be acting unless its head is present; there is no authority but Episcopal authority that can be recognized in an Episcopal Church. The Convention then assembled ruled that in an emergency, devoted Churchmen might have to act in what would be considered an irregular manner, and that no single section of the Church had any authority to secure a Bishop for itself independently, and then set him over the rest. What was to hinder any group of clergy from doing this, and in that case, might there not be a number of petty Bishoprics, acting independently, and endangering the Church as a whole?

THE HOUSE OF CHRISTMAS.

G. K. Chesterton.

There fared a mother driven forth
  Out of an inn to roam;
In the place where she was homeless
  All men are at home.
The crazy stable close at hand,
With shaking timber and shifting sand,
Grew stronger to abide and stand
  Than the square stones of Rome.

For men are homesick in their homes,
  And strangers under the sun,
And they lay their heads in a foreign land
  Whenever the day is done.
Here we have battle and blazing eyes,
And chance and honor and high surprise,
But our homes are under miraculous skies
  Where the Yule tale was begun.

A Child in a foul stable,
  Where the beasts feed and foam,
Only where He was homeless
  Are you and I at home;
We have hands that fashion and heads that know,
But our hearts we lost—how long ago!—
In a place no chart or ship can show
  Under the sky's dome.

This world is as wild as an old wife's tale,
  And strange the plain things are,
The earth is enough and the air is enough
  For our wonder and our war;
But our rest is as far as the fire-drake swings,
Where clashed and thundered unthinkable wings
  Round an incredible star.

To an open house in the evening
  Home shall all men come,
To an older place than Eden
  And a taller town than Rome.
To the end of the way of the wandering star,
To the things that cannot be and that are,
To the place where God was homeless
  And all men are at home.

PARISH NOTES.

The annual dinner of St. Vincent's Guild will be held in the Clergy House Wednesday evening, the 17th of January.

On the afternoon of the third Sunday in Advent, Father Quin sang evensong at St. James' Church. The occasion was the annual service for the City Troop, held in commemoration of the one hundred and twelfth anniversary of the death of George Washington.

The decorating of the Church for Christmas Day was done on Sunday afternoon, so that those who were present both morning and evening felt the force of the teaching conveyed by the sudden transformation from the penitential note of Advent to the joyfulness of the Christmas Feast. St. Vincent's Guild responded most generously to the call for workers and the work proceeded very rapidly. The Creche has been set up again this year at the head of the south aisle and a little more space has been obtained for it by the removal of the first pew.

We should do all in our power this year to meet the apportionment which has been asked of our parish for the missionary work of the Church. To often the Catholic parishes in the Church are faulted for their languid interest in Missions. We have evidence that the facts do not bear out this statement, and that the Catholic parishes in the Church are doing quite as much as our so-called "low Church" brethren. We should so far outstrip them, however, that there would not be the possibility of such a suggestion. Surely, if we believe that the Catholic position is true, and if the devotion that we profess is to be proved anything more than a sentimental devotion to St. Clement's parish, we must show to the Church at large that our faith is inspiring us to acts of real self-sacrifice that the name of Jesus may be glorified by those who have never had our privileges and perhaps have never had an opportunity of knowing God.

CHRISTMAS TIDE.

The Christmas Festival was one of real joy in the parish. The communions were slightly in excess of last year, which is always an encouragement; and the late mass was well attended. On Wednesday night the Sunday School held its festival. A short service was held in the Chapel and carols were sung, after which a truly wonderful exhibit of trained birds and animals entertained the children for an hour. Before going home each scholar received a present and a box of candy. In this connection it may be of interest to some to know of the encouraging condition of the Sunday School. We have a larger number of children attending regularly than has been the case for many years. There seems to be a real manifestation, interest and life.

On Thursday night the annual turkey supper was held and the Guild of the Holy Child had a party on Saturday afternoon. After a repast of ice cream and cake, presents were distributed and an exhibition was given with our new lantern, which has been purchased recently. On New Year's Day, S. Nicholas' Guild enjoyed its Christmas treat, and the Guild of S. Mary had its party in the evening.

THE EPIPHANY.

To-day, a change comes over the scene, which seems at first sight but little in keeping with the characteristic lowliness of Bethlehem. A cavalcade from the far East comes up the way. The camel bells are tinkling. A retinue of attendants accompanies three kings of different Oriental tribes, who come with the various offerings to the new-born Babe. These swarthy men are among the wisest of the studious East. They represent the lore and science of the day. Yet they have done what the world would surely esteem the most foolish of actions. They were men whose science led them to God; men, we may be sure, of meditative habits, of ascetic lives, of habitual prayer. The fragments of early tradition and the obscure records of ancient prophecies, belonging to their nations, have been to them as precious deposits which spoke of God and were filled with hidden truth. The corruption of the world, which they, as kings, might see from their elevation, far and wide, pressed heavily upon their loving hearts. They, too, pined for a Redeemer, for some Heavenly Visitant, for a new beginning of the world, for the coming of a Son of God, for One who should save them from their sins. Their tribes doubtless lived in close alliance, and they themselves were bound together by the ties of friendship, which the same pure yearnings after great goodness and high things had cemented. Never had kings more royal souls. In the dark blue of the lustrous sky there rose a new or hitherto unnoticed star. Its apparition could not escape the notice of these Oriental sages who nightly watched the skies, for their science was also their theology. It was a star of which an ancient prophecy had spoken. Perhaps it trailed a line of light after it slowly, yet with visible motion, and so little above the horizon, or with such obvious downward slanting course that it seemed to beckon them, as if an angel were bearing a lamp to light the feet of the pilgrims, and timed his going to their slowness, and had not shot too far ahead during the bright day, but was found and welcomed each night, as a faithful director pointing to the Cave of Bethlehem. How often does God prefer to teach by night rather than by day? Meanwhile, doubtless, the instincts of the Holy Spirit in the hearts of these wise rulers drew them to the star. Wild and romantic as the conduct of these wise enthusiasts seemed, they did not hesitate. After due counsel, they pronounced the luminous finger to be the star of the old prophecy, and therefore God was come. They left their homes, their state, and their affairs, and journeyed westward they knew not whither, led nightly by the star that slipped onward in its silent groove. They were the representatives of the heathen world moving forward to the feet of the Universal Saviour. They came to the gates of Jerusalem, and there God did honor to His Church. He withdrew the guidance of the star because now the better guidance of the synagogue was at their command. The oracles of the law pronounced that Bethlehem was to be the birthplace of the Messiah; and the wise men passed on to the humble village. Again, the star shone out in the blue heavens and slowly sank earthward over the Cave of Bethlehem, and presently the devout kings were at the feet of Jesus.

LETTER FROM FATHER WOOD.

"They have been having stirring times in Hankow, but here in Wuchang, since the actual revolution took place, now four weeks ago, all has been peace and quiet. The city gates have been kept closed most of the time, but our people who desired to escape to the country or Hankow have easily obtained permission to pass. I have been going over to St. Mark's for every Sunday and Holy Day, but have never had the slightest difficulty in getting outside the city gate and in again. The revolutionary soldiers invariably treat me with the greatest kindness and consideration. Although, of course, as a mission and as a nation we maintain strict neutrality, but my personal sympathies are heartily on the side of the revolutionists. Except for the killing of the Manchus they have acted throughout in a splendid way. My colleague, Mr. Tyng, had lunch to-day with the revolutionary general. He has been kindness itself throughout.

"I have been over to Hankow only once lately, and was mighty glad to get back to quiet Wuchang. I went first to the hospital where my sister is working, and found some marines from one of the European battleships building barricades in the streets. They were fired upon just as I walked up the street, and everybody dodged into a friendly doorway out of the way of bullets. Later, as I was talking to my sister in the hospital, there was a sharp fight going on in the next street, but she seemed to take as little notice of it as if it were a dog fight. All the time I was in Hankow that day the battle was going on behind the city and the cannon were booming.

"One day we were notified that Wuchang was to be bombarded by the Imperialist gunboat and we gathered together a lot of our own people, with some Roman Catholics and others into the Boone Compound for safety, but the bombardment never came off. Just now things look very favorable for the Revolutionists, but long before this reaches you, you will have known the issue.

"The burning of Hankow native city was a terrible war measure on the part of the Imperialists. My heart bleeds for the poor homeless hungry thousands.

"The work in the Red Cross Hospital here has been very interesting. It was organized by the Chinese themselves, and our mission doctor was asked to be president. It is directly opposite Boone College in a corner of the city wall. I have enjoyed my daily visits and talks with the soldiers very much. Hundreds of poor, suffering, wounded men are being cared for on both sides of the river. I feel very thankful that I am one of those allowed to remain here and keep up the services and encourage the Christions as, of course, the presence of a priest naturally would do. Mr. Tyng takes the services here at the Boone Compound, a Chinese priest is living at St. Saviour's, and I look after St. Mark's and St. Andrew's, both of which are outside the city wall. I am living temporarily at Boone and have had my library and other valuable things, such as vestments, etc., moved here for fear of fire.

The Imperialists have been threatening to burn Wuchang as they did Hankow, but I do not for one moment believe that they will be able to take it, as it is very strongly fortified and very well manned. These are very stirring times, and I am indeed thankful that I am privileged to work in China just now.

"I am impressed with the wonderful new opportunities which have been opened up here in Wuchang for work among the soldiers in this tremendously important centre.

"Wuchang, November 6, 1911."

THE WISE MEN.

G. K. Chesterton.

Step softly, under snow or rain,
  To find the place where men can pray;
The way is all so very plain
  That we may lose our way.

Oh, we have learned to peer and pore
  On tortured puzzles from our youth.
We know all labyrinthine lore,
We are the three wise men of yore,
  And we know all things but the truth.

We have gone round and round the hill,
  And lost the wood among the trees,
And learnt long names for every ill,
And served the mad gods, naming still
  The Furies the Eumenides.

The gods of violence took the veil
  Of vision and philosophy,
The Serpent that brought all men bale,
He bites his own accursed tail,
  And calls himself Eternity.

Go humbly—it has hailed and snowed—
  With voices low and lanterns lit,
So very simple is the road
  That we may stray from it.

The world grows terrible and white,
  And blinding white the breaking day,
We walk bewildered in the light,
For something is too large for sight,
  And something much too plain to say.

The Child that was ere worlds begun
  (—We need but walk a little way—
We need but see a latch undone—)
The Child that played with moon and sun
  Is playing with a little hay.

The house from which the heavens are fed,
  The old strange house that is our own;
Where tricks of words are never said;
And Mercy is as plain as bread,
  And Honor is as hard as stone.

Go humbly; humble are the skies,
  And low and large and fierce the Star,
So very near the manger lies,
  That we may travel far.

Hark! Laughter like a lion wakes
  To roar to the resounding plain,
And the whole heavens shouts and shakes,
  For God Himself is born again,
And we are little children walking
  Through the snow and rain.

SOME MESSENGERS AND WHERE THEY WENT.

So the battle raged for four years. One rather amusing thing was, that some of the very people who had been willing to substitute "superintendents" for the historic Episcopate, now gravely questioned whether the clergy ordained by Bishop Seabury could be considered as "regular," considering that he was not consecrated in the English Church. This really troubled the Convention, and it was agreed that the Connecticut clergy so ordained could not be recognized or exchange with those of the other parts of the country.

Meanwhile, the changes proposed in the Prayerbook for the use of the Church in America, discussed in the Conventions, troubled the Church in England, and when applied to in the matter of consecrating more Bishops for America, it demanded an explanation of certain things said about the American Convention; that they were rejecting the Church's Creeds; that they had mutilated the services of the Prayerbook so they were scarcely recognizable; that they were expecting to give laymen a power in Convention which would enable them to dictate to the Bishops. The Convention hurriedly promised satisfaction on all points, and sent over Rev. Drs. White and Provoost, who were consecrated at Lambeth Chapel, February 4, 1787. They started for home the next day, and reached New York on Easter Sunday. Thanks to Bishop Seabury's struggles three years previously, there was a special Act of Parliament dispensing them from the English Oath of Allegiance.

The two newly consecrated Bishops received letters of congratulation from Bishop Seabury, who, now that there was authority, hastened to recognize it. They received his overtures with difficulty, though for unlike reasons. Bishop Provoost was an ardent Whig, and could not get over his rooted dislike to a clergyman who had been active in the British cause, and was even now drawing half pay as a former chaplain in that army. He replied, but expressed the hardship he felt it to be. Bishop White was worried about their obligation to the Church in England, which did not at that time recognize the non-juring Bishops, and, therefore, would not consider the Seabury consecration valid; this would make any participation with him seem like a breach of faith. And Bishop Provoost was not alone in his dislike of the Bishop and clergy of Connecticut; that "half pay," which probably was a help to Bishop Seabury in repairing his financial losses at the time of his consecration, was a stumbling block to many in the Convention. Bishop White finally argued this down, giving them to understand that, as it would not prevent the civil government from recognizing him as a citizen, the Church had no concern in the matter.

Then arose a great situation. The changes proposed in the Prayerbook, especially the attempt to omit the Nicene Creed, roused the Northern High Churchmen; the movement to restore the laity to Convention was regarded by them as dangerous and a menace to Episcopal authority. So, as three Bishops were necessary to secure succession, and there seemed little prospect of union with the rest of the Church, some New England Churchmen wished to send two more of their number to Scotland for consecration. This roused Bishop Seabury, who was as anxious for a whole American Church as any of his contemporaries, and had no wish to see his labors end in a schism. He wrote earnestly to the other two Bishops, and the matter of consecrating a fourth American Bishop—Dr. Bass, of Massachusetts—was to be the case in which the Convention should pass on the following:

The Church in England did not recognize the Non-jurors; Bishop Seabury then, according to the English view, could not act with the two who had received their Orders in England. Must the Church in America be led by the Church in England, or could they, as an independent body, decide the matter for themselves, and accept Bishop Seabury?

How they settled the matter can be seen by the following extracts from the Convention Journal of 1789, which makes a happy ending to what has been a rather painful chapter. Ever and again, as we read the records of our Church here in America, may we thank God that, while we have a liberty that at times enables the unruly and ill-taught to bring into danger our Catholic heritage, yet God overrules at last, for He knoweth them that are His. In quietness and confidence shall be our strength. Nowadays we are sometimes a spectacle to angels and men through the infirmity of some of our number, but, as our troubles thicken, we are learning to pray as never before. Almost every mail brings intercession leaflets; High Churchmen and Low Churchmen alike make definite prayers a part of every undertaking, and the Holy Communion the time for stated petitions; the Church slowly, silently, but oh, how surely, is taking hold of the hearts of the people. Not by peremptory orders from a foreign Bishop, reducing the faithful to the condition of machines; not by sentimental meetings, working on people's emotions; but keeping in mind the ideal longed for by White and Seabury, "as free, and not using our liberty for a cloak of maliciousness, but as the servants of God."

Extract from the Journal of Convention, October, 1789:

The Rev. Dr. William Smith, from the committee appointed to confer with the Deputies from the Churches of New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Connecticut, concerning a plan of union among all the Protestant Episcopal Churches in the United States of America, reported as follows:

That they have had a full, free and friendly conference with the Deputies of said Churches, who . . . . have signified that they do not object to the Constitution . . . if the third article of that Constitution may be so modified as to declare explicitly the right of the Bishops, when sitting in a separate House, to originate and propose plans for the concurrence of the other House, and to negative such acts proposed by the other House as they may disprove.

(It was resolved to make the amendment, and further)

Resolved, That it be made known to the several State Conventions, that it is proposed to consider and determine, in the next General Convention, on the propriety of investing the House of Bishops with a full negative upon the proceedings of the other House.

Ordered, That the General Constitution of this Church, as now altered and amended, be laid before the Right Rev. Dr. Seabury and the Deputies from the Churches in the Eastern States for their approbation and assent.

After a short time they delivered the testimony of their assent to the same.

After subscribing, the Right Rev. Bishop Seabury and the Clerical Deputies aforesaid took their seats as members of the Convention.

PARISH NOTES.

The Altar Guild has presented a banner of St. Katharine to the Church.

Bishop Garland will visit the parish for Confirmation on Friday evening, February 9, at 8 o'clock.

On the second Sunday in February the offerings at all the masses will be applied to the apportionment for the Mission work of the Church. It is hoped that there may be a generous response.

A quiet day for the associates of the Girls' Friendly Society and other women will be held at St. Clement's on Thursday, February 29. To be conducted by the Rev. William A. McClenthen, rector of Mt. Calvary Church, Baltimore.

The parish retreat will be held on Shrove Tuesday this year as usual. The addresses will be given at 10, 12 and 3 o'clock, in the chapel. The Rev. George L. Richardson, Rector of St. Mary's Church, West Philadelphia, will be the conductor.

During Lent a service of intercession will be held in the Church every weekday at 4.45. It is hoped that very many of our people will make an effort to be present as often as possible. The list of subjects for intercession is printed in another column.

During Lent there will be a service for young people in the chapel every Friday afternoon at four o'clock, and the Stations of the Cross will be said on Friday evenings, preceded by a sermon. There will also be a ten-minute address after the 9.30 mass on Tuesdays.

About one hundred persons braved the cold to come to the missionary meeting, which was held in the Church on the evening of January 5. The addresses were most excellent. Bishop Garland spoke on the subject of missions in general and Rev. Robert Johnston, the rector of the Church of the Saviour, made an address on "Our Duty as a Parish to the Apportionment."

A LETTER FROM PORTO RICO.

VIEQUES, PORTO RICO, Nov. 20, 1911.

I am sending a few pictures to give an idea of things here. The church, as you see, is a barn-like structure. It was built for a warehouse, but has been a church for about twenty years and is quite nice and churchly within. There is a glimpse of the rectory and parish hall through the trees. It is built on the edge of a rocky cliff overlooking the sea. The view of the bay and the lighthouse is from the back porch. From the side windows there is a most beautiful view that no photograph can do justice to—looking across the sea toward Porto Rico. The sun sets behind the mountains opposite, and the colors of sea and sky are really wonderful. Then there are days when the land disappears as completely as if it had been swallowed up, and sea and sky appear to meet on the horizon.

The town (Isabella Segunda is its real name, in spite of the United States Post-office which gives it the name of the island) stretches up the hill from the bay. It is quite a pretty place, and has nearly five thousand people in it. The Roman Church is much larger than ours, and of course most of the natives nominally belong there, but it seems to me comparatively few of them are faithful to their religion. Our people are nearly all from the English islands—negroes who come to work on the sugar estates. I have classes of girls that attract others, and a Sunday School of all ages and shades of color, some very nice and attractive girls and a few boys. I like boys individually, but not as a class. There is one dear little boy, four years old, who lives opposite the church, and is very fond of music. He comes sometimes by himself, and behaves perfectly, kneels reverently in the service, though he doesn't understand a word of English. One night when he came he was apparently ready for bed, in one little white garment. He came to sit by the organ and looked like a cherub.

Fr. Watson has left the school at Guadalajara to take charge of the Church of San Pedro, in Mexico City. He prefers parish work, and writes that he is well and happy. He has asked me to come and help for some months, but it is difficult for me to leave here; there is no one to take my place.

Please remember us and our work in this little island.

Sincerely yours,
SARA R. DAVIDSON

SOME MESSENGERS AND WHERE THEY WENT

So far back as the Convention of 1792, the Church in America recognized its duty in the matter of missions, but the territory to be covered by the small band of clergy was so vast, and the war had made such havoc of the Church, especially in the North, that every parish was practically a mission, with more than it could do. Still, the subject of missions to other places was considered, and in 1820 the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society was organized, and sermons were ordered to be preached at stated times.

The Convention of 1835 met at Philadelphia, and declared that every member of the Church was ipse facto a member of the Missionary Society. This was received with great enthusiasm, and offerings at once began to pour in. To account for the disposal of these, and to keep the whole Church informed, a journal, The Spirit of Missions, was begun, and still informs those who will read it, of what is going on in the various departments of the mission-field. So quietly has this been told, little by little, that the readers could not at all realize what a great work they were sharing. We will look through the pages of the glorious record, year by year, and see what triumphs have been achieved:

"In journeyings often, in perils of waters . . . in perils by the heathen, in perils in the seas . . . in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness; beside . . . the care of all the Churches."

These papers have been heretofore based on the writings of the best authorities, but, even so, the tale had to be told at second hand. In the Church's own missionary journal, beginning in 1835, year by year, those fortunate enough to have it from the beginning may get the heart-stirring tale in the workers' own words, from their letters to the Board. But as this is two generations old, and complete files of the Spirit of Missions are hard to find, we propose to work this out for our readers. We will take the general conventions as dates from which to count, and sum up from the missionaries' letters the progress of the Kingdom.

When the Church, in 1835, declared that every member of the same was a member of its Missionary Society, some rearrangement of plans had to be made, and the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society was found to have accomplished a good work.

The Church began with the duties which lay nearest at hand, and entered the doors then opened to it. The arrangement of the work into Domestic and Foreign was retained, and in the foreign field the Church found that a wonderful work had been going on in her name among the people of Greece.

The Rev. Drs. Robertson and Hill, with their families, had sailed from New York in 1830, under the direction of the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society, after there had been much thoughtful and prayerful investigation of the situation along the Mediterranean. Greek independence was near, but the condition of the Greeks was pitiful. Plundered now by Turks, now by their own armies; without education or the means of it; and, most of all, ministered to in the most perfunctory way by clergy as ignorant as themselves—yet here was a branch of the Catholic Church, and here was a duty for Church people in America.

It must have taken great courage to start on this mission. Greece was experimenting with a president, Capodistrias, whose term of office began in 1828, and was to have lasted seven years, but ended with his assassination in 1831. Athens became the seat of government, and there the missionaries found a great opportunity. The dearest dream of the Greeks was that their children might be educated, and their scheme of education included familiarity with classic Greek. This education, when it could be had, was to be bestowed on the boys; constant association with Turkish ideas had insensibly brought down the position of the Greek women. The services of the Greek Church were more or less faithfully attended, but it was a superstitious custom on the part of most, with little or no idea of the purpose.

Capodistrias had founded a great asylum at Athens, for the instruction of Greek children reclaimed from slavery in Egypt. There were many smaller schools started. But they failed pitifully for want of management, of teachers, of books, of everything. Now the missionaries began. The Rev. Dr. Robertson started a printing-house at Syra, and the Hills rented a wretched tenement at Athens, "an old Turkish tower," where they began with any poor children who wanted to come. Before the end of their first year, they were using all three of their American helpers, besides five Greek men and five Greek women. They had an Infant School, Boys' School, Girls' School, Boys' High School, and a Training School for Women, 656 pupils on the roll, and many more begging admission.

It is difficult to write calmly and coherently of this mission, so great the need, so eager the people, so wise and devoted the missionaries. The plan was, to defer to the use of the Greek Church, especially as to Kalender and Lectionary, so that the young learners should know the truth as it is in Jesus, without departing from home and Church traditions.

So the little ones studied the Christian Year, and after services on Sundays were surrounded by eager friends, asking them to explain this and that observance, or to tell what they had last learned about Christ.

Meanwhile, Doctor Robertson's printing-office at Syra was kept busy, for not only were the Greek Scriptures in demand, but the Turks begged that Turkish type be set up, and some small books furnished to them. A missionary at Smyrna told of his old Turkish teacher, who sobbed like a child as he read the Sermon on the Mount. It was thought that similar passages, with parables, Old Testament stories, Psalms, etc., might prepare the way for the full Word of God.

LENT.

Sermons lately preached in All Saints' Church, Margaret street, London, have awakened a very uneasy feeling that our England of to-day is insensibly losing the Christianity which she was careful to profess at the beginning of Queen Victoria's reign, that the upper strata of English society are in danger of relapsing into frank paganism. No one can seriously consider so grave a catastrophe in any class without anxiety; but one cannot examine the relation of fashionable society to God without finding cause of serious uneasiness concerning our own personal relation to God. We see everywhere whole families of children growing up uninfluenced by Christianity because they have never been taught Christianity by being led into the practice of the Christian life. But we who have been better taught, and led some little way in the duties of religion, find it terribly possible to slip almost insensibly out of Christian practice, and consequently through faint degrees of indifference out of touch with God. Is it not possible to have gained through the habit of prayer some knowledge of God, and after all to lose that knowledge? We cannot read such a disclosure of the godlessness of modern society in England, without raising anxious questions about our own life. Where does my own personal relation to God come in? If I am conscious of it, how far does it affect, how far does it rule my life? It is reasonable to believe in astronomy and chemistry without personal experimental knowledge of those sciences. I can even pick up from the newspaper scraps of knowledge of their contents, but I cannot know God but by personally seeking Him in Christ. I cannot believe in Christ simply from report of others. I become a true believer in Christ by interior spiritual union with Him. If the Christian religion is not, like the religion of the ancient Greeks, or of the Hindus of to-day, a mythology, or like the religion of the Scribes and Pharisees, a worldly system of complicated rules and ceremonies, but a life lived every day in personal relation to God—then I have good reason this Lent to examine my own claim to be a Christian.

It is so easy to drift, as it were, from one's moorings in the night—to feel sure that once we had a living conscious relation to God that inspired us in all we were doing, and after all through carelessness or pressure of circumstances to lose it, and not to observe the loss. We are deploring the loss of faith in general society, but there is need to inquire whether we ourselves have kept it. It will help us in the inquiry to remember that to keep the faith is not to hold certain opinions, but to live the Christian life, and that of Christian life moral and spiritual growth is the token. If we are living the Christian life in union with Christ, there must be the moral and spiritual effort of life maintained, there must be growth in Christian habits and character, and in the knowledge of God. Are we growing in grace? There is serious need to ask such questions at this time.

And this is a principal object of Lent, for any real observance of it brings us right up to the Light which alone reveals any man's relation to God—the Light from the Cross—the Light which is Christ crucified for us. One of the wisest of men said that an unexamined life is not worth living. Lent brings us to an annual test. If it is a forty days' pilgrimage with Christ to the Cross, it must be a time of self-revelation for all who follow it seriously. Now we come back to school to learn afresh the old lessons; Christ on the Cross is our book. There we recognize once more the loveliness of our ideal—conformity to Christ crucified: and that great light shews us how far we have fallen below it. If these forty days are seriously given to the recovery of the image of Christ in our life, entertainments naturally drop out for the season, and we seize upon some fit time to read, to think, to revive the mental prayer which perhaps died exhausted under pressure of social preoccupations. And no sooner do we begin to recover prayer but the situation grows clearer, and we find our Christian life is so delapidated and insecure that we must begin to build it up again from the ground. Where then are we to begin? We remember that all we have ever gained in the knowledge of God, we gained by prayer, and obedience that grew out of prayer. So we begin our pilgrimage of recovery with prayer, for the first step in it is that which brings penitents back to God, to make our fresh start from God. The idle world amuses itself sometimes with discussion of religious opinions. Lent has no time for intellectual frivolities.

but leads us in gracious silence straight up to a course of practical exercises in Christian life. No one learns to know God from discussion of religious opinions, or even from good books or sermons, but from personally seeking God through Christ as he silently turns what he hears or reads into prayer and Christian practice.

The Church indicates plainly the course of exercises which will best prepare us to learn the fellowship of the Cross of Christ to which Lent leads us. The duties of prayer, fasting, and almsgiving have their claim upon all Christians, but in different degrees in the case of each individual. Christ crucified is the pattern for the feeblest as well as for the stoutest; the weakest just as the strongest, whatever the rule for each may be, will keep his rule looking unto Jesus as his pattern, his joy and his inspiration in every exercise. Each week of Lent will give us some lesson of Jesus learning obedience by the things that He suffered—a lesson to lead us on to the Cross. Jesus fasting and tempted of the devil, Jesus bearing the sorrows of the heathen, Jesus facing the bitterness of heated religious controversy, and declining the false sweetness of sentiment in order to commend the stern reality of Christian practice, Jesus in poverty feeding the hungry, Jesus is God, and the predestined sin offering, Jesus suffers death upon the Cross to bring us eternal life.

These subjects of the successive Sundays will give material enough to those who resolve this Lent to recover or to make some advance in prayer. The way of the Cross is the way of light: if we persevere through the forty days in thus coming to the light, in the practice of prayer, self-denial and works of mercy, by Easter we shall have recovered some lost ground, shall have gained something in the knowledge of God, and of our relation to Him, we shall begin to see all our life more clearly as a journey in God to God, and see better perhaps how to help souls round us who have not yet found or who have lost the end and the way of life.

It may help to be reminded of some suitable books for spiritual reading in Lent, as some of Dr. Pusey's sermons, Isaac William's volume on the Passion, Father Benson's "Final Passover," and among newer books, Dr. Simpson's "Christus Crucifixus," Mr. Brett's "The Passion in the Spiritual Life," and Mr. Mackay's sermons referred to above, entitled "The Religion of the Englishman," and addresses on the same subject by Father Figgis—these last are published by Longmans.—Cowley Evangelist.

BE STRONG.

Be strong! We are not here to play, to dream, to drift.
We have hard work to do, and loads to lift;
Shun not the struggle; face it. 'Tis God's gift:
Be strong!

Say not the days are evil—Who's to blame?
And fold the hands and acquiesce—O shame!
Stand up, speak out, and bravely, in God's name:
Be strong!

It matters not how deep entrenched the wrong,
How hard the battle goes, the day, how long;
Faint not, fight on!
To-morrow comes the song.

A layman to look after money and other business matters and allow the Bishop to attend to spiritual affairs was the suggestion made by Bishop Greer, of New York, at the dinner of the Church Club of New York last night. It was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the club and the eighth consecration of Dr. Greer.

George Gordon King, the president of the club, who was in the chair, referred to the Cathedral of St. John the Divine and its vast burden of building as enough to keep one Bishop busy. Replying, Bishop Greer said:

"The need of the Church is really not more material, but more spiritual power. Would there could be a real revival of old-fashioned religion; not a campaign, not a whirlwind, but quiet thinking, quiet prayer, quiet waiting upon God. Why is it that so many people slip away into Oriental cults and theosophicisms?

"Is not the Church somewhat at fault? Is it the spiritual force, the spiritual food for which the world craves?"—New York Sun.

PARISH NOTES.

Bishop Garland visited the Parish on the eve of February 9 and administered the Sacrament of Confirmation to twenty-one candidates.

During Lent the women of the Parish will meet as usual on Friday afternoons at 3 o'clock in the Parish Hall for the Lenten sewing.

On Sunday evening, March 24, the Eve of the Annunciation, there will be Solemn Evensong with procession at 8 o'clock, instead of the Choral Litany.

There are many who do not use the monthly Missionary envelopes which are supplied with the weekly envelopes. If everyone would make some little effort, the special offerings need not continue. It is also possible to obtain the Missionary envelopes without the weekly envelopes, but it is not desirable to separate the two.

In accordance with the provisions of the Yarnall legacy, the Vestry have established scholarships at Kent School, Connecticut, and St. Stephen's College, Annandale-on-Hudson. As a Board of Managers for the diocesan library, they have elected the Rt. Rev. P. M. Rhinelander, D.D., the Rev. Samuel Upjohn, D.D., the Rev. C. S. Hutchinson, Mr. S. McKean Bayard, and Mr. George Wharton Pepper. The Board of Trustees of the Philadelphia Divinity School have been asked to provide accommodation for the books in the library of the school.

THE APPORTIONMENT FOR MISSIONS.

The fiscal year of the Board of Missions begins on September 1, and the amount asked from St. Clement's Parish under the apportionment plan is, for this year, $2,500. This sum can be made up (1) through moneys sent to the Board by the Accounting Warden, being the amounts received by him in the offerings and which are designated for Mission work, (2) by the offerings made through the Woman's Auxiliary or the Junior Auxiliary, and (3) through offerings for Missions made by the Sunday School. It should be noted, however, that the Board does not credit to the apportionment of the Parish any offerings sent as "specials."

The Accounting Warden submits the following statement, showing the amount received in the offerings for Mission work during the current year, that is, from September 1, 1911, to February 11, 1912, inclusive:

Foreign—Work of Father Wood, Wuchang	$575.98
Foreign—Various objects	1.25
Domestic—Work in District of Salina	597.35
Domestic—Various objects	38.60
General Missions	132.95
Total towards Apportionment	$1,346.14

There is, therefore, about $1,200 which the Board of Missions hopes to receive from this Parish before August 31, to complete our apportionment, and it is hoped that the full amount may be raised.

Since September 1, the Accounting Warden has sent to the Treasurer of the Board "specials" for work in the domestic field amounting to $90, while $8.80 has been received for the work of Fr. Hughson, at St. Andrew's School, Sewanee.

In the offering for Sunday, February 18th, $416.55 was given toward the Missionary Appointment, in addition to the sum already given.

Through an oversight when the weekly offering envelopes for the present year were printed, no envelope was provided for Sunday, March 24, which is the last day of our parochial year, and the Accounting Warden's books close on March 25. It is therefore particularly requested that all those using the weekly envelopes shall provide for this omission by placing in the envelope for March 17 an amount sufficient to cover their offering for that and the following Sunday.

The envelopes for the new year will be ready for distribution in ample time for all persons to receive them before the new year begins. About 250 have been in use this year, but surely there are many more members of the Parish who should avail themselves of this method of making regular efferings toward Parochial expenses.

THE CHILDREN'S MASS.

It does not seem as though it should be necessary to tell the people of St. Clement's Parish that the chief service for men and women, and for children, on Sunday is the Mass. Catholicity is so ingrained in our grown people that for them to think of Sunday is to think of Mass. The attendance at the Sunday Masses and the communions are abundant evidence of this. But there is short-sightedness or carelessness or indifference somewhere. One has only to attend the Children's Mass to see where. The Priest is always in his place at the Altar, the acolytes are there, the organist is there, and quite a number of adults are regularly present. But the children are not there. At least, so small a number attend as to make them almost a negligible quantity.

It is very important indeed for our children to go to Sunday School to learn, among other things, what is their duty toward God and their neighbors and to learn about the Mass, but it is infinitely more important that they should do their duty toward God and their neighbors by assisting at Mass every Sunday and that they should know the Mass as well as know about it.

Truly, "youth is the to-morrow of the world." Are the mothers and fathers of St. Clement's preparing for that "to-morrow"? The answer to that question lies with us; the future of our Parish is in our hands. God grant that we may so instill the fundamentals of the Catholic faith into the hearts and minds of our children, that when their day shall come they may "rise up and called us blessed"!

A NEW ORGAN.

We need a new organ for the Chapel. There is not the slightest doubt about it. I suppose it would be possible to put the present organ into better shape by spending a considerable amount of money on it. But spending money to repair an old reed organ is neither sensible, economic, nor expedient. Who was it that said a reed organ was an invention of the evil one? One can well believe it, or at least appreciate the feelings that prompted the statement, when one considers the strain it puts on the souls, to say nothing of the nerves, of the clergy and faithful people of St. Clement's. Guild after guild comes to do service at the Chapel altar, and week after week they are welcomed by the militant blast of a squeaky reed organ. Such an instrument is not conducive to reverence, nor is it an aid to worship.

St. John's Chapel should have a small pipe organ—that is the ideal thing. At any rate, a new instrument of some sort is needed badly, and at once.

ST. CLEMENT'S FABLES.

No. I.

Almost every one liked the Widow Brown. She had the homiest house in the place, and the latch always hung on the outside.

One day a very dear friend of the Widow's thought she would make her a present, so she gave the Widow a handsome velvet rug for the sitting-room. It was a beautiful rug; every one was crazy about it, and it was good to see how happy the Widow was over the gift.

But somehow the rug didn't go with anything in the room. It made the haircloth chairs look mighty shabby, and the crocheted lambrequin looked every bit as old as it was. And wax flowers don't look well with velvet carpet, anyway. As for the air-tight stove, well, that was just impossible. Even the Widow saw that, and it took all of a year's savings to buy a respectable cylinder stove.

Of course, all the Widow's relatives and friends saw how awfully the sitting-room looked, and, of course, they ought to have clubbed together to buy her some new chairs and things in return for all her kindness and love and hospitality. But they didn't. They managed somehow to keep the rug and the Widow in mind when they came, and forgot the rest of the worn-out furniture. How could they stand that striped wall-paper with its pink buds and blue bow-knots, I never could understand. Needless to remark, when people called who were none too friendly they almost laughed outright, and when they got outside they talked something awful. It was really too bad. And the saddest part was that a great many of the Widow's friends died and a great many more moved away. At last the Widow died also.

Now, St. Clement's has a beautiful sanctuary, but ——! Verb. sap.

The Church is the only institution in America which stands for consistent and conscientious Lent keeping. Our Protestant brethren have no Lent, and therefore cannot be charged with Lent-breaking. The Romans theoretically abstain from everything, and are then solemnly dispensed from keeping their abstinence; so that persons under 50 years of age and those over, those who labor and those who wait, nursing mothers and especially those who are not, are one and all dispensed on one ground or another. It is left to the Church, therefore, to keep Lent honestly and consistently. Our weak ones, who must have just one more hand of bridge—or see just this particular play—or hear just this one singer—or attend just this one cotillion, make the whole splendid system of the Church ridiculous by their miserable self-indulgence. For the Church, unlike other Christian bodies, has a Lent, and unlike the Roman system, has no blanket-dispensation. —All Saints' Chronicle.

JANUARY 23.

Jack left us yesterday morning at about 7.40. He was doing splendidly until Thursday night, when peritonitis with sympathetic appendicitis set in. Sunday morning I telegraphed you, as he was very low, and suffering greatly. He kept up his strength, however, through the day, but as night came on he began to show all the premonitions of a fatal ending of the malady. At 8 o'clock his pulse was 144 and weak and fluttering. Dr. Lear brought Dr. Lundy out with him, and an extra nurse, prepared to operate. Jack's condition, however, made this impossible, and though the doctors worked heroically with him all night, it was of no avail.

At about 10 o'clock they were still undecided as to the operation, and we determined to give him his Viaticum. He had been anointed a few days before. I went to him and told him of his condition and asked him if he would not like to have his Communion. He was perfectly conscious, but very heavy. At the mention of the Blessed Sacrament he roused himself up with great eagerness. "When?" he asked. "Right now," I said. "Yes," he replied, "don't wait; go right off and bring it to me, Father," and reaching out he almost thrust me away from the bed in his eagerness. As I turned to go, he called me back. "Give me a blessing first," he said. I blessed him, and went to the monastery and brought the Sacrament to him. He received it with great devotion, his face beautifully transfigured, and then composing himself he asked every one to leave the room for a little while. We all went out and left him with his Lord, whom he loved so much. It was very sweet and wonderful, and those who knelt about his bed will never forget it.

I lay down about 1 o'clock, and was called about sunrise, as the doctor said he had only a few hours. I stayed with him a little while, and then went to the monastery to celebrate. I was on the point of vesting when a message arrived to come to him immediately, but he was gone before I reached him. He died very quietly, conscious to the end, with scarcely the least struggle. There seemed to have been no pain at the end. I returned immediately to St. Michael's and celebrated his Requiem, the boys and all others on the place who could come, assisting.

The morning was a radiant one. The great cold and storm of the last week had passed, and the wind was like a breath of April. Shortly afterwards, I walked out into the yard, and a robin, the first any one had seen, was singing in a tree just opposite Jack's window. It was the very first sign of the coming spring, and a blessed earnest that for Jack the winter had passed and gone, and his soul stood amidst the dawning of the eternal springtime.

After the De Profundis last night, we brought the body to St. Andrew's Chapel, and the watch was kept until 9 o'clock this morning. The boys took it until midnight, and the rest of us alternated in watches of two hours each for the remainder of the night. I took the watch from midnight until 2. The body lay before the altar, the coffin covered with a pall, the great white cross of which seemed to enfold under its protection the body which had enshrined this pure and loving young soul. It was a sweet and unearthly experience—alone with God and Jack in the little Chapel in the midnight stillness of the mountain top, while the stars kept vigil outside. It made the companionship of God and His Saints very real.

We buried him this morning. All the solemn glory of the Church's service for her faithful departed we offered to God in intercession and thanksgiving for the soul it had been our privilege to train up for the Kingdom. We laid him to rest under the great oaks at the far end of the monastery enclosure. It was a fitting end of Jack's earthly life to be laid here within sight of the altar he loved so much. His father lived on this place eighteen years ago, and here Jack was born in the old building of St. Andrew's. Here he was baptized, here he was confirmed and made his first Confession and first Communion. Here during his brief life he had learned to love and serve God. Here he was prepared for death, and from this place his soul went out to greet the Lord he loved. The memory of him will be one of our precious treasures, and it is a blessing we shall not cease to value that his ashes rest here. It will mean much to our boys; it will mean much to us.

It is easy to praise the dead after they are gone, but Jack's mead of praise did not have to wait for expression until he left us. It has always been said amongst us that we have never had a lad in the school who made such spiritual response as Jack. No mere acolyte's enthusiasm for the Church's ritual and service was his. This was not his type. In fact, when it came to mere attendance on services or lingering about the Sanctuary, there was less of it with him than with some others. We have all seen how often this kind of enthusiasm declines, and many a young lad we have expected great things of has fallen back into the ways of the world. Jack's was a quiet, unobtrusive love for our Lord that burned with steady intensity, and lighted up every commonplace thing in his daily life. If St. Andrew's had never done anything else but bring him to the blessed place he now fills, all we have done here would have been a thousandfold worth while. Pray for his soul.

Your loving son,

S. C. HUGHSON, O.H.C.

Extracts from The Religion of the Englishman, by the Rev. H. F. B. Mackay, M.A.

"Religion is a Life. A child can only take it in as it takes in the other constituents of its life, the sun and the air, and the bread and butter, when like these it is in the atmosphere and in the inevitable routine of its home.

"Now if religion is not sun and air, and bread and butter to the father and mother, it will not be to the child. And it is only sun and air, and bread and butter to the father and mother when they have a personal experience of God. A personal experience of God."

"You will never see your way until you begin to act. Solvitur ambulando. If you would verify your supposition that God exists, you must make a great venture on the basis of that supposition. You must seek to know God as you seek to know another human spirit, and your search must be worthy of the nobility of your quest."

"Man! have you never learned that the pursuit of God is the divine adventure!"

"Young men and women in . . . society to-day, even the well-intentioned ones, do not know what to think about Jesus Christ, and this is why they cannot set out upon the pursuit of God. Before setting out upon the divine adventure, it is not at all necessary to have defined one's relation to Balaam's ass or Jonah's whale, but it is necessary to have defined one's attitude to Jesus of Nazareth. One must either take His path or another, and Jesus so completely dominates the . . . situation, that it is impossible to try another path until one has cleared Him out of the way."

"Christianity is the knowledge that Jesus is All, that there is nothing further anywhere." "Such Christianity was in the beginning; such it is now; such it ever will be. It is the knowledge that while there are many ways by which the spirit of man can commune with the Spirit of God, the Spirit of God has opened the perfect way in Jesus, in whom the Spirit of God and the spirit of man are indissolubly united in a Person, Who is God."

" . . . the Catholic religion. It is easy to recognize it. There is nothing at all like it, there is nothing in the world so passionately loved; there is nothing in the world so bitterly hated. Its typical product is unique. The Catholic saint is the product of the Catholic religion. The communities which have been formed in opposition to the Church have produced noble men and heroes, but they have never produced a Catholic saint.

"It is not difficult to describe the Catholic religion. It circles round an altar which is both on earth and in heaven, and where time is not. It is always Bethlehem there; it is always Calvary; it is always the garden by the Cross. And around it the men of power are ever standing. They do not pass away. The new generation but adds another outer circle to the throng. About this central point the Catholic Christian worship, and prays, and works, and eats, and rests, and sleeps, and plays. Death does not sever him from it. It only moves him from one group to another and brings him nearer. Death forms no barrier between the groups. The one communion and fellowship of worship and reciprocal prayer radiates from the Centre and pervades the whole."

MY LORD AND I.

"I worked for men," my Lord will say,
When we meet at the end of the King's Highway.
"I walked with the beggar along the road,
I kissed the bondsman stung by the goad,
I bore my half of the porter's load,
And what did you?" my Lord will say,
"As you traveled along the King's Highway."

"I made life sweet," my Lord will say,
When we meet at the end of the King's Highway.
"I smoothed the path where the thorns annoy,
I gave the mother back her boy,
I mended the children's broken toy,
And what did you?" my Lord will say,
"As you traveled along the King's Highway."

"I showed men God," my Lord will say,
"As I traveled along the King's Highway.
I eased the sister's troubled mind;
I helped the blighted to be resigned;
I showed the sky to the souls grown blind,
And what did you?" my Lord will say,
"When we meet at the end of the King's Highway."

PUBLICATION COMMITTEE.

Mr. W. W. Lukens.
Mr. Edward A. Casey.
Mr. Clinton Rogers Woodruff.

S. Clement's Magazine is dependent for its support upon the subscriptions and the gifts of the congregation. Every member of the parish should receive a copy of the paper. Subscriptions may be sent to the Clergy House.

PARISH NOTES.

If everyone using the cushions in S. John's Chapel would hang them up after each service, it would be a great help.

Last year the Woman's Auxiliary made itself responsible for S. Clement's Scholarship at S. Mary's-on-the-Mountain, Sewanee, which calls for fifty dollars annually. If those, who at that time promised their help, will send their subscription now to the Treasurer, it will be much appreciated.

The Retreat of S. Mary's Guild was held on Thursday in Passion Week, and the Rev. W. B. P. Harrison, Assistant at S. Elizabeth's, Philadelphia, was the conductor. The Retreat of the Holy Cross and S. Katharine's Guilds was held on the third Sunday in Lent, conducted by the Rev. E. H. Schlueter, Vicar of S. Luke's Chapel, Trinity Parish, New York City. Eighty persons made the Retreat.

Fr. Shick, who has been a member of our clerical staff since the first of May, will leave us after Easter and take charge of the work at S. Martin's College, Seventh and Catherine Streets. This is one of the most necessary and important works in the city, and the Trustees believe Fr. Shick to be eminently fitted for its work. Under his management, the Sunday School has prospered, and he will be much missed by the young people. We wish him every happiness in his new work.

HOURS FOR CONFESSION.

The hours of the clergy for Holy Week are as follows: Father Hutchinson, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, 10.30 A. M. to 11.30 A. M. Good Friday, 4-5, 7-8 P. M. Easter Even, 10-12 M., 7-9 P. M.

The other clergy: Wednesday and Thursday, 4-5 P. M. Good Friday, 3-5, 7-8 P. M. Easter Even, 3-5, 7-10 P. M.

The people are asked not to delay their confessions, but to make them as early in Holy Week as possible.

Of your charity pray for the repose of the soul of Kate I. Field, for thirty-five years a member of S. Clement's Parish.

Give rest, O Christ, to Thy servant with Thy Saints, where sorrow and pain are no more, neither sighing, but life everlasting. Amen.

PARISH FINANCES.

The Easter offering this year will be devoted to the payment of the current expenses of the parish. This is necessary, because many who enjoy the privileges of S. Clement's Church do not contribute as much as they ought or as much as they can afford to the support of the parish. We have about seven hundred communicants, and of these only two hundred and fifty are using the weekly envelopes, although the desirability of this method of parish support has been many times explained to the congregation. There seems to be a strange notion in the minds of many people that the work of the parish will continue in some miraculous fashion, whether the financial support continues or not.

We now owe a sum of two thousand dollars for current parish expenses. For the honour of the parish, this ought to be met at Easter. If every communicant would give generously, according to his real ability, there would be no difficulty in raising the amount.

EASTERTIDE.

The Resurrection of Jesus Christ was the triumphant proclamation of His Godhead. The cry that burst from the lips of the Apostle Thomas, as he bowed in adoration before the Risen Lord, has become the great Act of Faith of the Catholic Church: "My Lord and My God!"

And the triumph of the Resurrection culminated in the Ascension Glory. The vision of the Apostles is that of the Church. Since the day in which their Lord "was parted from them and a cloud received him out of their sight," all Christian souls gazing up into heaven behold the Risen and Ascended Jesus, at the right hand of the Eternal Majesty—our Great High Priest who ever liveth to make intercession for us.

Each recurring Eastertide intensifies this Vision. As we kneel before the Altar and join with the priest in offering the Eucharistic Sacrifice, we experience for ourselves the joy of that upper chamber, where the Disciples were assembled on the first Easter Day. In the stillness of the early morning hour we hear a spoken word, and Christ is in our midst, by the power of the Holy Spirit, veiling His Risen Body under the forms of bread and wine. In that Divine Presence we bow with S. Thomas in adoring love, and by Sacramental Union with our Lord we are lifted up into the very court of Heaven itself, and truly join with the Angels and the Saints, who, in the joy of the Beatific Vision, offer their perfect worship to the Lamb in the midst of the Throne. We appropriate and are made one with the Ascension Glory, and share in the Intercession of our High Priest as he pleads the merits of the Sacrifice of Calvary.

The life of intercession, then, is the inevitable outcome of Sacramental Union with Christ. If He dwells in us and we in Him; if our lives are to be manifestations of His Life in us, then an essential part of that life must be prayer, the pleading of the Cross.

In proportion as we apprehend this truth our prayers become instinct with Life and Power. We are no longer detached souls offering weak and individual petitions, but knit together in the Mystical Body of Christ, we share in the intercession of His Saints, whether militant on earth or triumphant in Heaven, and our High Priest, the Risen Jesus, gathers unto Himself all the petitions of His members, energizing them with His Divine Power, lifting them up in union with His own Pleading, and the Divine Mercy, looking upon the Face of His Anointed, receives and answers every prayer.

S. CLEMENT'S FABLES. No. 2.

Mrs. Jones was very popular. She was also exceedingly busy, for she was interested in a number of things; yes, a number of things. In the first place, she went to Prayer Meeting every day, and to Church twice on Sunday, as well as Sunday School. She needed it, no doubt. On Monday evening she went to the Good Templars' meeting. The Civic Improvement Society met on Tuesday. Mrs. Jones was always there. Wednesday summoned the Suffragist League to arms. Mrs. Jones never missed the roll call. Thursday saw the Missionary Society in session, with Mrs. Jones in the Chair. On Friday Mrs. Jones sewed for the heathen. And Saturday afternoon always saw her at the Sunshine Club. Truly, Mrs. Jones was a very busy woman, and was without doubt quite an important person.

But there was something funny about Mrs. Jones, after all. She had a husband and five children! You would never have guessed that, would you? Yes, five children. Nobody knew much about Mr. Jones. He didn't even shine by reflected light. He was never seen in Church. He worked hard, and thought hard, perhaps. Nobody knew, however. John and Bill never went to Sunday School or to Church, except on Sunday night, when they sat in the gallery where they could talk to the girls. Other evenings they spent in Sykes' Billiard Parlors. Mamie and Sallie went to Church when they felt like it, never to Sunday School. They seemed to be very fond of their Aunt Rebecca Charlotte. She had such a cozy home, and seemed to take an interest in them. Fred was the only one who went regularly to Church and Sunday School. But he just naturally loved it.

Of course, no one could blame Mrs. Jones in the matter. She was such a public-spirited woman, and so much in demand that she really had no time to devote to her own children. Oh, dear, no. One could not expect it.

Now, S. Clement's has six hundred and ninety-one communicants, and one hundred and sixty-eight children in the Sunday School. Verb. Sap.

THE PASSING OF DOUGLAS MORGAN HALL.

A parishioner, at one time a member of the Choir, sends us the following appreciation of Douglas Morgan Hall:

'Douglas Morgan Hall, in 1878, at eleven years of age, was a choir boy at S. Clement's. He remained in the Treble Choir until his voice changed and then joined the Acólyte's Guild. He served at the Altar—I do not recall just how many years—until he was a young man. He graduated from the Episcopal Academy and qualified at the University of Pennsylvania, when he met with an accident. He was the son and grandson of noted physicians. I recall, after all these years, a gentleness and sweetness of bearing in all his associations with his friends, especially with the boys and men of the Choir.

"How fitting that after an illness of nearly eighteen years his body should be brought to the crypt and repose there over Sunday, and its final resting place should be at S. James the Less, with many of those he had loved and laboured with. In the Heavenly Kingdom may he at last have found rest for his tired mind and weary body."

Thou hallowed chosen morn of praise,
  That best and greatest shinest:
Lady and queen and day of days,
  Of things divine, divinest!
On thee our praises Christ adore
  For ever and for evermore.

Come, let us taste the Vine's new fruit,
  For heavenly joy preparing;
To-day the branches with the Root
  In Resurrection sharing:
Whom as true God our hymns adore
  For ever and for evermore.

Rise, Sion, rise! and looking forth,
  Behold thy children round thee!
From east and west, from south and north,
  Thy scattered sons have found thee:
And in thy bosom Christ adore
  For ever and for evermore.

A Father, O co-equal Son,
  O co-eternal Spirit,
In persons Three, in substance One,
  And One in power and merit;
In thee baptized, we thee adore
  For ever and for evermore. Amen.

SOME MESSENGERS AND WHERE THEY WENT.

When the Board of Missions met for the first time after its Constitution had been established by the General Convention of 1835, it consisted of two committees. The Committee on Domestic Missions met at the residence of the Rt. Rev. B. T. Onderdonk, in New York. Their work was divided into Northern, Southern and Indian Missions.

The Foreign Committee also met at the residence of Bishop Onderdonk. As we have said before, the American Church was too small and weak to do much foreign missionary work, so far—or thought it was—but the committee found these fields open to them: Greece, Africa, China and Persia.

1. Greece, as we have already learned (see February article), had a work well started, with encouraging prospects. The missionaries, quietly waiting their opportunity, had prepared for it by laboring at a little printing press, and the people eagerly welcomed this work, being most anxious for education, and being brought by the Turkish rule to utter lack of any means of study. The Revolution ended successfully in 1830, though it was not till February, 1833, that the Greek Government was settled under King Otho. The Greek Church was made the established religion. This ended completely the power of the Romanists, who had controlled about one-third of the people and had bitterly opposed the work of the missionaries. The Greeks themselves generally objected to the ways of the "American Board," not understanding a Christian religion without a priesthood or Sacramental teaching. It was discouraging work for these devoted men, who gave their all, and whose efforts long preceded ours. The Rev. Mr. Dwight, for example, during the time of a general pestilence, kept faithfully at work, and lost his whole family, and was greatly impoverished and broken in health. But the outspoken denunciation by these workers of the teachings of the Greek Church estranged the people.

"The Holy Council of the Kingdom of Greece" was appointed by the new government to watch especially over the religious teaching of the young, schools, and literature generally. The tact and wisdom exercised by the Church missionaries was now recognized by the government, which protected their work. But it is greatly to their credit that the popular outbreaks against Protestant missions did not touch them at all, before this, as they had a strong hold on the affections of the people. While the country was undergoing a great revolution, a not less great revolution was being quietly brought about in their homes, through the Hills' wonderful influence over the young Greek women. Preference was given by them to the daughters of the poor, but men high in Church and State were glad to get their daughters into the schools, and the public "examinations" were times of great interest, parents and friends crowding in to hear, and stately dignitaries gravely inspecting needlework and copybooks. It must have been rather overpowering, at times, anyway. Imagine hearing the Gloria in Excelsis sung in Greek by several hundred children!

The school which the Hills began at Athens in 1830 at first took in children of all ages. Then, as teachers were needed, they had to be selected from among the older scholars. This led to a department for teacher training. By the time of the first report to the Board of Missions, this had become so important a work that it was recognized as the Government Seminary for Training of Women Teachers and had about six hundred scholars.

2. Africa. The great opportunity here was at Liberia, founded and settled by the efforts of the American Colonization Society about 1820. This was intended as a home for freed slaves from the Southern States and ships were provided by the Society. It was not long before the Church people of America began to consider sending over missionaries, and considerable enthusiasm was aroused for a time. Many volunteered, among them three young colored students who were educated at Hartford, Conn., two being ordained especially for this work. But a great obstacle arose. The Colonization Society, for some reason not well understood now, refused passage in its ships to missionaries. The opposition was not always open, but in some mysterious way every attempt failed. It may have been that the Society realized the fact that the Americanized colored people were generally lacking in tact and patience with the natives. These resented the parcelling out of their land to strangers who looked down on them, and at times there were outbreaks which threatened the very existence of the colony.

Many of the American colored people were very homesick for their own Church privileges. In some parts of the South the majority of the wealthy, and therefore slave-owning, proprietors were Church people, and the S. P. G. missionaries had given great impetus to the work done by many good Christian ladies in Sunday School work among their slaves. Finally, one brave colored man struggled with the problem, trying to keep the children, at least from ignorance of the dear old ways till God should send them happier times. James Thompson, with his devoted wife, gathered the children of their neighbors and friends, and in the most unobtrusive way set about their education along Church lines. He not only succeeded in establishing a well-managed little school, but also won the longed-wished-for cooperation of the Colonization Society, which announced to the Board that they would grant a tract of land to be used as a Mission School site, together with a lot of ten acres for cultivation. What time the Mission might be abandoned, this property was to revert to the Society. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson were then placed in charge of the School, and Mr. Thompson was notified that in the event of his being ordained he would be appointed a missionary to Western Africa. Church people had rather lost heart over this work, so the speakers at Missionary services were instructed to make Africa a leading topic.

A NOTE AS TO CHURCH UNITY.

For those who desire to see progress made along true lines in the direction of Church unity there is great interest in the comity frequently expressed between the English Church and the Orthodox Russian Church. In the past there have been interchanges of courtesy; in some instances in the mission field Russian Church members have received the Sacraments at the hands of English and American priests. Such an unity of sacramental life appeals to some minds as being of more value in undoing the evils of division than the interchange of pulpits with the Protestant sects; and every attempt to create a better understanding between the East and the West is full of promise for the future.

Recently, a party of English churchmen, including the Bishops of Wakefield, Exeter, Bangor and Ossory, paid a visit to St. Petersburg and were received with great honor. They attended two important services in the Russian churches, and then on January 30th a sung Mass was arranged in the English Church. The resident chaplain was the celebrant, the Bishop of Wakefield pontificated in cope and mitre and the Bishop of Ossory was the preacher. The Russian visitors included the Archbishop of Finland, four other Bishops and a numerous party of dignitaries, all of whom marched in procession. In the congregation were the President of the Duma, the Procurator of the Holy Synod and many other distinguished laymen. The chief point of note about this service was that it was the first time a Russian Bishop had been present at a service in the English Church there. This in itself is a significant mark of the occasion.

In the afternoon of the same day there was officially organized a society which is to correspond to the already existing Anglican and Eastern Orthodox Churches Union. This new society has the official sanction of the Holy Synod, which is the chief governing body of the Orthodox Church, and the Bishop of Holm is its president, some other Bishops being members. Its purpose is the same as that of the "A. E. O. C. U.," namely, the promotion of mutual sympathy, understanding and intercourse, and the encouragement of action and study furthering reunion. The formation of this Russian society seems very important, as there are now these two societies, each working in its own country to spread a better knowledge of these national Churches. It is from such a spreading of accurate information and the enlightenment which it will bring that we may hope, in God's time, for some definite move toward intercommunion between the Anglican and Orthodox Churches.

The "A. E. O. C. U." has an American branch, of which twenty-five Bishops are honorary vice-presidents; the active vice-president is the Bishop Coadjutor of New Hampshire, and the secretary is the Rev. Calbraith B. Perry, rector of Cambridge, New York. We cannot but feel that work of this sort is on the right lines, that it is getting at the root of things in a way which will bring forth fruit in real unity, not in an imitation based on federation with the sacramental life of the Church left out.—Mt. PARISH NOTES.

The Rector's Wednesday afternoon class has been discontinued.

The Church will be open as usual for intercessions on the Rogation Days, from 6 A. M. until 9 P. M.

The Paschal Candle was decorated this year by Miss Hagert. Four scenes from the Life of our Lord are worked into the design, and the coloring is very pleasing.

The collection on Ascension Day will be used to defray the expenses of any who may be unable to afford a summer holiday. It is hoped a generous amount may be given.

Some very beautiful vestments were blessed on Holy Saturday and used for the first time on Easter Day.

For the past year the Altar Guild has been working upon the festal cope, which was completed in Holy Week. A Sister of the Community of S. Mary designed the orphreys and arranged the color scheme, and the embroidery was done by members of the Guild.

The material of the cope is of heavy gold and white brocade. On the centre of the orphrey of pale blue silk are embroidered seven golden candlesticks, highly conventionalized, and an outline in gold, blue and red forms a fitting frame for six pictures representing scenes from our Lord's Life. These are The Annunciation, The Nativity, The Epiphany, The Presentation, The Transfiguration, and The Resurrection. Upon the hood is embroidered the Ascension of our Lord. The pictures are most exquisitely wrought, and the cope is the most beautiful that we have ever possessed at St. Clement's.

A set of Solemn Mass vestments, the work of the Sisters of All Saints' Community, has also been presented to the parish. The fabric is a rich white brocade of an ivory tone. The design does not pretend to great originality. The general outlines and colorings of the chasuble are copied from an old Italian vestment; and the rest of the design is planned to harmonize with that; it is adapted from the best models of the Renaissance period.

The main thought of all Renaissance work, as everyone knows, is the joy of life: too often, indeed, it is a wild and pagan joy, but when brought into the service of the Church, it lends itself to the deepest teachings of the Catholic religion. Here it represents the offering of all creation, consecrated to the praise of the Creator; and the underlying thought is best expressed in the Eighth Psalm. Thus the chasuble shows the offering of the flowers and green things of the earth; and the birds are not merely fowls of the air, one step higher in creation; but from the earliest days of the Church have stood for Christian souls, flying between earth and heaven. The chalice veil concentrates the same idea into narrower space. Here the dolphins, the fishes of the sea, are interwoven with the leaves, below the feet of man, the potter's vessel, whose offering to God includes both the apples of his fall and the wheat of his redemption. The symbolism of the period is rather suggestive than elaborate, and is meant to leave a good deal to the imagination.

The work is wonderful, both in execution and color, and these vestments, with the new cope, are most worthy for the setting forth of God's Glory in the Sacrifice of the Mass.

A parishioner has also presented a fair linen cloth for the High Altar, of fine texture, beautifully embroidered.

EASTER AND HOLY WEEK.

Holy Week was observed with the usual solemnities. There were large congregations on Maunday Thursday and Good Friday, and the Easter Festival was kept most joyously. A large communion set the proper note for the day, and at the Solemn Mass the Choir rendered Martin in C most acceptably. In the evening, in spite of the storm, the Church was well filled. The offering for all objects was $1,589.19.

While the offering on Easter Day was very generous, it fell short of the amount asked, and necessitates the designation of the Whitsunday collection for the same purpose. If we are to be free of debt in October, there must be a very generous response of the parishioners.

Those who leave the city for a protracted holiday are asked to provide for their weekly envelope offerings in advance.

The Parish expenses continue during the summer.

Of your charity pray for the repose of the soul of Mary Louise Freeman. Grant unto her, O Lord, eternal rest and let light perpetual shine upon her.

EMMA BARTOW SANFORD.

On the 17th of March, Mrs. Emma Bartow Sanford entered into life. Mrs. Sanford was the daughter of Rev. William H. Lewis, the first Rector of Holy Trinity Church, Brooklyn. As a young girl she was most successful in Sunday School work, which she continued in her husband's and her son's parishes until she was over seventy years of age. She married in 1852 Rev. David Platt Sanford, Rector of the Church of the Redeemer, Brooklyn. As there were few hymns suitable for children in those days, she compiled a hymnal for young children. She also wrote many children's stories for Sunday School libraries. She accompanied her husband to Minnesota, where he went to help Dr. Breck, and her recollections of that hard experience in the wilderness were vivid.

Mrs. Sanford was a woman of rare spiritual attainments, and wore her years with a grace and beauty that is seldom seen in these modern days. To her was given the privilege of seeing two sons called to the Priesthood of the Church.

May she rest in peace.

SOME MESSENGERS AND WHERE THEY WENT.

3. China. The Revs. Hanson and Lockwood had a very weary journey of ninety-seven days before reaching their destination. This was about sixty miles from Canton, where they intended to survey the situation and decide upon their course of action. As they were obliged to wait several days at the seaport, they went over to Macao to visit the Rev. Mr. Gutzlaff, a Prussian missionary. He was doing a very active work among the poor and the sick, and his wife was busy with the little Chinese girls.

(Those who were interested in the "Church work among the blind" may be interested to know that two of these girls, cruelly blinded in infancy, were brought to this country about the time of which we write, and are now enjoying a peaceful old age at the Institution for the Blind at Overbrook. One of the Church Work visitors escorts one of them to Church every Sunday. After all these years of Western training, quaint little Chinese traits crop out now and then.)

Rev. Mr. Gutzlaff strongly urged the young missionaries to live at Singapore for a time, and after they had visited Canton and realized the difficulties there, they took his advice. The feeling in China was very bitter against foreigners—"foreign devils"—and even the servants were spies. No one would be friendly because no one dared. It cost, also, about twice as much to live in China, and that was a consideration because the offerings for Chinese Missions were not large at first. The only one of any amount was $500 from the ladies of Christ Church, Baltimore, in 1835. So expenses had to be met from the general fund.

Singapore was the nearest English settlement, and therefore the only available place, as the Dutch and Spanish were very unfriendly. At Singapore the Chinese were very numerous, and friendly intercourse with them was easy. Great progress in studying their language and customs might therefore be expected.

How interesting, now that the daily papers are full of news from a China waking up to a freedom effected by educated Chinese, to follow the struggles of the missionaries through those early years! "When China wakes, the face of the world will change." How much of this awakening has come about through the work of our own beloved Church is known only to God.

4. Persia. The Rev. Horatio Southgate, Jr., of Portland, Maine, had for some time made a study of the Mohammedans in the East. He interested so many in his ideas, that when the Board finally authorized him to visit the East, to study the situation, and perhaps organize a Mission to the Mohammedans, subscriptions began to pour in. Especially, St. Andrew's Church, Philadelphia, pledged $1,000 a year, and sent $900 at once. The plan was to go to Smyrna and consult missionaries there, and to spend several months studying at Constantinople, with native teachers. As Persia seemed the most encouraging field, the missionary was to live for a time in each of its principal cities, and then return, by way of Syria and Egypt, to Constantinople. The St. Andrew's pledge secured the missionary's expenses, and Mr. Southgate set forth with high hopes. He did, however, realize that he would incur danger, as he was liable to arrest and imprisonment, if his notes were to fall into the hands of any Persian official. Anything of that sort rendered a man liable to death as a "spy." In a beautiful letter he begged the Church to send him a companion soon, so that if he were killed there would be some one to come back and tell the story and plead his cause.

Uphold the feet that stumble,
  Confirm the steps that slide;
Come, teacher of the humble,
  Thou vanquisher of pride:
Thou dost befriend—nay rather
The orphan thou dost father,
  And right the widow's wrong.

Come, Paraclete most holy,
  Turn sinner into saint;
Hope of the poor and lowly,
  Revive the dead, the faint:
Come, Star, True course declaring
To mariners sea-faring;
  Safe port to shipmen wreck'd.

Sole boast of all poor mortals
  That draw of life the breath,
Come, when we near the portals—
  The darksome gates of death;
Come, Lord, alone supplying Salvation to the dying;
  Come, Holy Spirit, Come!

PARISH NOTES.

On Rogation Sunday the Rev. Dr. Rodgers, President of St. Stephen's College, preached at St. Clement's

After Trinity Sunday, the 8 o'clock Mass on Sundays will be discontinued, and the 7.30 Mass on Mondays will be given up.

On Monday, April 22, at 10 o'clock, a Solemn Mass of Requiem was sung for the repose of the souls of those who went down on the Titanic. Father Hutchinson was Celebrant, Father Quin Deacon and Father Ward, of St. Elizabeth's, Subdeacon.

On Wednesday evening, May 1, St. Vincent's Guild assisted at a service for Acolytes held at the Church of the Annunciation. The Reverend Fathers Quin and Underhill and fourteen members of the Guild were present. The service consisted of Solemn Evensong, Procession and Adoration. Father Quin was the Celebrant.

On the fifth Sunday after Easter, the Rector presented the awards for perfect attendance at Sunday School. There were seven first term awards and fifteen second term awards. A first term award consists of an aluminum pin, which is given for perfect attendance for twelve Sundays. A second term award consists of a bronze pin, given for perfect attendance during twenty-four consecutive Sundays.

On the 17th of April an exhibition of the vestments belonging to the Church was held in the parish hall. In spite of the inclement weather many persons came to inspect our treasures. The vestments were well arranged by members of the Altar Guild, and they filled the two large rooms. The new cope and vestments worn on Easter Day were much admired, and many were surprised to learn of the extent of our possessions. It is planned to hold a two days' exhibit at St. Clement's tide.

On Easter Monday evening the dancing class held its last meeting for the season. The gymnasium had been very beautifully decorated by a committee of young men. Pink and white festoons covered the ceiling, and palms and potted plants were tastefully used at the ends of the room. Very pretty favors for the cotillion were sent from Paris by a good friend, and a very dainty collation was served in the parish hall at 10.30. The class has been meeting twice each month during the winter and has been a great success.

At a meeting of the Vestry, held on Tuesday evening, May 14, the Property Committee reported that immediate repairs to the ceiling and roof trusses of the church are necessary. The work must be done this summer, and will necessitate giving up the church for several months, during which time services will be held in the parish building. It is hoped that operations may be commenced soon after Trinity Sunday. A detailed account of the plans and the amount of money involved will be given in the July number of the magazine.

The Diocesan Convention of the Diocese met in the Church of St. Luke and the Epiphany on May 7 and 8. It was a convention long to be remembered for its harmonious and zealous spirit. The Bishop of the Diocese proved himself a presiding officer of marked ability, and his address, which is to be printed for circulation, ought to be an inspiration to the Diocese. He gave to the Diocese as a "sort of slogan" the motto "Six churches in six years. One church a year." The convention passed a resolution asking for the formation of a special committee to carry out this plan. It is probable that the building of St. Barnabas' Church, West Philadelphia, as a memorial to Bishop Whitaker will be the first task to be undertaken by the Diocese.

On the feast of the Ascension the Bishop of the Diocese consecrated the Church of St. Alban, Olney. In spite of the bad weather, there was a goodly congregation, and many of the clergy came to join with Father Knowles in celebrating the joyful event. St. Alban's is a beautiful building, with every appointment for a reverent and Catholic service. At 10.30 the procession, with our Bishop properly vested in rochet and cope, formed, passing through the church yard to the west porch, the choir meanwhile with the Bishop chanting a portion of the twenty-seventh psalm. Arrived at the church door the Bishop knocked thrice and was admitted, the choir preceding him up the center aisle singing the Veni Creator. The service of consecration then followed, the Bishop preceded by Crucifer, torches and incense, going about the nave and reading the proper collects, at font, pulpit and altar. Matins was then read by the Rector of St. Clement's, and a Missa Cantata with incense followed, Father Knowles being Celebrant. The Bishop preached an inspiring sermon on the text, "My house shall be called an house of prayer for all people."

After the service a luncheon was served in the parish hall. Too much cannot be said in praise of the faithful work done by Father Knowles at St. Alban's, and we pray that God's blessing may rest upon the parish in the future.

The following was received from Father Hughson:

Thank you so much for the box which came last week. The contents are very nice indeed, and we are very grateful. Please express our appreciation to all who were concerned in it.

The work on the new building is progressing as rapidly as the weather will permit. We have a number of men at work on the excavations, and hope to be able to begin laying the foundations in a fortnight. Please pray that God will put it into the hearts of His people to send us what will be required to carry the work on to completion without interruption.

Praying Him to bless you, I am,

Yours in His loving service,

S. C. HUGHSON, O.H.C.

The following has been received from Father Kain, of the Diocese of Salina. St. Clement's has been sending $300 a year toward his salary.

ANTHONY, KAN., May 10, 1912.

The Rev. Father Hutchinson.

Dear Father: I am now in a better position to write you and give you some idea of the work under my supervision than I have been for some months past.

The fire which partially destroyed the Church at Anthony on January 29, was temporarily a great impediment to the work in that town. I say temporarily advisedly, because in reality the fire has proved to have been a great blessing. In the first place, while repairs were in progress, we held our services in a down-town theater, and many people were attracted to the theater services who had not been either in a church or a meeting house for years—one man told me he had not been to a religious meeting of any kind for seventeen years. Advantage was taken of this condition and the Church presented in as strong a light as possible. As a result, a number of those thus attracted have followed us back to the church, now that the repairs are completed, among them the man to whom I just referred, who has missed but one evening service since the first theater meeting in February. Truly " all things work together for good."

In the second place, the people of Grace Church took advantage of the opportunity offered by the fire, and in rebuilding added a splendid sacristry and study, so arranged as to afford possibilities for processions, as soon as we have a choir.

A new organ was put in the choir, and the altar furnishings renewed. A friend in the East presented a magnificient pair of 18-inch solid brass mass lights, the Sunday School provided the branched candelabra, and last week the Ladies' Guild added a beautiful crucifix, plain, solid brass, with silver corpus. Our white hangings having been restored, our Altar made its inspirational influence felt during the Easter season. The ladies are now working upon the green hangings, and will have them in readiness for Trinity Sunday.

St. George's Church, Kansas City, has furnished us with new Altar linens, and the C. B. S. restored the white vestments, which will have to serve me for a time, until either the Guild or I can secure the other colors.

It has been my pleasure this winter to conduct three missions of ten days each, one at Meade, one at Medicine Lodge, and one now in progress at Anthony in my own parish. They have been most helpful to me, and seem to have benefitted the church people, as well as interested many outsiders. Our work throughout the Salina district is along purely Cathloic lines, and results are being shown. Our people have no hesitancy about the use of such words as "father," "mass," "intention," etc., and they generally know the why of their usage.

Although we have but twenty-two communicants in Anthony and fifteen in Harper, my other parish, of which I have no occasion to make mention, our work has reached such a development that I am contemplating having a daily Mass, and I fully expect some congregation will be present each morning.

I do not forget, nor do I allow my people to forget, that much of our success here is due to the kindness, the sympathy, the thought and contributions of you and St. Clement's Parish. Your work is frequently remembered at our Altars, and I feel that you, although your intentions must be most numerous, sometimes remember us likewise.

Sincerely yours,

M. L. KAIN.

SOME MESSENGERS AND WHERE THEY WENT.

[We have been surveying the field of Foreign Missions to see how the work was begun prior to the time when the whole Church became " a missionary society," and the Board of Missions published its proceedings in the Spirit of Missions. Before going further, we must also review the work in this country, and see what had been done in the West, North, and among the Indians up to this time. The greatest of those who carried the Gospel to the outlying and churchless parts of the country, Bishop Kemper, will be the subject of our first Domestic Mission study. His letters to the Spirit of Missions will be quoted further on, but as an introduction to these, we will give here the first part of a paper read by Bishop Tuttle, at the Missionary Council in Milwaukee, October, 1897.]

BISHOP KEMPER—OUR FIRST MISSIONARY BISHOP.

"Missionary Bishop." The words have a good sound and a good meaning. . . . In popular use the words are noble and valuable. Yet in logical use they are objectionable. There is such a fact as Apostolic Succession. That means, I take it, that Bishops are successors of the Apostles. Apostle is Greek for missionary. To speak of Missionary Bishop, then, is tautology, really as absurd as to talk of wet water. Bishops, in the nature of the case, are members of a guild of which "missionary" is the very watch-word and cry—all Bishops, everywhere, of every kind, are or should be missionary.

Yet we may not be forbidden to extract the value out of the popular use of the words Missionary Bishop. In such use Bishop Kemper was the first one of the American Church; first in time, first, I think, may be claimed, in efficiency and usefulness. He was consecrated in 1835; the last of his work as technically a Missionary Bishop was his presiding in the convention which organized the Diocese of Kansas in 1859.

The year 1835 was the year of the great awakening of the American Church to warm missionary life. The American Church had had its Bishops for fifty years. Fourteen States were supplied. Honest efforts were made to furnish episcopal care to the regions outside of organized Dioceses. Bishop Brownell, of Connecticut, in 1830 and 1834, made two trips to the Southwest, officiating in Kentucky, Mississippi, Louisiana and Alabama. In 1820 a Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society had been formed, but its life was not right sturdy.

We can with little difficulty see why a Bishop had not been sent into the western wilds. Clergymen were few; we had in all the Atlantic States only 762. It was not easy to find a suitable man to send; not enough concert of action had been secured to authorize his election or provide his support, and the people of the whole country were only now really reaching a state of financial wholesomeness.

Then, under God's blessing, quiet came to change the state of things. The general convention of that year met in Philadelphia and continued thirteen days. There were fourteen Bishops in their house. There were sixty-three clerical and fifty-one lay deputies. Discussions were earnest, action was vigorous, and very much along the lines of getting more Bishops. Provision was made for the dividing of Dioceses, the case of New York being particularly in mind. It was voted to cross the word "state" out of the Constitution, and to insert "diocese" instead. Mr. Edward Newton, a layman of Massachusetts, introduced a resolution looking to the expediency of providing Missionary Bishops. Dr. Cooke, another layman of Kentucky, introduced a somewhat similar resolution for a canon to secure Bishops for States and Territories then destitute. Messages in hotter haste than had ever before been known ran between the two houses. A rousing report by the elder Doane, then a Bishop of three years, on a better organization of the Domestic and Foreign Missionray Society was discussed and adopted. He, prince of high churchmen of his day, was in hearty and loving accord with the Low Church leaders, Bishop McIlvaine and Dr. Milnor, in all matters looking to missionary plans and work. Inspiring words rang out. The field is the world, Christ's love embraces it. The Church's work is to win it. She is the one great Missionary Society. All her baptized disciples are members thereof. Rouse ye, therefore; rise ye to the glorious campaign. The Bishops are the leaders in it.

The Canon, substantially as we have it to-day, providing for the elevation of Missionary Bishops, was enacted. Missionary enthusiasm, bursting its convention bound, flowed forth into the Diocese, warming the people to thought and prayer and work for Missions. There was need, for only $26,618 had been given by all the Dioceses for general missionary work throughout the last three years.

The culmination came on the 1st of September, in that year, in the receipt of the following message from the House of Bishops to the House of Clerical and Lay Deputies, which was immediately and unanimously concurred in: "The House of Bishops informs the House of Clerical and Lay Deputies that they hereby nominate . . . the Rev. Jackson Kemper, D.D., as a Bishop to exercise Episcopal functions in the States of Missouri and Indiana."

Dr. Kemper was nearly forty-six years old. He had been in the ministry twenty-four years. Twenty of those years, under the direct eye of Bishop White, as an assistant minister in the united parishes of Christ Church, St. Peter's and St. James', Philadelphia. He had twice made extended missionary trips to Western Pennsylvania, and to the border of Ohio, reporting to Bishop White. Now for four years he had been rector of the important parish of St. Paul's, Norwalk, Conn. The call came to him. Earnest, loyal, dominated by aims of service and duty the highest and simplest, he heard it as from God, and waited not to heed and obey. In a little more than three weeks he was consecrated, and in less than six weeks thereafter he had left Philadelphia for his field. There was soldierly promptness in the order of his going. Soldierly qualities, indeed, shone out in all his long life—energy, manliness, directness, patient endurance, fidelity, chivalry, loyalty, devotion. Bishop White, in his eighty-sixth year, presided at his consecration. Bishop Kemper was the last one of the twenty-seven Bishops consecrated by Bishop White. It was the aged chieftain in the close of his own service fitting and sending forth his son into active campaign in the field.

The missionary enthusiasm of 1835 wrought a blessed change. It broadened thought and deepened love and quickened zeal; but even it had not yet melted the frigidities of nomenclature. States were entities of dignity as well as of area, and Bishops were prelates for States. So Bishop Kemper is appointed for the States of Indiana and Missouri; Indiana became a State in 1816; Missouri in 1821. One smiles to think how the active, widespread work of Bishop Kemper contributed to demolish the idea that the limitations of States have to do with the operations of the Church.

* * * * * * *

Bishop Kemper's letters to the Spirit of Missions are generally dated from St. Louis, where, as Bishop Tuttle says, "so far as a man who lived on horseback could be said to have a home, was his beloved abiding-place when possible." He found, however, an enormous amount of work to do in Indiana, which had not seen a church clergyman within its borders for ten years. At the end of his first year's work, Bishop Kemper had six clergy, and the one at Madison had presented five for Confirmation.

St. Louis, Mo., had an organized parish, and one "Minister-in-Charge," the only one in those two States. At the end of his first year, the Bishop had four clergy working with him there.

PARISH NOTES.

Commencing the first Sunday in July the services will be held in St. John's Chapel, as the church building will be in the hands of the contractors. Those who come early to the services are asked to take the seats against the wall, leaving the aisle seats free for those who come later.

The Mother's Meeting had its closing session on Thursday, June 6. There was an exhibition of the work completed during the year, being one hundred and thirty-five garments for girls and boys, some knitted articles and nineteen rag rugs. The box will be sent as usual to Father Lobdell's Mission in North Carolina.

Thinking that some of the parishioners may desire to obtain books containing the proper festivals and antiphons, a friend sends the appended list:

The English Gradual, with some musical examples, is published by W. Walker, 28 Paternoster Row, London, E. C., and the price is one shilling.

The Office Hymn Book, Part II, words only, is published by Pickering & Chatto, 66 Haymarket, London; the price is sixpence.

The Antiphons to the Gospel Canticles are also published by Pickering & Chatto, the price is eight pence.

On Tuesday evening, June 4, a concert was given for the benefit of the Choir Boys' Outing Fund. The evening was warm, which doubtless discouraged many, but it is to be regretted that more did not avail themselves of the opportunity to enjoy a most excellent musical program. The soloists who gave their services most generously responded to every encore and the choir boys rendered very cleverly several selections from "Mother Goose." Those who participated in the performance were as follows:

Emily Stokes Hagar.....Soprano
Almira Reed Harris.....Contralto
Howard K. Berry.....Tenor
F. Nevin Wiest.....Cornet
George Stowers.....Violin
John Riley, with Victor Talking Machine and the Choir Boys.

CHURCH REPAIRS.

As reported in the last number of the magazine, we shall be turning over the church, within a few weeks, for certain necessary repairs upon the roof.

The present trusses will be replaced by those of the "hammer beam" variety, which will give not only greater stability to the roof, but will add dignity to the nave. The present plaster ceiling will be removed and wooden paneling will take its place.

This will entail a considerable expense, the exact amount of which cannot be estimated at present, but the total amount will probably reach $12,000, and possibly more. Of this amount we have at present $8,100 in hand or pledged.

It would be a great help if contributions for the "Restoration of the Nave" might be sent to the Accounting Warden as soon as possible. The repairs are necessary, and the whole amount should be raised soon so that we shall have no indebtedness.

During the repairs the sanctuary will be boarded up. St. Katharine's Altar will be put in the Parish Hall, and in the autumn the services will be held there until the church is ready for use. During July and August the services will be held in the Chapel.

After the first Sunday in July there will be but two Masses on Sunday—at 7 and 10 o'clock. This schedule will continue through the summer, and, commencing July 1st, the 8 o'clock Evensong will be given up.

SOME MESSENGERS AND WHERE THEY WENT.

(This series at present is a study of the Missionary Field as it appeared to the Board of Missions, organized on behalf of the whole American Church in 1835. What the conditions were in China, Africa and Greece we have already seen; last month, beginning with the work of the saintly Kemper, we began to learn what the Church had tried to do for the stranger at its gates, as those gates open westward.)

There attended the General Convention of 1835 a Bishop, who came three hundred and fifty miles, driving his faithful horses entirely alone on his journey through the wilderness, over trackless prairie, fording deep and muddy streams—Bishop Philander Chase, whose resignation from the Diocese of Ohio followed treatment by that Diocese hardly to be understood by right-minded people. With noble patience the Bishop had retired to Michigan, where he had humbly labored as an unpaid missionary, as opportunity arose. Shortly after, the clergymen who were in Illinois decided to organize a diocese of their own and called Bishop Chase, who accepted. But before taking charge, he went to the General Convention, where, finding help for the new Diocese might be delayed, he decided to go to England, and get the help of old friends there.

Philander Chase was a man who did with intense earnestness the work of the moment, sacrificing his personal comfort in such an utterly matter-of-fact way, that God only knew the completeness of the sacrifice. How dearly the Lord loves a cheerful giver, and uses his gifts, may be understood when we remember that the early history and founding of parishes so far apart as Utica and New Orleans could not be traced until certain personal journals of Bishop Chase were obtained. We will devote some time, therefore, to this wonderful life-story, as it makes so real the first chapters of the life-story of the American Church, who "fled into the wilderness, where she hath a place prepared of God."

The Chases were among the earliest Puritan settlers of New England, one of their immediate ancestors having been burned at the stake for "heresy" near St. Mary's, Chesham. Aquila Chase is said to have been the first man to bring a boat over the bar of the Merrimac. Dudley Chase (the Bishop's father) was one of the pioneer settlers on the banks of the upper Connecticut, and his wife was the first white woman who kept house above what is now Bellows, Falls, Vt. "Deacon" Chase prospered quite literally in accordance with the Psalm, "Blessed are all they that fear the Lord and walk in his ways; for thou shalt eat the labor of thine hand." The olive branches round about his table must have required a pretty good sized table, for Philander Chase, the youngest, was the fifteenth child. The Deacon informed this child of his old age that he wished to have him study for the ministry. There was no preparatory school, but a boy with nine well-educated brothers could study at home. He entered Dartmouth College, 1791. He was born in December, 1775, and was, therefore, only in his seventeenth year when, as a sophomore, he first saw a copy of the Prayer Book. He was strongly attracted by the beauty of the Liturgy, at first; then subsequent study convinced him of its authority, and his vacations became times of eager discussions on this subject with his family. Although church clergymen were few in those Northern parts of New England, and bitterly persecuted by the Puritons, two devoted ones appeared to the lad in this great crisis. One was the Rev. J. C. Ogden. Preaching was to him a vocation; and when he had roused the people with his burning words, he left with them a book written in defense of the Church, a copy of which he had received from England. To have this printed for circulation in America, he did without a heavy overcoat through those freezing Vermont winters. Another adviser was the Rev. Bethuel Chittenden. His brother, then Governor of Vermont, told him of the Church families scattered along the Vermont and New Hampshire banks of the Connecticut, and he came through Bethel, Vermont, where young Chase occasionally taught school, and to the lad's home at Cornish, New Hampshire. This missionary had been ordained by Bishop Seabury, so his Church training had been Catholic, although he did not present a very ecclesiastical appearance! He wore sheepskin "smalls," and an old blue coat, much the worse for wear, thin and shiny. Nevertheless, he was a great ambassador for Christ, and the Chase family, with many of their neighbors, were at last by him received into the Church. What his boy follower felt when he received his first Holy Communion from this devoted priest, he uttered in burning words half a century after:

"The poverty and humble clothing of this ambassador of Christ in no way derogated from the authority he had received from the Heavenly King."

Longing, with characteristic fervor, to do something at once, Mr. Chase worked during his vacations and holidays as a lay-reader, and so the oldest Vermont parishes, and the adjacent ones in New Hampshire, have him as their follower. One of the largest contributions to Missions acknowledged in the first members of the Spirit of Mission was from this region.

Having graduated from Dartmouth, Mr. Chase found that the nearest clergyman who could help him get Holy Orders was the Rev. Mr. Ellison, of St. Peter's, Albany. He lost no time in going to him, and received a hearty welcome: "God bless you! walk in!" said the clergyman, a warm-hearted English cleric, who gave the youth a fine start. Theological seminary there was none on this side the Atlantic, but his friend got him free access to a fine theological library, and a well-paid position in a city school. Further, he received a license to do lay-reading in Troy, where were many church people. These he gathered on Sunday afternoons, reading Evensong and one of Rev. Mr. Ellison's sermons. After his ordination to the Diaconate, he was made itinerant missionary of Northern and Western New York. Utica was then a small settlement, the stumps of the forest trees still tripping up unwary strangers. Yet here the young missionary was cordially received, and here he organized the parish of Trinity Church, Utica.

Mr. Chase was ordained Priest in 1799. From then onward till 1817, he worked in different parishes. It was really missionary work for the most part; Poughkeepsie, N. Y., was his starting point for incessant labors in what was then wilderness, and along the St. Lawrence.

He spent six years in New Orleans, where a "priest" not under obedience to Rome was a great wonder, and organized the parish of Christ Church.

Six happy years were also spent at Hartford, Connecticut, happy in friends, recovering a little from loss of health during the strain and overwork begun in mere boyhood. But his heart was set on Missions, and arranging for the care of his family with their relatives, he prepared for his lonely journey, intending to visit Ohio, and see what opening might be there.

He did not preach any farewell sermon in Hartford, but on the 2d of March, 1817, he ministered his flock, who crowded in to receive the Holy Communion, and then departed tearfully to their homes.

LETTER FROM RUSSIA.

We reprint below a portion of a letter written by Father Puller, S. S. J. E., who has been visiting Russia as a member of a commission from the Church of England in the interests of Church Unity.

In the afternoon we went with Mr. Mansouroff to pay a visit to Bishop Anastasius, one of the Suffragans of the Diocese of Moscow. We had three hours of delightful conversation with him at the monastery, where he lives. He was evidently a deeply religious man, and also a highly educated and refined one. He was very interest in all that we could tell him about the religious life, retreats, parochial missions, missions to the heathen, etc., connected with the Church of England.

We went on from Bishop Anastasius to visit Professor Vladimir Sokolov, Mr. Mansouroff being still our companion and interpreter. Our visit to him was much shorter because he was very busy with examination and committee work, but I was glad to have secured a little talk with him, as he has written a good book on English Ordinations, in which he answers the Roman objections, both the objections of their older controversialists and those which are set forth in Leo XIII's bull.

I ought to say that Mr. Mansouroff had come to the conclusion that at Moscow it would be better to spend our time in visiting people of importance and having private talks with them, rather than in delivering lectures. There were two reasons for this advice. (1) Moscow is four degrees south of St. Petersburg, and therefore warmer; and consequently at Moscow people had begun already to leave the town and go into the country; and (2) the work of founding the new Russian Society for cultivating friendly relations between the two Churches had been going on in St. Petersburg, and the ground had there been prepared; but the Society had not yet formed any branch in Moscow, although one is to be formed in the course of the autumn.

On Thursday (May 9), we attended the Mass in the Church of Spass na Boroń (Church of the Saviour in the Forest). It was built in the 13th century at a time when this part of the Kremlin hill was covered with thick forest, and the original Church was of wood. The forest has long ago disappeared, and the Church remaining always on the same spot, stands in the middle of the courtyard of the great palace of the Kremlin. We were invited to come within the Iconostasis, and we were there able to witness all the action of the Mass, as it is carried out within the solid screen. Three of the palace-priests concelebrated, assisted by two deacons, all in cloth of gold. One was impressed by the extreme reverence, and also by the combination of stateliness with homeliness.

After the Mass we were taken by Mr. George Arsenieff over the museum in the treasury of the palace, of which he is curator.

Then we went with Mr. Mansouroff to visit the Archimandrite of the Chudoff Monastery, which is also in the Kremlin. His name is Arsenij (Arsenius), and he attracted at once by his modesty and evident devoutness. He made many inquiries about our view of ordination, which in his opinion was the most vital question. He seemed quite satisfied when I told him that it was the law of the Church of England that a Lutheran or Calvinist Minister who should wish to become a priest or deacon of our Church had to be re-ordained; but that a Roman priest under similar circumstances might not be re-ordained, but needed only to be licensed. He accepted that fact as decisive.

During our talk with the Archimandrite, the Bishop of Yakutsk, Innocent (pronounced Innokenti), came in. He is staying for the time in the Chudoff Monastery. He was able to talk English, as he was at one time Bishop of Alaska in America. The Archimandrite invited us to lunch with him and the Bishop also shared in the meal.

On Friday (May 10) we left Moscow by the 6.30 A. M. train, and in about two hours we reached the Troitsa Sergievska Lavra, one of the two greatest and most renowned monasteries in Russia. More than 100,000 pilgrims come to it every year. It was founded by St. Sergius in 1340. One of the most glorious events in Russian history is the defence of the monastery during a siege of sixteen months in 1608-1609, when the 300 monks successfully resisted the besieging army of 30,000 papist Poles.

St. Sergius was a great reviver and restorer of monastic discipline in Russia, especially in the Northern and central parts. Within the great wall of the monastery there are thirteen churches, a theological academy (or college), a school of painting, etc.

The Celebration took place in the most sacred church within the monastery, the Troitsky Sobor (the Basilica of the Trinity), in which St. Sergius is buried. It was packed tight with pilgrims. We were in the nave, but had a splendid place just in front of the Holy Doors. But during the whole service one could hardly move, being jammed in the press. There were a few communicants, amongst whom was a lady who had come with us from Moscow.

After the Mass we paid a visit to Bishop Theodore, the devout and learned Rector of the Theological Academy. He received us most kindly, and we had a long and interesting talk with him. I conveyed to him the Bishop of London's love, as I had been specially requested to convey it by the Bishop, when I went to get his blessing before I started for Russia.

After our talk with him, which lasted at least an hour, he took us all over the Academy, and introduced us to some of the students. Then we went back to the Troitsky Sobor to venerate the tomb of St. Sergius, which we had been unable to do before, because of the crowd. We went also into some of the other churches and into the great refectory of the monks.

On Saturday (May 11), after a short visit to Bishop Tryphon, one of the suffragans of the diocese of Moscow, we went on to the Palace of the Grand Duke Serge who was assassinated some years ago, and were received in audience by his widow, the Grand Duchess Elizabeth, a sister of the Empress, and a daughter of the Princess Alice of Hesse Darmstadt, and therefore a granddaugter of Queen Victoria. The Grand Duchess Elizabeth, after the loss of her husband, founded about three years ago a Sisterhood on a model new to Russia, though very familiar to us in England. That is to say the Sisters live a mixed life, combining contemplation with active works of mercy. The Grand Duchess is not only foundress but is also herself a Religious of the Community, and is in fact its first Superior. Under ordinary circumstances she would have received us at her Convent; but she was purposing to start for the Crimea (no doubt to visit her sister, the Empress) on the following Monday morning, and before starting she had a good deal of business to transact, which could be more conveniently done at her palace in the Kremlin; so it was to that palace that we went. The Grand Duchess came into the room where we were in her Sister's dress of light grey, and received us most graciously. She was accompanied by the sister of our kind friend, Monsieur Mansouroff, who is the Abbess of a Nunnery in one of the Baltic Provinces. She of course was dressed in the black habit of a Russian nun.

The Grand Duchess seemed to take great interest in our visit to Russia and its objects and she questioned us about the Church of England and its teaching. At the end of our visit she invited us to come to her Convent and be present at Mass at 8.30 A. M. on the following Monday morning. She herself would not be able to see us then, as she was to start at 8 A. M. for the Crimea. We were very much impressed by her religious simplicity and by her graciousness, and also by her penetrating intellect and dignity.

On Sunday afternoon I spent a few hours at the country residence of the elder brother of my kind host, Mr. F. Cazalet.

On Monday (May 13) we spent the whole morning at the Grand Duchess's Convent. The two Priests attached to the Convent were very delightful men. They did everything they could to make us feel that we were welcome. They invited us within the iconostasis during the Mass, and showed us everything that there was to see in the beautiful Church. One of them said: "Externally, you look like Latin Priests, but you behave quite differently. They stand immovable during our services, and seem to wish to make it clear that they are present merely out of curiosity. You join with us in our prayers, and evidently show by your whole demeanor that you are present for the purpose of worship."

After the service we were introduced to the Assistant Superior, a very charming lady, who spoke excellent French, and who told us that the Grand Duchess had given orders before leaving that we were to be shown everything. And accordingly the Assistant Superior did take us everywhere. We saw the exquisitely clean Hospital of about twenty beds, where the young Sisters are trained to Hospital work. Those who have been trained do most of their nursing in the homes of the poorest of the poor. We went also into the operating room; but before going in had to put on white linen garments over all our dress, to protect the room from any noxious germs which might otherwise have been left by us in the room when we went out. We were taken also to the dentist's and aurist's departments. Then we went to a school for girls, who, it is hoped will, if they have a vocation, become Sisters. Every day the Convent gives three hundred dinners to deserving poor people. Then we went to the dormitories and refectory of the children, and to the cells and refectory of the Sisters. Everything was spotlessly clean and simple. The Assistant Superior finally took us to her sitting room. She told us that the Community began three years ago with six Sisters; but there are now seventy-five. The Sisters have a Novitiate, and then take vows for one year; then for three, then for six, and finally for life. An exception was made for the Grand Duchess and for the Assistant Superior, who have already taken life vows.

This Convent is still in the experimental stage, but it seems to be much blessed in its life and work, and it will, no doubt, have in time imitators, and become an enormous boon and source of strength to the Russian Church.

In the afternoon, besides paying visits of farewell, we went with Monsieur Mansouroff to pay a visit to Mr. Khomiakoff, the eldest son of the great Russian theologian, and the brother of the President of the Duma. He is a most interesting and able man, though he suffers much from bad health.

PARISH NOTES.

On September eighteenth, the Rev Vincent Van M. Beede will come to us, and take a place on our staff of clergy. He has worked formerly in the House of Prayer, Newark, and in the west under Bishop Brewster. He will have charge of the Sunday School and of the work among the young people.

The convention addresses of the Bishop and the Bishop Suffragan have been printed for circulation in the diocese. A number of copies have been sent to the clergy house, and some have been placed in the Church vestibule. An member of the the parish who may desire one of the pamphlets may apply to the clergy in residence.

The Divinity School, has accepted the offer of S. Clement's Vestry, to establish the Yarnall Library of Theology at the School. One alcove will be set aside for the volumns that may be purchased, and the collection will be kept separate and intact. A suitable book plate will be provided by the Board of Managers of the Library, and the fund, wisely administered, ought to prove of real value to the School and the Diocese.

Another change in the clerical staff will take place on October first. Much to our regret we have to part with Father Underhill, who goes to New York, as curate in the Church of the Redeemer. His going away is a real loss to S. Clements, and his place will be hard to fill. During his ministry among us, "in a short time, he has fulfilled a long time," and so soon identified himself with the parish life, that he quickly became one of us. Many prayers will follow him in his new work.

The Sunday services are now being held in the parish hall, which looks quite churchly and dignified, now that S. Katharine's Altar is in place with its proper ornaments. We are not sure how long we shall be kept out of the Church, but hope that the first of November will find the repairs completed. In the meantime it is of the utmost importance that the inconvenience and simplicity of our temporary place of worship should not prevent each member of the parish from fulfilling his obligation to attend Mass on the Lord's Day. Let us prove our devotion to our Lord and His Church by accepting with cheerfulness the present conditions, and let us be generous in our contributions, and be sparing with our criticism during this very trying period.

CHURCH REPAIRS.

A special meeting of S. Clement's Vestry was held on Tuesday, July 2nd, at which, on the recommendation of the Architect, Mr. Horace Wells Sellers, and of the Property Committee, a contract was entered into for the removal of the old roof trusses in the nave of the Church, and substituting new trusses in accordance with plans prepared by the architect.

The Vestry was very reluctantly compelled to enter into this contract, which involves a large expenditure, as the investigations of the architect and of the Property Committee showed the work was absolutely essential at this time.

The Vestry, therefore, desires to call the attention of every member of the parish to this matter, as it is essential to provide funds for this most unwelcome, but necessary expense.

The amount of the contract for the removal of the old trusses and replacing them with new; removing the old plaster ceiling, and replacing it with a wooden ceiling, thus making the roof of the nave absolutely safe and permanent for an indefinite number of years, and the necessary work incidental to this, amounts to $21,500, in addition to which the Vestry authorized the Property Committee to enter into a further contract amounting to $600, for the electric lighting of the nave of the Church, making a total of $22,100. In addition to this amount there will be the architect's fee and other incidentals, so that a fund of not less than $25,000 must be raised to meet the entire cost of the repairs.

At the present time the Accounting Wardea has in hand, for this purpose, $5196.47 in cash, two $1,000 bonds, and $1,000 additional, in cash, has been promised, making a total of $8196,41, which leaves a balance of nearly $17,000, which must be raised by the Parish prior to November first next. This is not a question of contributions, but a specific debt, a part of which is owed by every member of the Parish, and the Vestry ask each one, to give the matter deep consideration and to make their offerings towards this object as liberal as they are able, and to act as promptly as possible. Contributions may be made through the Church offertories, properly designated, or sent to the Accounting Warden at his office at the clergy house.

Signed, CHARLES S HUTCHINSON, Rector.

LETTER FROM THE RECTOR.

My Dear People:

In another column is printed an announcement and an appeal from the Vestry to the members of S. Clement's parish. We are confronted by a condition that will be a test of our faith, and a measure of our devotion to the Church.

You will remember that the former parish building had been condemned many years before it was demolished, and that when it was finally pulled down a state of things was discovered that filled us with deep gratitude to God, in that a fearful disaster had been averted. The timbers of the floor beams and the roof trusses had rotted in the walls, and the floor rested on the partitions and plaster cornices underneath. That the whole structure had not collapsed long ago seems little short of a miracle.

We have reason to believe that a similar condition exists in the roof trusses of the church, and although we might allow matters to continue as they are, and trust that nothing serious might occur for some time, the Vestry feel that it would be morally wrong to run any risk of accident or to permit an unsafe condition to exist. They have, therefore, taken the action which they announce, and with this action I am fully in accord.

The expense involved seems very large, but I am confident that if each member of the parish will do his utmost the indebtedness may be met. That it will mean a call to real sacrifice on the part of all, is not to be doubted, but the cheerful and ready response to such a call, arising from a real motive of love for God and His Church, will bring blessing to both parish and individual.

That this spirit of loving sacrifice exists among you, the history of the parish, and my experience among you combine to teach me.

It is not needful for me to urge your generous response to this appeal, or to ask that you will give as the Lord hath prospered you, to the glory of God and the honour of S. Clement.

Affectionately yours in Christ,
CHARLES S. HUTCHINSON.

LORD HALIFAX AND CHURCH UNITY.

What do we mean by the the word "Church"? Does not an ambiguity attach to its use which is often the cause of misconception? Dr. Newman pointed out long ago that if we would define our terms we should generally find, either that we were agreed, or that, differing in first principles, controversy was useless. In speaking of the Church, I think Roman Catholics have often in mind its exterior organization and government, rather than the Church as the mystical body of Christ. Members of the Church of England, on the other hand, when they speak of the Church, have almost always in view the Church, not as determined by its outward organization, but as it is composed of those who are sacramentally united with Christ Both ideas are involved in the conception of the Church, but the dwelling upon the one, rather than the other, is, I am sure, a fruitful source of misunderstanding.

Let me state more fully how the matter would occur to the ordinary member of the Church of England. The object and scope, he would say, of the Christian religion is to establish a real and permanent union between each individual of the human race and Christ. This supernatual life of union with Himself, Christ communicates to man through the sacraments, the validity of which is guaranteed to us by the Divine organization of the Apostolic ministry. Since the object of the Christian religion and of the Sacraments adminstered by the Church is to establish and perpetuate a permanent union between us and Christ, that we may dwell in Him and He in us, all that has been enjoined by our Lord and His Church for the communication of His divine life, is essential to our position in a way nothing else is or can be. There may be things useful; things salutary; nay even things of divine appointment relating to the organization of the Church, but if they do not directly subserve that ministration of the spirit by which, through the sacramental system of the Church, we are made partakers of Christ, they are on a different level They are not in pari materia, and as such our attitude in respect to them is neccessarily different to that which we are bound to maintain in regard to those means of grace which have been instituted for the purpose of uniting us in the bond of a common life with our Divine Head. These we must guard always, and at all cost; those under certain circumstances will not carry the same obligation with them.

Apply this principle to the claims of the Protestant bodies, and those of the Roman Church respectively For practical purposes, what is usually understood by Protestantism is a denial of the sacramental system, that is, of any divinely appointed external and visible agency by which the gifts of grace are ministered to us. The new birth is not neccessarily connected with baptism, confirmation is not the means by which an additional gift of the Holy Ghost is imparted to us, the Eucharist is not the communication to us, under forms of bread and wine, of the Body and Blood of Christ, absolution is not the channel by which the pardon of sins is conveyed to us, but merely an assurance of God's willingness to forgive sinners; the Church is not a visible organization instinct with a divine life, but an invisible society, or mere human association. Now certainly we have no right, as we can have no desire to judge individuals. God's mercy is in all His works. If everywhere he that maketh righteousness according to his lights, is accepted before Him, much more He will accept those whose rejection of His Sacraments arises in great part from ignorance, in great part from the sins of others. What God condemns is a wilful rejection of His voice, and, in this case, the scandals that have existed in times past, and the imperfect lives of Christians, must make us hesitate before we charge all those who reject the sacramental system of the Church with a wilful rejection of the truth.

But while we admit to the full with all the consequent excuses which flow from such admission that the great religious convulsions of the sixteenth century, to take one instance out of many, was the result of abuses which the highest ecclesiastical authorities had been too indifferent and too worldly to mend, yet it remains true, that the result of that convulsion has been, not to reform the practice, but to mutilate the religion of Christendom,

If man, created in the image of God, with capacity for knowing God and loving Him, cannot be satisfied apart from God; if, in every time and place since he was driven out of Paradise, the heart of man has been seeking after God, if haply he may find Him; if God, who created man for Himself, has on His side been ever calling him back to Himself, reaching down to him from the Mount of Sinai to the Mercy Seat between the Cherubim. from the Cross to the altar, and from the altar to the sanctuary of man's heart, there to abide as friend abides with friend; if these are the relations between God and man. as they are revealed to us in Jesus Christ, then any system of religion which stops short at the Incarnation, while it rejects the sacramental system by which the Incarnation is extended to us, is not the whole counsel of God. * * *

If this is the teaching of the Protestant religious systems, the question at issue betweem them and us are questions not merely of a more or less perfect form of Church government, but of matters affecting the claim by which the relations between God and man—interrupted by the fall are renewed and sustained Our attitude toward them is. therefore, neccessarily determined We cannot. for the sake of peace, surrender what we believe to be an integral part of the Christian religion. We can only ask to be allowed the happiness of supplying what is wanting in their organization, in order that they, with us, may rejoice in the possession of those means of grace which have been instituted by Christ for the Life of the Church.

Similar considerations seem to determine our attitude towards the Roman Church. and our duties in regard to the claims of the Holy See. Those claims resolve themselves into the assertion that visible communion with Rome is, under all circumstances, an absolute necessity. But this union involves the assertion that visible communion with Rome is on a level with the possession of an orthodox creed with an unbroken succession of bishops from the apostles, and with valid Sacraments, as part, under all circumstances of the organization necessary for the life of the Church. * * *

But visible communion with Rome has no obvious place in the chain of agencies by which the divine life is commnnicated to man, and man is reunited to God. Its relation to that chain is at best an indirect one. To be outside the Roman obedience does not, for example, per se, invalidate the the consecration of the Eucharist. The Roman Church makes no such claim in regard to Russia and the East. Visible communion with Rome occupies a different position in the economy of Grace to that which we assign to the Apostolic Succession and valid Sacraments. The level upon which it stands is different; and with a different level, necessarily comes a corresponding change of attitude and duty on our part.

A consideration of what the Catholic faith is leads to the same result. To reunite God and man is the scope of the Christian religion. "This is life eternal, to know Thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom Thou hast sent." That reunion ultimately depends upon the personal relations existing within the God-head, because it is those relations which supply a basis for the Incarnation of the Son, and the consequent reconciliation of man to God. The doctrine of the Trinity in Unity. and of the Incarnation of our Lord Jesus Christ are truths upon which the salvation of man depends, and the Athanasian Creed only expresses a necessary truth when it declares that "whosoever will be saved, before all things it is necessary that he hold the Catholic Faith." The facts proclaimed by the Catholic Creeds and our adherence to them, so far as we have opportunity, are necessary, there, in the first place, for the reunion of man with God. This necessity extends, in the second place, to the possession of valid Sacraments, for it is by the Sacraments that the benefits of the Incarnation are extended to us. * * *

Introduce as a necessary link in the chain which reunites man to God the claims of the Holy See, * * and you have practically added to the creed of Christendom an article of faith which lacks that intrinsic dependence upon, and organic connection with the other truths of Revelation which characterise the other Articles of the Catholic Faith.

A consideration of what faith is in itself, therefore, leads us to disallow the Roman claims in their extreme form, and this precisely on the same principle which compels us to reject all Protestant systems of religion; the latter appear to deny what is an integral part of the Gospel, the former seems to make the fruits of the Gospel depend upon considerations that belong to a lower plane.

LETTER FROM RUSSIA.

(Concluded.)

In the evening we left by train for St. Petersburg, where we arrived yesterday (Tuesday) morning, and were met by Mr. Cragg, the Assistant Chaplain, and by Mr. Lodygensky, who is kindly acting as the organizer of our proceedings in St. Petersburg. After having some breakfast at Mr. Lodygensky's house, we went straight to pay our respects to Bishop Evlogie, of Kholm, the President of the new Society, which invited me to come to Russia to give lectures. The Bishop was most cordial, and informed us that the lectures would be given in a hall in the official residence of Monsieur Sabler, the Ober-Procurator of the Holy Synod. So we are under very high patronage indeed.

Most of the day was spent in writing this letter, which I am finishing this morning (Wednesday). I am staying with Mr. Cragg, the Assistant Chaplain.

This morning we paid a visit to the Ober-Procurator, than whom no one could be kinder. He planned out many things for us to do while we are here, and in every way showed that he took interest in our work.

F. W. Puller, S. S. J. E.

SOME MESSENGERS AND WHERE THEY WENT.

(Bishop Chase—II.)

The first thing was to get to Ohio. The only way in 1817 was in coach-bodies set on sleigh-runners—four hundred miles of this, in the bitter cold! But the Christian hero set out. During this journey he saw a sight which cheered his anxious mind, and because of which he took as his motto, "Jehovah Jireh": "The Lord will provide." The high places were full of wild eagles, feasting on the fish thrown up by winter storms, frozen at once, and now, partially thawed by the spring sunshine, plentiful food for the eagles, who otherwise would starve.

"If the Lord cares so for the wild birds," said the missionary, "what can He not do for me? Jehovah Jireh!" and he went on cheerfully.

Arrived at Lake Erie, he found a settler who had a fine pair of horses and a sleigh. This man needed money very much just then, so he took the missionary at once. The spring "break-up" of the ice was beginning; even an hour's delay and no travel would be possible for weeks. The cracks in the ice widened under the sleigh-runners as they raced along; the Pennsylvania shore was reached, and the driver, hurriedly pocketing his money, quickly turned homeward.

The missionary now traveled afoot or on horseback, always at his own expense, hunting up Church people. He was warmly welcomed, and on January 5, 1818, met with two clergymen and nine laymen at Columbus, Ohio. The "Diocese of Ohio" was organized, and all parishes in the State were requested to send delegates to the adjourned meeting in June.

Till now, Mr. Chase had had an exceedingly happy life. Troubles and anxieties and hardship in plenty, and long separation from his family. But personal griefs had not visited him. His home life as a child had been happy; in his twenty-first year he married a charming girl, unafraid of holy poverty, devoted to his work; his two older sons were in college, his namesake even now almost ready for Deacon's orders, and the youngest had come out to Ohio with the brave wife and mother, who managed a little farm at Worthington. This was the Bishop's only source of income, as the Church at the East was curiously indifferent, and no money was raised.

Now sorrows came thick and fast. His wife died, and young Philander began rapidly to fail in health. He made a brave struggle on behalf of the work. Once, when the Church in Ohio was almost obliged to suspend work, the young Deacon made an Eastern tour, and brought back twenty-nine hundred dollars—a tremendous sum for those days.

When Mr. Chase went East, sent by the Ohio clergy as their choice for Bishop, he was met, not only by indifference, but by open enmity, and a refusal. Certain charges were being circulated against his personal character. Almost crushed by this new trouble he yet insisted on an ecclesiastical trial, during which Bishop White remarked: "I think that those who have stirred up this matter had better look to their own characters." Absolutely acquitted, and commended, he was consecrated in Philadelphia at St. James' Church, February 11, 1819.

Still, there was no move to support him, and the General Convention did not publish any report of his work. Young Philander then offered to go to England, and try to get help. His health failed so rapidly, however, that he had to give up all work, and begged his father to go himself. It was bitterly hard for the Bishop to leave the dying lad, but the work came first, and so he prepared for the journey. He knew, let the Eastern Churchmen ignore it as they might, that urgent work was to be done in Ohio. At one little settlement, where he had paused to visit a dying man, he had been obliged to stay over, and finally by that sick bed confirmed eleven earnest souls, whose First Communion was their father's viaticum.

At the close of his first Convention, he confirmed seventy-nine persons, many of whom had awaited his consecration with longing.

At one confirmation a man presented himself who passed a very good examination in Church doctrine. When asked how he had become so familiar with it, he produced a worn and tattered book, the sight of which deeply moved the Bishop. It was that "little square book" used by Vermont pioneer missionaries, to publish which one of them had gone without an overcoat!

Try to realize what it meant to be Bishop of Ohio in those days: hundreds of miles of travel, in springless wagons or on horseback—sometimes even on foot! He stood holding services at times in boots which could not be pulled off from his swelled and aching feet! When he reached home, there was no money to pay for help; he must cut and haul wood, thresh grain, trade produce. Except for the little sum which young Philander raised on his Eastern tour, the Diocese was without money. Yet the two clergy stood by him, and four more came.

The great region of western Pennsylvania and Virginia, Kentucky and Ohio, contained many Church people. Their failure to obtain effective ministers from the East discouraged them, and was making the Church a by-word among the settlers.

PARISH NOTES.

The Sunday School will reopen on the first Sunday in October. It is important that all the scholars should be present at the first session.

Commencing the first Sunday in September, the 9.15 and 11 o'clock masses on Sunday will be resumed. The 8 o'clock mass will be resumed the third Sunday in September.

The work on the church is progressing. We hope that all may be completed by All Saints' Day. Envelopes properly marked have been placed in the racks in the church vestibule, to be used for contributions to the Restoration Fund. No amount is too small to give for this object. It is hoped that every one may contribute as he is able.

Through the kind support given to the concert for the Choir Boys' Outing Fund, a number of them were permitted to spend a very enjoyable day at Atlantic City in July. They will also have another outing of some kind in September, in the nature of a short trip or a theater party. The choirmaster wishes to thank those who have made this possible by their financial support.

The Rector will return from his holiday the middle of September. Father Quin attended the Commencement of St. Stephen's College in June, going from there to the Jewish Hospital for a surgical operation. Since his convalescence he has been in residence during August, and will take a further holiday in September. Father Underhill has been spending the month of August at Oak Bluffs, Mass. During the summer Father Bazett-Jones, of Nashville, Tenn., has been assisting in the parish.

REPAIRS TO THE NAVE.

Following the announcement made in last month's issue of the Magazine of the contract for the repairs to the nave of the church, it seems proper, as a matter of interest and in view of the importance of this work, to state more in detail what is contemplated and the considerations leading to the Vestry's final action in the matter.

As mentioned in the letter from the Rector, the conditions disclosed when the old parish building was demolished made it not only a matter of congratulation but of surprise that no disaster had visited that structure through the decay of its floors, roof and walls. As the roof construction was similar to that of the church nave, this condition naturally created much anxiety as to the safety of the church structure, it being older than the parish house and subject to the same exposure.

It was impossible to make a complete examination of the roof, however, as the portions most likely to be affected by decay are enclosed within the walls, but while the new parish building was under construction a portion of the framing on the north wall happened to be accessible and the builder reported indications of decay in the timbers at this point. An inspection of the trusses elsewhere was made, and although they showed no marked evidence of weakness, this was not conclusive as to the condition within the walls where there was still likelihood of it being, to some extent at least, similar to that discovered in the parish house.

Subsequently, when the reconstruction of the sanctuary was in progress, the Vestry called upon the architect to submit plans and estimates for such general repairs to the building as its condition seemed to suggest and with particular reference to the roof. While these plans were carefully considered, no action was taken, as the cost involved was beyond the resources then available, and it was necessary therefore to allow the matter to rest until the Vestry could see its way to make the much-needed betterments and repairs.

When the question was revived by the Property Committee during the present year, the plans for the roof of the nave were again reviewed with estimates based on existing building costs. As the condition of the framing within the walls was still open to conjecture the architect suggested various alternate plans, including the repair and retention of the existing roof-truss construction so modified by re-enforcement as to insure greater stability.

These various plans and estimates were carefully considered by the Vestry, and in view of the fact that the proposed re-enforcement of the old trusses would radically alter the appearance of the nave, and the estimated cost based on their retention involve practically as great an expenditure as the new construction originally proposed, it was finally decided to adopt the latter, and the architect was instructed to proceed accordingly.

Thus far all plans and estimates were based on solid-timber construction, which called for massive framing on account of the weight of the roof and the width of the nave. As these timbers had to connect into the walls, where they would be exposed to decay as in the case of the existing roof construction, the use of steel was suggested, so encased in wood as to have the appearance of solid timber, while possessing greater strength and permanency. Furthermore, by the use of steel the design could be made to relieve the old walls of side pressure or thrust, a condition not possible in the solid wooden trusses of the design proposed or existing in the present construction. This question of side thrust proved to be the determining factor since the city's Bureau of Building Inspection considered it unwise to subject the old walls to side pressure, although they were considered perfectly safe to carry the weight of the roof if made to rest directly upon them, and accordingly the plans for steel construction were prepared and finally approved by the Vestry.

The present contract does not contemplate the disturbance of the roof above the new trusses unless the timbers within it are found to be so decayed, which, of course, cannot be determined until the plaster ceiling is removed, but it is hoped from indications elsewhere that the framing will be found in fairly good condition. The substitution of wood for plaster ceiling will remove a source of danger and expense, for the plaster has already begun to loosen and greater security will be found in the oak ceiling now proposed, which will also be in accord with the ceiling in the sanctuary. In general form the new roof trusses will retain the arched feature of the old construction with its open tracery above, but instead of the arch springing directly from the walls it will be supported on projecting brackets or hammer beams, thus reducing its radius and making it appear in somewhat closer relation to the sanctuary arch. It is believed that this will improve the apparent proportions of the nave, while still retaining something of the original treatment, but what is still more important, the permanency of the structure will be assured so far as the roof construction is concerned.

THE MEDIATORIAL OFFICE.

"Soul of Christ, sanctify me." Sanctification of the Christian soul is conformity to the Human Soul of Christ—a putting on of Christ," a conformity of thought, will, affection, passion, imagination. Chiefly it lies in a likeness of understanding and of will or affection, in seeing things as Christ sees them: feeling, tasting, loving according to His feeling, love, taste. And this principally with regard to God and to man: between whom Christ, by reason of His perfect knowledge and ardent love of both sides, is the great Mediator and Peacemaker. Those who would share His mediatorial office must strive to know God and man more and more deeply; nor that under any merely speculative aspect, but under those aspects which most beget love. He was made man that He might know what was in man, and be touched with a feeling for our infirmities; that, knowing all, He might excuse all and pardon all.

As in virtue of His true humanity, He knows human nature experimentally, so by His divinity He knows the divine nature experimentally as no merely human priest can ever do. Taught by the Holy Ghost, we can at least ever draw nearer to this double sympathy of the God-man and so fit ourselves better to share His mediatorial office. Nor its it only by prayer and sacraments that God sanctifies and purges the soul, but by all natural and intelligible means as well; by true ministry of the Word, the Logos, in its widest sense. By the instrumentality of the human heart and mind He speaks to heart and mind.

We must then observe in our Saviour (1) His deep knowledge and comprehension of the nature, the mind, the love of His Eternal Father; (2) His sympathy with the Divine interests and the Divine will: (3) His comprehensive and experimental knowledge of sinful man, and (4) His consequent sympathy with the interests of humanity.

(1) "O Righteous Father," He says, "the world has not known Thee," "has not known or believed in Thy Fatherhood, in Thy paternal love," "but I have known Thee." "No man hath seen God at any time, but the Only Begotten, who is in the bosom of the Father," "who is eternally being born in the very heart and focus of Divine love." "He hath declared Him," revealed the unknown. This was the great work of our Saviour's ministry, of which He says: "I have finished the work which Thou gavest me to do, and now I come to Thee;" "I have manifested Thy Name," "I have made known Thy true nature, Thy fatherhood." "and the men whom thou gavest me." "For this cause came I into the world, that I might bear witness of the truth," I, "the Word made Flesh," Eternal Truth translated into human language—the Father's Logos and image. "He that hath seen Me," "he that hath looked on the crucifix," "hath seen the Father" so long dreaded, distrusted, unloved, misrepresented, slandered. In this we must follow Him, after our fashion; studying and pondering the character of the All-Father as displayed to us in nature and in revelation—two chapters of one book. We must know Him, not speculatively, but appreciatively, by tasting and feeling, and seeing with the inward senses His sweetness, graciousness and beauty. We must know Him, not with hearsay knowledge, but with the familiarity that comes of continued converse; we must live "in the bosom of the Father" if we would declare Him to others and bring others into sympathy with our own love of Him.

(2) From the knowledge and love of the Father grow that hunger for righteousness, that thirst for the glory of God, which found utterance in the words "My meat is to do the will of Him that sent me, and to perfect His work." "I have a baptism to be baptized with; how am I straitened till it be accomplished." "The zeal of Thine house has eaten Me up." "Here is 'the great High Priest,' that archetype of every priest, lifted up above all and yet drawing all to Himself; exalted, yet lowly; crucified, yet not austere or repellant; "segregate" and yet mingling with publicans and sinners; mingling the very substance of His Body, Soul and Divinity with their weakness and corruption, as the sunlight which fills, illumes and beautifies the crystal; sinking all limits and differences so that He is hardly felt among us, so much is He one of ourselves and His life interwoven with ours. "There is one in the midst of you whom ye know not," as a hidden leaven changing the mass of humanity, unholy, guilty, defiled, earthly, into His own nature: sanctifying, forgiving, cleansing, raising, and withal secretly, imperceptibly, "not with observation."

(3) As God and the Maker, Mover, Quickener of every living creature, animal and spiritual, He knows "what is in man," yet to know it experimentally it was needful He should become Man, for now we approach Him, not as one who has felt. This was the end of His mortal life of labor, sorrow, temptation and suffering. For our sakes He sanctified Himself as a victim, and was baptized with blood; as one who descends into the slums to study and understand and ameliorate the life of the oppressed masses, so the Eternal Love took on Him the likeness not only of flesh, but of sinful flesh, abandoning His birthright of bodily glory, and in the form of a slave and sinner became the friend of publicans and sinners. Though perfect in obedience and all virtues, He willed to go through the discipline of learning and acquiring; to take the laborious path that we must tread; to be "perfected by suffering," to "learn obedience" in His Passion. He would not use any one of His privileges or powers in His own behalf. The Son of God hungers, yet He will not turn stones into bread, but waits till the angels come at the will of His Father. He is as one who cannot bear to be in a condition better than those whom He loves, and who are in want and poverty. So far as His privileges or gifts raise Him above them and separate Him from them, He hates those gifts and would gladly be stript of them, and would become anathema for His brethren's sake. He is not able to contain Himself, but, leaping from His throne and casting away the baubles of royalty, He flies to their embrace: "I am Joseph your brother."

The priest's vocation demands that he should strive earnestly to know the human mind and heart in all its phases. Here, if anywhere, knowledge is power. We can lead and manage others just so far as we discern their character and no further. As far as we fail to get on with any one, so far we do not read him aright. Some seem to have a natural gift of discernment—many-sided men with a strong, sympathetic affection. But we all have a root of it within us which we can develop. As a fact, we are too self-engrossed to observe others or to interest ourselves in true study of man—man's highest study, if we except the study of God, of which it is the most efficient instrument. For example, the contentious man is so keen in defence of his own ideas and in refuting those of others; whereas, the more others find us in agreement with them the more they will open out. As with ideas, so with tastes. Sympathy lays bare the soul of others; and confidence draws confidence. Poverty of imagination, which makes us incapable of putting ourself in the place of others, is another obstacle to this study. Savage natures are for this reason brutal, cruel and wholly unsympathetic; while the over-cultured and imaginative are so sensitive as to shrink from the thought of the suffering around them, unless they are really kind and loving as well as sensitive. We don't listen to others, or look at others, or think about others, because all our faculties of observation are centred on self. If another tells us the history of some illness of his we are either bored or heedless, or else bursting to break in and cap all he says by instances from the history of our own interesting ailments. And so everywhere. No doubt that true self-observation and self-knowledge which poisons self-love is the greatest aid to the knowledge of others. Here, at least in ourself we have one sample of humanity submitted to our inspection; here alone we can look intuitively into a human mind and will and heart. Here we can learn how often to know all is to pardon all. Blessed is the man of true modest internal experience, if he will but use it, digest it, ponder it, apply it; who has been darkened, troubled, tempted, fallen, raised, enlightened, pacified, time after time, year after year, who knows every movement of the soul not by hearsay or conjecture, but by experience.

(4) And from the profound and comprehensive knowledge of humanity, with its actual depths and its possible heights, there grows up a pitying love in the hearts of those who, like the spirits of the dead, "watch with God the rolling hours, with larger, other eyes than ours, to make allowance for us all." We need not fear those who look us through and through, so much as those who look just below the fair-seeming surface. This last is the half-penetration which breeds cynicism in him who knows little of God, little of himself, and therefore little of his fellowmen. The Christian cynic is a square circle. But every true Christian is indeed a priest, a mediator, a vicar of Him who could embrace and draw together in a kiss of peace the Creator and the creature. In the bosom of the Father and in the bosom of Mary He lived with the life of God and the life of man; and thought with the mind of God and the mind of man; and loved with the love of God and the love of man—Father Tyrrell.

SOME MESSENGERS AND WHERE THEY WENT.

(Bishop Chase—III.)

Bishop Chase accepted the presidency of the college at Cincinnati, which helped him financially, but as the number of earnest young men seeking the ministry increased, the Bishop, with an aching heart, prepared for the journey to England. A small legacy coming to him at the death of an uncle provided the means. On the way East he stayed with relatives, who greeted him lovingly, but were very quiet and sad. The reason for this was apparent later, at night, when there was a rustling in the sweet-brier bushes outside his window, and a packet of letters was thrown into his room. These urged him not to leave his family at such a time, and threatened ruin to him if he persisted. Up to this time the Bishop himself had been doubtful as to whether he was acting rightly.

But this plain request, that he lose the last chance of the Church in Ohio for the sake of his personal ties of affection, showed him that his doubts were not from God. As for the threats, they braced him, as a gauntlet thrown in his face.

"Give up?" said he to his anxious family circle. "Never! Jehovah Jireh."

The Bishop found the same persistent opposition awaiting him in New York and the threat, "You will be opposed in England by the weight of the Church in America, and that in the strongest manner." He could not believe it, and went his way, stung by the unfriendly attitude of the clergy. Arrived in England (a journey of forty-three days) he went to a brother-in-law in Manchester. Here he was welcomed and assured of shelter and sympathy, but learned that his American enemy was busily at work—that hand-bills denouncing him as a "schismatic" were posted in some parts of London; that paragraphs in leading periodicals stated that he was invading archiepiscopal territory supervised by the Bishop of New York. It was a sorry arrival in London—worse than friendless, not knowing what to expect. But the dauntless Bishop went straight to Lord Gambier, to whom he had letters from Henry Clay. The letters gained an audience and the Bishop gained a friend. Shortly after he met Lord Kenyon. Slowly but surely the opposition was beaten down, money given, more pledged. Lord Gambier arranged for future subscriptions to be vested in British Government bonds, to be drawn upon as needed. Returning to America the Bishop gathered his family, saddened by his brave son's death, and returned to Ohio. The little farm at Worthington was a bower of beauty, the fruit trees had grown, grape vines were everywhere, and the fruits of his years of suffering met him in the eager welcome of his people.

What follows, though a story of hardship, is a story of joyful progress.

As we have already noticed, the Bishop was a born teacher and had almost invariably taught in connection with his work. In Ohio a college for religious teaching along Church lines, looking especially toward the ministry, was his dream, and soon after his return from England thirty-five students were housed in log buildings on his farm. The Bishop appointed and paid teachers, using funds subscribed in England, and finally had enough in hand to buy eight thousand acres of land in a fertile and well-watered region. He at once built a small mill, which planed timbers for building and ground flour for the table.

As to food, the Bishop's youngest son, afterward the Rev. Dudley Chase, was fond of describing their various ways of getting it, and the boys' adventures when the Bishop had to leave them in charge. Food could be brought from the East in fair weather; failing that, Mrs. Chase made clever use of home products, good but mysterious to the students, whose oft-repeated request was, "Please give me some more of that."

The wild turkeys were very good to eat, and were silly things, easily trapped. Great flocks of wild pigeons appeared, and pigeon pie grew monotonous. Safe in bed at night no one minded the howling wolves, but in the daytime rattlesnakes were a constant menace. To keep them down large herds of swine were grown and then the next thing was to keep the swine down! One day the Bishop, allotting work as he mounted his horse, pointed to a roving porker, and said, "Kill that one." The boys killed the pig, but didn't manage the scalding rightly and the bristles "set." Borrowing a fine new razor from one of the teacher's rooms they shaved piggie neatly from snout to tail.

"Kenyon College" grew slowly but surely, all living in rough frame buildings while massive foundations were laid, and the Bishop beguiled long journeys with incessant planning. Just before he went to England he had married again, and his second wife was housekeeper, secretary and treasurer.

The Bishop—everywhere his genius and unflagging energy worked wonders. A skillful farmer and woodsman, he planned so that the wilderness was brought into cultivation, and many a student went over his lessons with the Bishop while lending him a hand in some farm work. Sixty-five students were enrolled. The charge was $10 a year for the college course; $20 for the theological!

The outdoor life must have been fascinating to those boys—if you tired of game, venison and pork, you could go out with a washtub, gather honey from some "bee-tree," and then go in and beg "Mother Chase" for corn-and-rye bread, hot from the brick oven.

The Bishop was head of a growing diocese, president of the college, rector of three parishes, superintendent of an enormous farm, foreman of his grist and lumber mills, chief architect of a group of buildings unequalled in America for beauty and fitness. The roll of students increased to one hundred and seventy, the number of teachers and professors increased. To these, an immense institution without endowment, and charging nominal rates, needed the goodwill of the community. The Bishop's staunch churchmanship seemed to them dangerous; they wanted concessions made to the denominations, less stress on definite theological teaching. The sturdy Bishop paid no attention, but his very success was to be his downfall. The college was already famous and had many friends. It became an object for covetous minds, who stirred up the diocese. Quietly they prepared for the Diocesan Convention of 1831. Too much power was vested in the hands of one man. They would propose a change in the Board of Trustees of the College, of which the Bishop was President, of such sort that he should be virtually without a vote. Then they would by degrees merge the theological departments in the college, and gradually do away with it; perhaps there would then be only clergy of independent minds, imported from outside.

PARISH NOTES.

Commencing the first Sunday in October evensong will be said at 8 o'clock with a sermon.

Again we remind the parishioners that the Sunday School will open on the first Sunday in October. Parents are urged to see that their children are in attendance at the first session.

In October Bishop Rhinelander proposes to commence the publication of a monthly diocesan paper. It is to be under excellent management, and it is hoped that all church people will support it. We should all be interested in the work of the diocese.

As the beams are removed from the walls of the church, the vestry finds that its action concerning the new roof was amply justified. A process of decay had progressed to such an extent that the wood can be broken apart by the hand. The new construction with steel trusses will render the roof permanently secure.

On St. Luke's Day Father Quin will celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood. A fitting observance of the occasion had been planned, but the repairs upon the church building render its postponement necessary. It is hoped that later in the winter we may have a special service.

THE PASSING OF BISHOP GRAFTON

On the 30th day of August the Rt. Rev. Charles Chapman Grafton, Bishop of Fond du Lac, passed into eternal rest. As one of the founders of the Society of St. John the Evangelist, to which St. Clements owes so much, he has been held always in loving esteem by our people. During his long Episcopate he nobly espoused the cause of Catholicity in the American Church, and bore much persecution and misrepresentation at the hands of those who did not agree with him. That he died practically penniless, although an heir to a large fortune, is a sufficient commentary on the purity of his motives and the sincerity of his life.

May he rest in peace.

THE MOTIVE FOR CHURCH WORK.

Now that the time for parish activities to resume is approaching, let those of us who take part in them examine ourselves honestly as to our motives. If the glory of God and the good of His Church are the ends to which we are striving, no matter how feebly, our efforts will be accepted and rewarded by God and we will be satisfied.

The Bishop of Oxford says, and he probably knows, that any gift we have quite certainly deteriorates and swiftly loses all its purity and worth, when it is used for selfish ends—for display, for ambition, for popularity, or for pride. When church work is done for the right motive, there will be no hurt feelings when some coveted position is given to another or when our work is not accepted by those in charge. There will be no talk of not being able or willing to work with this or that one. There will be none of the littleness which too often, be it said to our shame, is more pronounced in church workers than in any other kind. There will also be no annoyers of the clergy, but helpful and conscientious fellow-laborers. If we will not do the work in this spirit, then let us not do it at all, for if we do, great will be our condemnation.

THE GOSPEL OF THE GENTILES

A famous scholar thus names the writings of St. Luke, treating the Third Gospel and the Acts of the Apostles as two volumes of the same book. There is a close resemblance in style, each beginning with a formal introduction, addressed to one, "Theophilus," and the Apostles, in the second book, are shown working out the teaching of the Gospel according to St. Luke—that of the exaltation of human nature, Our Lord's assumption of it, and His saving love extended to all mankind.

Alone, of all the evangelists, St. Luke dwells lovingly on the wonders of the Nativity. But tender as his treatment, and keen as his appreciation of the beauty of the scene, he brings out with a master-hand his great idea, of God come down to men. Like the artist that he was, he made it more luminous by a carefully arranged background of a different coloring. The Jewish home-like, temple-worship, and the devout souls in Israel waiting for One who was to reign "over the house of Jacob forever," protesting, they go to Bethlehem for the taxing, because "of the house and lineage of David," the Son of David is born.

And then, out in the fields where the Temple flocks fed, the shepherds, in an overwhelming burst of glory and of song, are told by the angels that this Nativity is to be a great joy to all people, and that it brings peace on earth, to men of good will.

St. Luke, as he wrote his polished Greek, may have appreciated the original meaning of the Greek word for man, anthropos, "the up-looker," and how the companions of his own youth had treasured the tales of gods coming down to walk among men. How deep this longing to come into touch with a higher power for the alleviation of suffering and the raising of mankind, as he grew older, is shown with unconscious earnestness when he seizes and dwells upon episodes not recorded by the other evangelists, especially in the mission of the seventy (seventy was the recognized symbolic number for the gentile world), in the parable of the Good Samaritan, in the quaintly humorous and yet sympathetic little description of Zaccheus, the publican.

St. Luke also brings out strongly the place and work of woman, her dignity in the home, her efficiency as a missionary. First, he shows our Lord's own attitude toward her. The Blessed Mother appears in all her humility and glory, then the widow of Nain, then the poor nameless woman, offering in love those attentions which the Pharisee withheld; then the little scene between Martha and Mary, the sisters appealing to the Master, who helped them understand each other. (This not in chronological order, or with much detail, as St. Luke's story was written at a time when these were aged women, needing protection from their one-time friends in Judea.)

He closes the account of Our Lord's earthly life with the description of the woman who followed Him to the very door of the tomb and announced His resurrection to the disciples, and begins the pentecostal story with the mention of "the woman" in the upper room. The Acts of the Apostles constantly recognize women as fellow-workers.

Where St. Luke leaves his story—at the Ascension—there he takes it up in the Acts of the Apostles. Almost immediately he shows how St. Peter was constrained by the Holy Ghost to speak words of welcome "to all that are afar off." But it was reserved for the great Apostle to the gentiles, St. Paul, to inaugurate this movement, and how he was enabled to do so by the constant help of St. Luke, only the Son of Man, who inspired those ministrations, can say. With a physician skilled in his profession, and Christ-like in his unselfish devotion to it, the patient can hardly say at times whether the uplift is of body, soul or spirit. The Son of Man still teaches sons of men the sympathetic insight, patience, the cheerfulness, the skill, the faithfulness even unto death, which made it possible for a frail sufferer, the first missionary bishop, to live till he had fought a good fight and finished his course.

"Luke, the beloved physician,"
"Only Luke is with me."

Of all the personal sacrifices made by St. Luke in his attendance on St. Paul, not one receives any notice in scripture. The aristocratic, highly-educated youth leaves the university town where he first met St. Paul. Perhaps he was called in to attend him in those terrible days of blindness, when the pet and darling of the Sanhedrin was trying to learn submission to the God who had smitten him down to darkness. It takes courage and devotion of the highest sort to adhere to a man who has become unpopular. But in exile, shipwreck, the worry of earning daily bread among strangers, hours of deep discouragement, and finally the cell of the condemned, the kind voice cheered, and the skillful hands soothed. His whole mission in life was to help the suffering, and having done this, he silently disappears from the scene.

This is an age of work for the betterment of the race, we are all, probably, making our plans for the next winter's work in some child-saving enterprise, or social purity crusade. Here—October 18th—comes the memory and example of this gentle saint.

We may make brilliant speeches on platforms, and be hailed at social gatherings as "wonderful" workers for this and that, or we may be hailed in poor little homes as their best friends, and hide from the world afterward while we tell the Son of Man what we would ask for His poor.

A work is not great unless it is great enough to eclipse the worker.

For the best and most enduring work for God is done by those who are glad to be hidden in the greatness of what they have accomplished for Him.

"SPEAK, LORD, IN THE STILLNESS"

To wrestle in prayer until the answer is given is good, but it is not the only way of attainment or of converse. Our devotion ought not to consist of a succession of vocal prayers, continuously recited from the moment when we kneel to the moment when we rise.

For it is in absolute stillness, in seclusion from all that quickens the senses into activity, that the answers often come. I look back upon several points in my life, times of important decisions, and recall that I have found the clearest answer and have most felt the hand of God in mine in church alone at night, when I could scarcely discern the dim outline of the altar before which I knelt, or where only the lamp throbbed rosily before the tabernacle.

And there is a strange feeling of active power in a church where a few devout souls are gathered and praying earnestly, waiting, perhaps, to make their confessions,—

"When song is hushed and lights are dim
In the sin-laden air," or preparing for their communion in the dawn of a winter work-day.

The power intensifies when there are many, when all hearts are touched to one issue and turned one way, energizing to one purpose. Some priests are finding out, and teaching their people to value and apprehend the power of active, energizing cooperate silence before God.

I hope that slowly at least, the principle will be generally recognized. But the notion of "bright and hearty services," with much glare of light and crash of organ, and brief, manly, heart to heart talks, is stubbornly rooted in the minds of many priests as the ideal of worship and corporate devotion, especially priests of that "great central body of moderate men" who always seem to me so strangely to miss the essential things. In such services there is little to encourage real devotion. And I fear that it will be long before we get altogether rid of the notion that from beginning to end of a service clergy and congregation must be continuously employed in saying or singing something as loudly as possible.

A passage from "A Priest's Outlook," by Lawrence Enderwyck.

SOME MESSENGERS AND WHERE THEY WENT.

(Bishop Chase—III.)

Had the Bishop been able to act with his usual vigor he would have probably righted matters. But a sudden attack of illness prevented; he read his address and then left the convention, which set busily to work and respectfully submitted to him a proposal which placed him in the position of administering the funds of Kenyon in a way contrary to the aims of those who supported it. He might have fought the matter out, but that would have meant incessant strife and injury to the diocese as a whole.

So, leaving his family to gather their modest belongings and leave the estate in good condition, he once more set out into the wilderness. A place called "Valley of Peace" attracted him, and there he placed his family, while he pressed forward into a lonely region in Michigan, a wilderness known as St. Joseph's. Here he brought his brave little family; here he farmed, studied, taught and did his work as the first and only missionary within a hundred square miles.

Here he received his call to the newly-formed Diocese of Illinois, and our studies of his work will be as its Bishop. Perhaps our readers will pardon us for dwelling on this character, who, sturdy in his convictions, gifted in many ways, and keenly sensitive to injustice, did not make a convention his personal battleground, but withdrew for the sake of peace.

Half merry, half sad, but wholly true in a sense, was his answer to an inquiring friend when he resigned the Ohio Episcopate in 1831, at the age of fifty-six, and bade farewell to his beloved college: "You will find me at the end of a rough road, in the Valley of Peace!"

GUARDIAN ANGELS.

The contemplation of the Holy Angels has a fascination all its own. There is something extraordinarily attractive in the thought of "those blessed servants of God who have never tasted of sin; who are among us, though unseen; are serving God joyfully on earth as well as in heaven; who minister, through their Maker's condescending will, and tho redeemed in Christ, the heirs of salvation.

To every Christian but the most prosaic it is a joy to remember that the whole universe is, after all, full of created beings free from sin, whose happiness it is to praise God continually and serve Him willingly; and that "because of the angels," it is not true that "full many a flower is born to blush, unseen, and waste its sweetness on the desert air." All this, and much else—our relation to the Saints and Blessed Dead, for instance—belongs to the poetry of religion, and poetry, is pathetic, uplifting and edifying. Our knowledge of angels is but dim and shadowy at best, for in this life there are the scales of human limitation before our eyes, and they impede our vision. "The hosts of God encamp around the dwellings of the just"; but, like the servant of Elisha before his master prayed for him, our eyes are holden and we see them not. Yet this, at least, is clear about the being of angels; that they are spiritual substances, or (to quote from St. John Damascene) "intellectual beings, ever in motion, possessing free-will, incorporeal ministering to God, having an immortal nature, the form and limit of whose being the Creator alone knoweth."

St. Augustine says: "An angel is called a spirit on account of what he is, and an angel on account of what he does," i. e., he goes forth as God's messenger.

That the holy angels minister to human needs is plainly revealed in Holy Scripture. In Hebrews 1:14 they are described as "ministering spirits sent forth to do service for the sake of them that shall inherit salvation," and this passage clearly refers to two regions of their activity. If, on the one hand, they are spirits who minister in the worship of God, they are also sent forth by the Almighty for another kind of ministration, viz., to the needs of men. . . .

First of all it would appear that a particular charge of guardianship has been given to angels over kingdoms, nations and churches. This opinion has been held by many, St. Augustine and St. Clement of Alexandria for instance; and Dr. Pusey, in his lectures on "Daniel the Prophet" argues to like effect. St. Basil speaks of "national ruling angels," and even Calvin, in his "Institutes," says that "particular provinces are delivered over by God to angels' governance as was wont to be done by emperors to judges."

Of the office of the Holy Angels as Guardians of the Holy Catholic Church, Mr. Baring-Gould writes thus: "Angels were constant in their guardianship of the Jewish Church till that church brought Christ's blood in condemnation upon it, when they passed over to the defense of the Catholic Church. These are the watchmen of whom Isaiah speaks as being set on the walls of Jerusalem, never to hold their peace day and night. . . . Michael is the chief of these guardians. He was prince of the armies which stood round about the Jewish people; now he is prince of the host guarding the Church of God."

Not only have the angelic hands been entrusted with the guardianship of societies of men, in nations and churches, but also it would appear, of individuals as well. This is indisputably a matter of Scriptural revelation as well as of church teaching. There is the well-known promise of angelic protection: "He shall give His angels charge over thee to keep thee in all thy ways." There is also the definite assertion of Psalm 34:7: "The angel of the Lord campeth round about them that fear Him and delivereth them."

Many have held, and hold, that every child of Adam, without exception, has a guardian angel from his birth, to guide and protect him as long as his probation lasts. The Fathers and Doctors of the Church are practically unanimous that the baptized "heirs of salvation" are individually protected by the power and influence of these ministering spirits.

As "Guardians" the holy angels may be said to protect us, in the Divine Providence, from "dangers ghostly and bodily." There is a world of spiritual evil all about us; of the greater part of it perhaps we are hardly conscious, although we know that the malignity and subtilty and resource of the powers of evil are vast indeed. What a comfort to be able to turn from such a thought to the contemplation of our heavenly guardians! With unceasing fidelity they warn the sinner, they aid the tempted, they breathe into the soul the holy inspirations of God. They weaken the blackening power of evil thoughts by putting good imaginations into our minds; they influence our power of choice, they illuminate and stimulate the conscience, they persuade the will. St. Thomas Aquinas is not alone in his belief that a man is never totally deserted by his guardian angel in this life, and when the sinner turns to God in deep repentance who can describe the angels joy?

But there are also temporal ills—the "bodily dangers" of which the Church catechism speaks; and from these, too, it would seem, the guardian angels are permitted by God to be powerful to deliver us. In Genesis 21:17, an angel speaks from heaven to Hagar and helps her in her necessity. In Daniel 6:22, the prophet speaks to King Darius from the lions' den, and says: "My God hath sent His angel, and hath shut the lions' mouths." The well-known passage, "It is His angel," in Acts 12:15, is frequently appealed to for proof of the doctrine of guardian angels.

Many modern stories are told of the intervention of angels in temporal danger, and some of these are, at any rate, well authenticated. A little child in an American city ran out into the street, but was run over by a passing car. She was picked up and taken home as one dead. For a long time she lay in a kind of trance, though apparently unhurt. When she came to herself they asked her what she remembered of the accident. She told them clearly of a bright being in white who had lifted up the cruel wheels, one after another, so that they could not hurt her. The only traces of the accident upon her were two red marks across her body made by the wheels. This story comes from one who had seen the marks and is told on unimpeachable authority; and Dr. Neale, in his "Unseen World," is one of those who has given it publicity.

It would appear that the protection of the guardian angel ceases when this life is over. St. Luke 16:22 seems to imply that angels minister to the soul at death, or at least just after it; and from St. Jude 9 we may possibly infer that they have a care for the bodies of the holy dead.

Our last words must be on an important part of this subject hitherto unnoticed, viz., our Lord's plain words concerning the children's guardian angels in St. Matthew 18:10. In the passage referred to our Lord, to whom the little ones of His flock are specially dear, is warning His disciples never to despise the children. Men in their dull stupidity may think lightly of them and imagine that it does not matter what they see, or hear, or suffer; yet all the time they are the objects of the most earnest care and the most thoughtful anxiety on the part of those angelic guardians, to whose protection they have been intrusted by their Heavenly Father.

As we contemplate these holy beings to whom for God's sake the little ones are so dear, let us join them in their prayers for the children; let us pray for all parents and teachers of the young, and let us pray, too, that we may never be deprived of the help which angelic hosts supply a God's command; never to be so engrossed in the things of sense as to be neglectful of their faithful ministrations.—Selected.

PARISH NOTES.

The offering on All Saints' Day will be as usual, for the All Saints' Sisters.

Bona Mors will be said every Monday in November after evensong.

Vespers of the dead will be said on November 1 at 9.15.

A requiem will be said every allowable day in November at 7.30 A. M.

The 9.15 children's mass is now sung. The place is St. John's Chapel.

The poor fund is much depleted. Your offerings are asked for this object.

The Monday evening dancing class has been resumed under the able instruction of Miss Shetky.

Commencing November 5, the rector will conduct a Bible class in the Parish Hall, every Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

A mass of requiem for the repose of the soul of George Herbert Moffett, priest, will be said on November 16, in St. John's Chapel at 9.00 A. M.

Commencing Sunday, October 27, a series of instruction on church doctrine will be held every Sunday afternoon in St. John's Chapel at 4 o'clock. Any persons who may be interested will be welcome.

The Guild of the Holy Cross is taking up the study of General Church History every Friday at 8.00 P. M., with the exception of the first Friday of the month, when there is a religious service, with address.

There is a half hour for teachers of the Sunday School every Monday at 8.00 P. M., in the choir room. Fr. Beede is giving a series of instructions on the current lessons. Any students of the Holy Scriptures are welcome to attend.

It is hoped within a short time that a young men's club may be started in the parish. A room in the basement is to be fitted up for this purpose, and any young man eighteen years of age who belongs to the parish may be enrolled as a member.

A movement has been inaugurated to form a Federation of the Guilds of Acolytes in the diocese under the name of St. Vincent's Guild. The governing body will consist of a council composed of the chaplains and one lay representative from each parochial guild.

Persons sending names for the requiems on All Souls' Day, are asked to do so as early as possible, and certainly not later than the noon of October 31. Often times long lists are sent late on All Saints' Day. This causes great confusion, and many repetitions and mistakes result.

The annual missionary meeting of the Pennsylvania Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary will be held in the Church of the Holy Trinity, Nineteenth and Walnut streets, on Friday, November 15, from 10.00 A. M. until 4.30 P. M. The Bishop of the diocese will preside and the other speakers will be announced later.

The classes for confirmation have commenced and are held as follows:

For women—Tuesdays, 7.15 P. M.

For girls—Tuesdays and Fridays, 4 P.M.

For boys—Mondays and Wednesdays, 4.15 P. M.; Fridays, 7.15 P. M.; Saturdays, 2.30 P. M.

For men—By appointment.

The classes for women and girls meet at All Saints' Mission House. The class for boys in St. John's Chapel.

The Sunday School was reopened on October 6. There are twenty-one teachers on the roll, not counting several individuals who have kindly offered to act as substitutes. Four of the regular teachers are still out of town. Thus there have been seventeen on hand for Sunday classes. The school enrolled about 150 pupils on the first Sunday. Fr. Beede is the superintendent, and Mr. Paul Fancher, a Seminarist, is the secretary.

The Bishop of the diocese has signified his intention of making his visitation to St. Clements, on Sunday, Februday 2. He will be with us for the entire day.

According to the new schedule of Episcopal appointments, each parish is to have an "all day" visitation from either the Bishop or the Bishop Suffragan, once in three years. The appointments for confirmation will be made according to the several convocations. All the parishes in a given district will be visited at the same season of the year.

The guilds of the parish have commenced work for the winter. St. Mary's Guild held its meeting on Monday, October 7, with an encouraging attendance, and St. Vincent's Guild had a well attended meeting on the first Wednesday in the month.

The Guild of St. Katherine has resumed its bi-monthly meetings and voted to do some practical charitable work under the direction of the Sister-in-charge, on alternate meeting nights. On the other evenings the guild office will be sung, followed by an instruction in "The Services of the Church" by the chaplain.

The Girls' Friendly Society started October 15.

PARISH FINANCES.

At the meeting of the Vestry held on the evening of October 8, it was decided that a brief summary of the financial condition of the parish should be published in this issue of the magazine in order that all members of the parish might be made familiar with the actual conditions as they now exist.

The contract for the work on the Nave calls for an expenditure of $20,882.50, and to this amount must be added the cost of additional work that may be found to be necessary, the cost of the new electric lighting system, the architect's commission, and other necessary items, making the total amount necessary to be raised $25,000.00.

Toward this amount the Accounting Warden on October 15, when this statement was prepared, had on hand $10,612.12, with subscriptions not yet due of $2,000.00 a total of $12,612.12, or over half the total amount needed.

The first payment on account of the work, amounting to over $6,000.00, will have been made before this article appears in print. It is hoped that the members of the parish will make as generous contributions as possible toward this object, as the work must of course be entirely paid for on completion.

During the summer months, and now as well while we have been obliged to hold services in the Parish House, congregations have been smaller, and the offerings for parish expenses have consequently fallen below the average amounts.

The Accounting Warden had to borrow during the summer $1,260.00 in order to meet current expense.

Coal is higher than ever before, as we all know, and the contract for the winter's supply was awarded by the Accounting Warden, after receiving competitive bids, at a cost of $720.00, which amount is now due. Then too, our parish apportionment for the diocesan and convention funds, as well as for the sustentation fund of the diocese, amounting, all told, to $418.89, must be paid prior to the close of the calendar year. Generous offerings are therefore needed toward our current expenses in order that all obligations may be met when due, and the loans made, paid off.

NOVENA—NOV. 14-23.

Memorial for the parish (to be said daily):

Ant.—I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground: I will pour My Spirit upon thy seed, and My blessing upon thine offspring.

V.—O Lord, look down from heaven.

R.—Behold, and visit this vine.

Let us pray.

Almighty and everlasting God, who does govern all things in heaven and earth, mercifully hear our supplications, and grant unto this parish all things that are needful for its spiritual welfare; schools in which to train the young in Thy faith and fear; ministers to labor in this portion of Thy vineyard; a Church restored to the beauty of holiness. Strengthen and confirm the faithful; visit and relieve the sick; turn and soften the wicked; rouse the careless; recover the fallen; restore the penient; remove all hindrances to the advancement of Thy truth; bring all to be of one heart and one mind within the fold of Thy Holy Church; to the honor and glory of Thy Holy Name; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

ST. CLEMENT'S DAY.

So many complications have arisen in connection with the church repairs that we cannot hope to occupy the building at St. Clement's Tide. Conditions have proved much more serious than were anticipated, and the work consequently progresses very slowly.

While it will be a disappointment to many that our usual observances must be omitted this year, we must not allow the condition of the material fabric to rob us of true spiritual joy of our parochial feast. Every member of the parish is urged to make a devout communion on St. Clement's Day. All the masses will be said in the Parish Hall so that we may have room for the increased number of communicants.

The parish tea will be held on Monday evening, November 25th, and each member of the parish is urged to attend.

Collect:—O God, who makest us to rejoice in the yearly solemnity of blessed Clement, Thy martyr and bishop, favorably grant that we who keep his festival may likewise imitate his fortitude in suffering, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Epistle: Phil. iii: 17; iv: 4.

The Holy Gospel: St. Matthew, xxiv 42-48.

Of your charity pray for the repose of the soul of James A. Toole, some time acolyte in S. Clement's parish.

Grant unto him O Lord, eternal rest and let light perpetual shine upon him. Amen.

GROWTH OF THE AMERICAN CHURCH.

Let us note the stages by which the American Church progressed, from the First General Convention, in 1785, to the great Missionary Convention of 1835.

First General Convention—New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, and South Carolina, sent delegates to the convention which met at Philadelphia. Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Connecticut, as explained in a previous chapter, were under Bishop Seabury's care. They did not attend the convention, but sent a copy of their proceedings, with fratenal greeting. The fact that Bishop Seabury had been consecrated in Scotland militated against him in the minds of the churchmen in the Middle and Southern States. But Bishop Seabury's clergy stood by him, and Bishop White's masterly handling of the situation saved the American church from a schism. The Fourth General Convention, in 1789, formally recognized Bishop Seabury, July 28, and then adjourned till September 29, when the Connecticut delegation was received with great joy, and there were now eight dioceses represented—New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island forming the "Eastern Diocese." In 1792, North Carolina came in. In 1808, the Church took a strong stand against dueling, and directed that the funeral office be refused in such cases. It also pronounced clearly against the remarriage of divorced persons.

In 1823, the Bishop of Ohio was present.

In 1829, Kentucky and Tennessee were admitted, and Bishop Meade was consecrated.

In 1832, four Bishops were consecrated. Alabama and Michigan were admitted, a French edition of the Prayer-book was authorized for the Southwest.

And in 1835, the Church awakened to the fact that her life depended on her missions; that the Church was a missionary organization, of which every one baptized in it was a member. The foreign work was surveyed, and steps were taken to consecrate Bishops for it. The work in the West called urgently, and Bishop Kemper —the first missionary Bishop of the American Church was sent.

And so in a life-time—within a generation—the Church in America out of weakness was made strong, and began the great work to which God in His mercy had assigned it.

SOME MESSENGERS, AND WHERE THEY WENT.

In order to complete our survey of the Church's missionary work prior to the Convention of 1835, we will now see what had been done among the Indians in the different States, and how much was yet needed among them.

In Maine, the Indians had been converted by Jesuits from Canada. After the peace of 1763, the French priests were not allowed south of the border, so the Christian Indians had to travel to Canada for their Church duties. General Washington met these Indians in council in 1775, and, at the close of the Revolution, arrangements were made to send priests to them from Baltimore.

The Indians of New Hampshire and Vermont had died out or migrated long before this time.

In Massachusetts—where an island in the Merrimac River, near Lowell, is still remembered as having been the last of the Indian reservations in New England—the S. P. G. had brought down to Revolutionary times the good work begun by John Eliot and the Mayhews. John Eliot, the Puritan pastor of Roxbury for fifty-eight years, labored unceasingly for the good of the Indians, greatly hindered by the greed and ignorance of his fellow-Christians.

The colonists and traders too often traded upon the credulty of the natives, too often taught them to drink whisky and to use firearms, too seldom believed that Indians had any souls to save. Eliot had been in this ministry about ten years, when he took up the theory that the American Indians were the descendants of the "Lost Tribes" of Israel, who might have reached America from the extreme east of Asia. He thenceforth devoted himself to them with all the time and strength he could spare from his parish work. Finding an Indian lad who had been a house servant, he took him into his family, and for three years diligently studied the language. Then he began to preach. The sermon took so much attention, that he was not able to prepare a whole service, so he began with English prayers, to which the Indians listened without understanding, but with respect. To them it seemed perfectly proper that the God of the English should be addressed in that tongue. In fact, as they realized by degrees that they too might pray to the God of the English, it was found that they dared not address Him in any other language, and their efforts to do so were not funny, because they were so earnest and pitiful. One woman, deeply touched by the message of love and mercy, fell on her knees and tried to pray. She knew only one English word, surely the English God would accept that. Stretching forth her hands, she looked up to heaven, crying "Broom, broom, BROOM!"

Eliot deserved the title of "Apostle to the Indians." Besides these fatiguing public services, and long lonely tramps through the woods to the sick and suffering, he worked late at night translating portions of the Scriptures into dialect, having first to invent an alphabet by which he might teach his wild flock to read. First came a short and simple Instruction, in 1654; the whole of Genesis, in 1655; the Psalms, three years later, and the whole Bible in 1663.

During these labors, the patient saint, sneered at and hindered by his own people, received a visit from a Jesuit missionary, Father Gabriel Druillettes, from Quebec. Following the Indians, on one of his missionary journeys, he heard so much of Mr. Eliot, that he went to his house and asked to meet him. He remained a welcome guest for some days, and the two became intimate friends.

Converts among the Indians becoming numerous, and their position so difficult—distrusted by their own people and by the whites—a community of "praying Indians" was organized at Natick. They were industrious, sober, and honest, and for a time it seemed as if the little colony might prosper. But when King Philip's War broke out, the colonists made no distinction between them and the hostile tribes, and the other Indians hated them for their English ways. Those who were not massacred were forcibly removed to Deer Island, in Boston harbor, to begin all over again as best they might.

At Martha's Vineyard, the first governor and patentee, Thomas Mayhew, began work among the Indians in 1643. His son was called to be their minister. In the course of fifteen years he had organized an Indian Church with three hundred members, and the first school for Indian children in this country. Money was needed to carry on his plans, and he started for England to get help, but was lost at sea. The bereaved father, then seventy years of age, took up the work, learning the language, and teaching personally at great pains. He often took a twenty-mile walk through dense woods, to reach some little band.

The brave old governor kept up his interest in the mission till his death, in his ninety-third year, when his grandson and great-grandson, successively, carried it on down almost to Revolutionary times, to 1731.

After King Philip's War, the Society for the Propogation of the Gospel gathered up the scattered Christian Indians, and worked among them regularly, till they gradually became a part of the communities in which they lived. In Connecticut, and especially Rhode Island, the Indians were almost exterminated by the war.

In New York, the first S. P. G. missionary to the Indians was the Rev. Thoroughgood Moore, but he was greatly annoyed and hindered by the English governor, who objected because he gave the Holy Communion to his Indian converts twice a month. The missionary went on according to his conscience, and moreover remonstrated with the governor, whose life was anything but a Christian example. Enraged, the governor cast him into prison. The Rev. William Andrews succeeded, in 1712. Meanwhile, in London, had grown up a Missionary Board supported by the Dissenters, and its agents in the colonies endeavored to carry out Eliot's idea, by publishing the Scriptures in Mohawk. As Eliot with the Jesuit missionary, so these with the Church of England priest, worked along fraternally and at last printed for him a compilation of the most-used Prayer-book services. (The Library Company of Philadelphia had a copy of this book.) Just before the Revolution, a formal report of the S. P. G. stated that the whole Mohawk nation had become civilized and were Christians. In 1815, the Oneidas followed their example.

So, as a missionary venture, the Indians were not needing attention. At the North, in 1835, they had died out, migrated, or been merged in the communities where they still lingered. We have acknowledged the work of other missionaries than our own, above; now we will pay a further tribute, to the work of the Moravians, in Georgia and southward.

The Moravians were formed in 1457 by followers of John Huss, and, hidden in Moravia and Bohemia, preserved their Episcopate. In 1735, General Oglethorpe patronized a Moravian colony which settled on an island in the Ogeechee River, and started a school for Indian children.

Three years later the colonists were ordered to join in fighting the Spaniards, who were trying to expel the English from Georgia. The Moravians were conscientiously opposed to this, and left Georgia to settle at Bethlehem, Pa. During the French and Indian wars, the Christian Indian and missionaries remained neutral, being disliked by both parties. A mission-house in Carbon County was burned, and all the inmates killed. After they moved to the Ohio Valley, they had a peaceful and happy time for ten years, then a party of Hurons attacked them, as "Americans," and carried them off to Sandusky. They suffered much from lack of food, but when a little party managed to get back to secure the stores left behind, a party of American soldiers took them for British spies, and shot all but one, who carried the news. When the facts became known, a monument was erected on the spot, and a tract of land granted the Moravians, who went there with their saintly leader, Ziesburget, in 1772. Here, thirty-six years later, he died; the weeping Indians stood about him, saying, "Father, we will cleave to the Saviour, and live to Him alone."

One would like to linger over the tale of the heroes of different creeds, but working one and the self-same spirit, who ministered to the American Indians—David Brainerd, the young Presbyterian, refusing one urgent call after another, to labor in ever-failing health among the Susquehanna Indians, till there came that wonderful revival among them, just before his death.

Eleiar Williams, the "Lost Dauphin," who never doubted that he was the son of Louis XVI, but remained at his work among the Oneidas, and went with them to Wisconsin. He organized the first vested boy choir in this country.

When the aroused Church looked over the field, in 1835, the territory which promised most for a beginning, was in Wisconsin. How the Church began, and the gallant story of her pioneers, will be told later.

PARISH NOTES.

The choir is looking forward to a camp next summer.

The enrollment is increasing at Children's mass and Sunday School.

No midnight mass of Christmas Day will be celebrated in public this year.

The clergy will hear confessions on both Monday and Tuesday, December 23 and 24.

Soon after New Year's Day a series of monthly smokers for the men will take place in the gymnasium.

A series of lantern lectures on missionary subjects was begun with a lecture on Japan, Wednesday, November 20.

The Sunday School festival and entertainment will be held on the night of St. Stephen's Day, Thursday, December 26.

The Little Girls' Guild of the Holy Child meets only on Saturdays at 10 A. M. There is a religious service with address in the chapel on the first Saturday of the month at 11.30.

On the Wednesday night within the Octave of our Patron, St. Clement, the choirboys had a supper and game party of their own. The Chaplain and other grown-ups were present.

During the repairs upon the church roof the names of two carpenters who worked on the building in 1858 were found written on a beam. They were John Kelly and Edward Larkins.

The Monday and Friday night Bible Classes are intended for any women who care to come, whether or not they are Sunday School teachers or members of the Guild of the Holy Cross.

The Altar Guild has resumed work for the winter. At present sets of black and of violet vestments are being made for parish use. Later on a red antependium will be presented for the high altar.

Shortly after Christmas, the junior choristers will begin rehearsing for a comic operetta that has never before been given. The music is by a well-know composer, Arthur H. Ryder. The proceeds of the entertainment will be applied to the expenses of the choir camp or outings.

St. Clement's Branch of the Church Periodical Club will be glad of new contributors. Anyone who can send regularly magazines or church papers will be furnished the name of a recipient by the Librarian, Mrs. Bernadou, 1705 Pine street. The Holy Cross Magazine and Spirit of Missions have been especially asked for.

The Parish Tea on Monday night was as fully attended as usual. The front part of the hall was closed, owing to the presence of the temporary altar, but the third story was thrown open, and dancing went on in the gymnasium. It was a special pleasure for us to have as our guest the Rev. Father Underhill, now curate of the Church of the Redeemer, New York city.

Vespers of the Dead were sung in St. John's Chapel on November 1. Several members of the choir were present. The annual meeting of the Guild of All Souls was held after the 9.30 mass on All Souls' Day. The same officers were re-elected. There was exhibited a set of solemn mass vestments, the gift of the Guild to the Cathedral, in Orlando, Fla. In addition to this gift, the Guild voted to donate to the Cathedral a pall, bier and six mortuary candlesticks.

Six regular Confirmation Instructions per week are now offered to boys. Boys in the choir must attend at least two, and other boys at least three instructions per week unless a special arrangement is made. Older boys meet on Mondays at 7.15; choirboys on Tuesdays and Fridays at 7.15; other boys on Mondays and Wednesdays at 4.15, and Saturdays at 2.30. All boys, whether confirmed or not, who attend Tuesday night Guild of St. Nicholas, are expected to come into chapel at 7.15 for the instructions.

As the MAGAZINE goes to press, it is impossible to tell with certainty the date when we shall be enabled to return to the nave for our public worship. All persons in charge of the work are proceeding as rapidly as is consistent with thorough construction. The oak ceiling is quite finished, and the beams are now being encased. Under the personal direction of our esteemed architect, Mr. Sellers, the walls are to be treated in a plain, warm tone. The design of "The Magnificat" will be left intact beneath the cornice.

In spite of the natural disappointment over the six months of exile from the familiar nave, our people showed in a marked degree their loyalty and devotion during St. Clement's-tide. Communions were largely made in the Parish Hall at the three early masses of St. Clement's Day, notwithstanding the falling of the feast this year upon a Saturday, and although an extraordinary heavy rain occurred on Sunday morning, many communions were then made. The hall was well filled at the 11.00 o'clock mass, when the preacher was the Rt. Reverend the Bishop of Salina. Generous offerings were given on the two days, the total being over $1,700.

The Guild of St. Nicholas for boys meets on Tuesdays at 7.45 P. M., and on Saturdays at 10 A. M. On Tuesday night the members are divided into groups for gymnasium play and brass-working, under the leadership of the Messrs. Leon Beaudry, a U. of P. student, and Morris May, an accredited teacher. On the second Saturday of the month, at 11.30 A. M., there is a religious service with address. Forty-seven boys are now actively enrolled for the Tuesday night classes. The total enrollment is about sixty boys. No outside boys are admitted without previous arrangement with the Chaplain. It has been necessary to furnish gym shoes, togs and bath-towels for the Guild, besides new benches for the handicraft rooms, therefore special contributions are needful at this time.

S. ANNA'S HOME.

On the 3rd of February, 1913, the Sisters of All Saints Community will commence (God willing) a work which, we are sure, will engage the interest and support of many. The community has purchased the property immediately adjoining the Mission House, in order to provide a home for Aged Women. The need for such a home is greater than is generally realized, and has been deeply felt by those who come in contact with the aged and lonely poor.

Aged and worthy communicants of the Church will be received from any of the parishes of Philadelphia, according to the capacity of the home. Contributions and pledges of money are very earnestly solicited, and will be gratefully received.

Very few persons requiring such a home would be able to pay even a small board, but it is hoped that offers will be made to provide for one or more women by the month or year.

All contributions will be received by the Sister Superior, 2016 Race St., who will gladly give any further information.

LAST CHRISTMAS AT ST. MARY'S ON THE MOUNTAIN.

Christmas at St. Mary's on the Mountain is not an affair of one day. For weeks before there is the unpacking of boxes, the sorting of gifts, the writing of invitations for the three trees, and then at the very last the decorating of the two houses with the Christmas greenery. It is such a busy, happy time; the real inner spirit of Christmas is everywhere. Here on our mountain top among God's poor, the coming of the Christ Child seems such a natural and easily comprehended thing.

Of course the midnight mass is the center and heart of the feast here, as it is everywhere else throughout Catholic Christendom. It is a sore trial to the very youngest children that they may not come, and the rows of blue-gowned, white-capped little maidens are an inspiration to older people in their loving reverence and self-forgetfulness. Several of our old girls who have left us are glad to come back many miles to keep the feast with us.

Those who read the Leaflet know all about Christmas Day itself with its tree and stockings and general merry making; but even they were not at the doll party in the library, to which all our little children brought their Christmas dollies. There was a marvelous house arranged on the broad window ledge and window seat, with an upper and lower story. From the kitchen to the nursery all the rooms were full of surprises. In the latter there was a sewing machine that would sew, and in the former real aluminum saucepans, a little larger than a thimble. There was a terrace, too, with potted plants and perambulators. If you could have seen the joy that these odds and ends of other children's good times, sent to us in boxes, gave our flock you would want to send them all the doll furniture you possess.

Then on the other long window seat was a circus with three much-battered clowns that could move their arms and legs, and two lions and sundry other animals from different climes. The fact that the frog was considerably larger than the elephant only added to its charms in the eyes of the audience. But perhaps the thing which appealed most strongly to them all was a jointed mule with a vicious expression. Woman after woman who was taken up to see the toys during Christmas week exclaimed, "Well, I do say. Ain't he natural, now?" That mule certainly did his share of the entertaining this year.

The weather has been so severe of late that there has been great suffering among our friends. As they come to the Mission room to trade their few little things for clothing, one gets an inkling of their dire need and cold and hunger. They never complain—but one sees. Then they are so unselfish generally. The mother and father always want something for the children, or for each other; very seldom for themselves.

One woman who comes about every other week lives in Lost Cove. She is a widow with five children, all small, and she does a man's work, "snaking wood" with a mule, cutting it, plowing for her neighbors. She is as cheery and bright as possible, and so brave. She had one turkey which she killed and brought to us, "because the children has to have clothes, so I'll take this out in things for 'em." She wanted some shoes, but those we hadn't, so she picked out other things. It is very hard not to have the things they really need, but naturally one often has to say, "No, I haven't it."

Perhaps this timely glimpse of our life here may show those of you who have been so generous to us how much happiness you have given, but it is a very faint outline of the real thing. Until you have seen a child, who has never known the meaning of Christmas, face to face with the Christmas tree, or watched fingers blue with cold push themselves into warm woolen gloves, you cannot know what your loving kindness has meant to our people of the mountains.

A CHRISTMAS SERMON.

"The glory of Lebanon shall come unto thee, the fir tree, the pine tree, and the box together to beautify the place of my sanctuary."—Isa. ix., 13.

It is pleasant to be able thus to discover that we have a warrant in Holy Scripture for the use of trees as proper symbols of Christmas. For the words I have chosen as a text are taken from one of the lessons proper to this season. "The glory of Lebanon shall come unto thee, the fir tree, the pine tree, and the box together, to beautify the place of my sanctuary."

So, then, after all, the Christmas tree is not, as some people would have us believe, a mere heathen symbol. God's chosen people used it to brighten and adorn the place of God's sanctuary. And thus we use it to-day. Indeed, it has come to be almost the one universal symbol everywhere of Christmas time. And so I take it as a text in itself, and trust to it to speak to you and me its sacred message. But the Christmas tree that I have in mind is not such an one as that upon which my children gazed this morning, nor like that which stands in a separate glory by itself in each of the various homes represented by this congregation. It is quite another tree that exists only in imagination, but there at any rate it stands out magnificent, glowing and opulent. For the tree that I have in mind is God's Christmas tree—the tree that bears upon its spreading boughs His numberless gifts to the children of men. In imagination I see it standing in all its beauty—a tree whose topmost boughs touch heaven, but whose root and trunk are firmly planted in the earth. We have seen trees before, glowing with light and color, and heavy with gifts, but never have we seen anything like this. Every gift on it is priceless; every gift is perfect; every gift is straight from the hand of the Heavenly Father. It is His tree, and on it it bears His presents to His children. So it stands before us, and the wonderful thing about it is that we are bidden, all of us, to know that God who knows us better than a father knows his own children, has provided for each of us just what we most really need.

Now as we look at the tree, let us tell off one after another certain of the gifts it suggests of which we may become possessed. First of all, and above all else, there is the gift of Himself in the person of His Son. "Unto you," sang the leader of the angelic host, "Unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord." Nothing else that God could give could equal this. You value your friend's gift because you love him; that friend is dearer to you than any gift he could give. And so God's best gift is His Son. He might have given us so many things and kept that one gift back. But this Christmas Day witnesses to the fact that in order to prove His love He spared not to give us the best He had to give—the gift of His Son. There it shines this Christmas morning, as truly as it shined when first the angels went to Bethlehem to see that thing which had come to pass, and found the little Child safely sheltered in the manger. And, this is the first sight that rivets our attention as we look on God's Christmas tree. We see Jesus, born as at this time of a pure virgin, Son of God, yet also Son of man, and as we see this gift we say, "Ah! this is the best of all—the gift that makes this marvelous tree so entrancingly beautiful." We do not begrudge this gift its central place. Everything else seems to radiate from it. It stands out so clear, so prominent, so unmistakably the best thing God had to give. It is the glory of His Christmas tree.

But another gift I seem to note hanging on this divine tree. It is the gift of Redemption. What does it mean to be redeemed, as Jesus Christ has redeemed us? It means freedom from some old slavery. It means a new birth into a new world of happiness and self-respect.

We do not care to let anything that suggests the cross and passion enter into the brightness of Christmas, but we cannot well keep it out. What did the angels say to the shepherds? "I bring you tidings of great joy, for unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour." And what is the method and means of this salvation? The answer is one only, the Cross. So, the gift of Redemption is one of the costliest jewels this world has ever looked upon, for to obtain it for you and me the Son of God laid down His life. No wonder then that, as we stand and gaze at it shining out upon us, we are silent. We seem to have some faint understanding of what it all meant. The cross and passion; not the agony of an hour or a day, but the constant, growing, yielding of the will to God's will, even to the end. What prercious stone that any earthly parent may hang about the neck of a beloved child could for one monemt be compared wih this jewel of God's crown that flashes before our eyes to-day?

But another gift I distinguish on this wonderful tree, the gift of Hope. How many there are who, waking up this Christmas morning, woke to another hopeless day. Schemes they have ventured have failed, plans adopted have not succeeded, faith they had placed in others has been ill-rewarded, confidence placed in themselves has cheated them and mocked them. If they had been asked, "What would you have as a gift this Christmas morning?" their one reply would have been, "Hope." And there as we look at God's tree it stands out so very plain to the view. "They that put their trust in the Lord shall be as the Mount Zion, which cannot be moved." "Hope thou in God, for I shall yet praise him which is the health of my countenance and my God." Such words as these spring to our lips as we look on this, God's gift of hope. How much it does to adorn the tree. What a sweet, white light falls from it and upon us who gaze. I fancy I see there some who have lost what made life most precious, coming to see the tree of which they have heard so much. And almost instantly their eyes catch sight of the gift of Hope. And they turn from that sight and look to Him who brought hope with Him into the world, and the hearts that were inclined to rebel are stilled in trust and made patient in hope. Oh, yes, I am sure that this Christmas Day we shall miss one of God's best gifts for us unless we take Hope home with us.

One other gift, and only one other, among the countless ones that adorn the tree may I stop to speak of—it is the gift of Love. If the Saviour bore Hope with Him when into the world He came, He bore Love, too, for that is the reason of His coming at all. "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son." And who is there of us who does not need this gift? Love to God, love to our neighbor, means love in our families, the love that endures, suffers, sympathizes. If there is one thing in this world today which marks off man from man and class from class, it is this lack of love; each man wrestling with his neighbor in a wild, mad struggle to outdo, overcome, beat down, and the result a world of bitterness, strife, misery. There is no hope of any change until God's love enters into man's heart and works its miracle there. No wonder, then, that we see on this tree of our imagination this gift of Love. Yes, on the tree that we call God's tree hang such gifts as those of which I have spoken—the gift of His Son, the gift of Redemption, the gift of Hope, the gift of Love. Are they not worth more than any gift you or I could ever imagine adorning any Christmas tree? And yet is not this wonderful thing to be said of them and of the tree? They are offered to the whole world; whosoever will may come to this tree and partake freely of its fruits.

It is surely a fact, hard and bitter as it seems, that there are those in this city today who are too poor to possess a Christmas tree; much too poor to look for any gifts therefrom. And others there are who, being alone, erect no tree, for they have no friends to give to and none from whom to expect anything; and others who cannot bear the sight of a Christmas tree for all its memories call up to them. For such as these, first of all, God's tree stands. The poorest man in this city today may lie down tonight rich in love and hope and joy, if he will but hear the Christmas message of One who was born to poverty and who died upon a cross. The lonely life looking upon this tree may find companionship at last. The bruised and sad will not be compelled to turn from it, for it is not a tree rich only in memories, but one that is full of prophecy, of hope and reunion and eternal life. Oh! I wish that each Christmas tree that you and I look upon today might seem to speak to us in words such as these: Have you seen Gods tree? Have you seen the gifts He has placed thereon? Those gifts are for you. Ah! unless we believe this and act upon it, unless we come to His tree and seek at His hands His divine gifts, we shall not be sharers of the real joy of Christmas.

But is God only to give to us on Christmas? Have we nothing to give to Him?

I saw a sight once I shall never forget. It was at a Christmas festival of very little children, here in our own chapel. Those that were invited to share in the children's joy saw not one tree, but two. The first was resplendent with the toys and love tokens that were to be given to the children, and, naturally enough, the eyes of the little ones were fixed upon it. But I fancy that for many of those that were older the other tree was quite as interesting. It did not begin to be as beautiful as the first. In place of gorgeous and shining adornment it had little strips of colored paper, and pathetically hand-made gifts, the work of the little ones themselves. They were the gifts the children were making for their own parents and friends. The little tree stood for what they gave. Its larger brother was heavy with the burden of what they were to receive. Dear friends, God wants us to see what He has to give us, but He also wants to see what we have to give to Him. On this Christmas Day we must not be satisfied with the tree of His giving, we must set up our own. We must fill it with our gifts to Him. This tree we may call man's Chrstmas tree does not begin to be as beautiful as God's tree. Its gifts are poor and mean, and not altogether resplendent as compared with His perfect treasures bestowed upon us. But I noticed that when the children took the gifts they had made, to give to their mothers, the response was one of overwhelming love. It was not any value the gift had in itself that called out this response, it was that with the gift went the heart of the child. Yes! God's tree is so rich because on it is the gift of Himself. Man's tree may be equally pleasing to God if on it is to be discovered the gift of our own hearts.

So we find that the tree which is to glorify the place of God's sanctuary is not only the tree we call God's, but that we call man's. God gives to us, but we are also to give to Him. It is our day of giving and receiving. It is also God's day of giving and receiving, or it should be, if the Christmas-tide of the world were as truly Christian in its thought and purpose as is the Christmas-tide of the Church. Come, then, with your gifts and adorn the tree upon which you would have God's eye to rest.

Friends, dear friends, let this be our truest Christmas. All that God has ever given us, is ours still. The fruit of the Tree of His planting endures eternally. Blessed are they that do His commandments, that they may have right to the Tree of Life and may enter in, with all His saints, through the gates, into the City.

PARISH NOTES.

Owing to the condition of the Church, the Christmas festivities were, for the most part, postponed until Epiphany.

The silver crucifix given each year for perfect attendance at Mass, Sunday School and Guild, was awarded to Elsie Edwards.

S. Nicholas Guild has increased to such proportions that we are in need of funds to supply necessary material for the work. Contributions will be very thankfully received for this object.

On S. Vincent's Day, January 22d, the Guild of S. Vincent will hold its annual service in the Church, to be followed by a conference in the parish hall. It is hoped that representatives from every guild of the Diocese may be present.

The Guild of the Holy Child held its Christmas party on Saturday, December 28th. The afternoon was spent in playing games in the gymnasium, and at four o'clock the members were served with refreshments in the parish hall, and presents were distributed from the tree.

At present writing the ceiling of the Church is completed, the scaffolding removed and the walls are being treated. The first service in the restored church will be held on the first Sunday after Epiphany, January 12th. There will be a Solemn High Mass with procession. Gounod's S. Cecilia Mass will be sung.

The Bishop of the Diocese will make his visitation to the parish (God willing) on February 2d, Quinquagesima Sunday. He will celebrate at eight o'clock, when we will hope for a large corporate communion of the parish. He will preach at eleven o'clock, and administer Confirmation in the evening. As the Communion will probably be a very large one, members of other parishes are asked not to be present at the eight o'clock mass.

SOME MESSENGERS AND WHERE THEY WENT.

In the February, April and May numbers of this Magazine we gave a summary of the work done abroad by the American Church prior to 1835. In subsequent numbers we studied the work done on the frontiers and among the natives of our own land.

And now we will study the Church's progress, as it dates from that epoch-making Convention which declared that the Church itself was a missionary organization and every member thereof under obligation to work for the cause of Missions.

For our text-book we will use the early volumes of the SPIRIT OF MISSIONS, which contains the missionaries' letters from the field, so that we may read in their own words how, "stone by stone, the wondrous fabric grew."

GREECE.

The work to be done here required tact and patience, but especially a gift for imparting the Catholic truth in a land where the Eastern Church was buried in ignorance and superstition. This was explained in our February number, and for convenience we will quote what we then said:

"The Rev. Drs. Robertson and Hill, with their families, had sailed from New York in 1830, under the direction of the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society, after there had been much thoughtful and prayerful investigation of the situation along the Mediterranean. Greek independence was near, but the condition of the Greeks was pitiful. Plundered now by Turks, now by their own armies; without education or the means of it; and, most of all, ministered to in the most perfunctory way by clergy as ignorant as themselves—yet here was a branch of the Catholic Church, and here was a duty for Church people in America.

"It must have taken great courage to start on this mission. Greece was experimenting with a president, Capodistrias, whose term of office began in 1828, and was to have lasted seven years, but ended with his assassination in 1831. Athens became the seat of government, and there the missionaries found a great opportunity. The dearest dream of the Greeks was that their children might be educated, and their scheme of education included familiarity with classic Greek. This education, when it could be had, was to be bestowed on the boys; constant association with Turkish ideas had insensibly brought down the position of the Greek women. The services of the Greek Church were more or less faithfully attended, but it was a superstitious custom on the part of most, with little or no idea of the purpose

"Capodistrias had founded a great asylum at Athens, for the instruction of Greek children reclaimed from slavery in Egypt. There were many smaller schools started. But they failed pitifully for want of management, of teachers, of books, of everything. Now the missionaries began. The Rev. Dr. Robertson started a printing house at Syra, and the Hills rented a wretched tenement at Athens, 'an old Turkish tower, where they began with any poor children who wanted to come. Before the end of their first year, they were using all three of their American helpers, besides five Greek men and five Greek women. They had an Infant School, Boys' School, Girls' School, Boys' High School, and a Training School for Women, 656 pupils on the roll, and many more begging admission."

SUMMARY OF DR. ROBERTSON'S FIRST LETTER.

The Robertsons' first house was so damp that the floors were wet all winter; centipedes crept even over the faces of the sleeping children. They obtained the second floor of a large house, and one room was large enough to be used as a chapel on Sundays. There were forty in the congregation, and the course of lectures was on St. Matthew's Gospel. The school was begun, applications being numerous and very pressing; they had meant to keep the number to twenty-five, but took thirty. They had a promising young teacher, a Samiote, who kept up her studies. Though applications came from people in good circumstances, the poorest were admitted, and some had hardly enough to wear to school.

The printing and distribution of textbooks seemed to be Dr. Robertson's principal work;—Ancient and Modern Greek Grammars, and the Prayer-Book in Greek,—and he was getting out a Graeco-Turkish editor of the Bible, Genesis having been just finished and eagerly welcomed. The Archbishop of Ephesus was interested, and prized a copy of the Septuagint, given him by Dr. Robertson.

The little school was in the Robertsons' own home, purposely kept small and conducted in a quiet way till the necessary legal steps should have been taken.

Mrs. Robertson had no small share in these labors. She was in charge of the school; she had no servant; she taught the older children, who in turn worked in the school under her direction; the two younger ones were little toddlers, and the baby was teething, so that she got little rest at night. Yet God kept her in better health than for some years, partly because of her love for her work, partly because of the fine climate.

Mr. R.'s application for licenses to print and circulate finally received this answer:

"In answer to your application of August 31st, to this office, by virtue of the Second Article of the royal decree of the 23d of December, we grant you permission to sell or distribute freely, within the kingdom of Greece, the books contained in the catalogue presented by you.

"We inform you, also, that we have issued a circular to the monarchs of the realm, by which we acquaint them regarding this measure, and we call upon them not to interpose any hindrance, either to yourself or to any other to whom you may give in charge the sale or distribution of the books mentioned in your catalogue."

Signed by the Acting Minister of the Interior, G. PRAIDES.

"Hereafter," said Dr. Robertson, "I have to add to the catalogue, from time to time, such new works as I desire to circulate, and the permission will be extended to them."

February 27, 1836, Mr. R. went to Athens to engage a well-known Greek poet to translate some of the Church hymns into modern Greek. He also got a new translator, who turned out to be an accomplished Turkish scholar, and they discussed the matter of Turkish tracts, etc. Beside the "Scripture Characters," the translator was engaged on "Chrysostom on the Priesthood," which it was hoped might have some effect on the native clergy. In February, '36, the Syra school was 70.

OUTLINE FROM CYCLOPEDIA OF MISSIONS.

Rev. Dr. Hill's Work.—With Dr. Robertson, they began a school at Tenos. The American Board had already begun work there, when the Revolution ended successfully, throwing off Turkish rule in 1830, though the government was not settled till 1833 (February, under King Otho). The Greek Church was made the established religion, and the "Holy Council of the Kingdom of Greece" was appointed, to watch especially over religious literature, education, schools, and all publications were to be under close inspection. Up to that time, the Romanists had controlled about one-third of the people, and their opposition had not been supported by the then government, which sent Mr. King a box of ancient Greek books and commended his school.

About 1834, King Otho decreed the establishment of a national book store, and royal printing press, to furnish all books on education to be used within the kingdom. The people did not like this, but the board missionaries kept on, till the government established a university at Athens. The printing press was kept busy; about 25,000 books were distributed, and in one day, 45 Greek soldiers applied for books. Dr. King's teaching was removed to a town of Laconia, called Areopolis, and in 1839 the government allowed him to have a teacher there; but two years later it ordered that one of the catechisms used in the Greek Church should be introduced into the school. The schools then had to be given up, and the missionaries devoted themselves to printing and circulating. In abandoning the station at Areopolis, the missionaries had the sympathy of the Greeks themselves, who feared their new-found liberty was not to be a reality altogether.

Dr. King was prosecuted by the government for teaching and publishing doctrines contrary to the established Church of Greece, and was sentenced to imprisonment and then banishment. But the United States government and powerful friends interfering, he was left unmolested, and continued his work of translating and distributing the Scriptures and religious literature. (1852.)

AMERICAN CHURCH MISSIONARIES.

Rev. Dr. Hill began at Tenos, but removed to Athens, where in 1830 he began a small school. This grew rapidly, and in 1834 it was recognized as the Government Seminary for the Instruction of Female Teachers. It numbered about 650 scholars in the course of two years. There was much government opposition, but in 1853 it was reported as continuing to be respected by the people, taking pupils from 5 to 15 years, from every class of society, from the daughter of the Prime Minister to the poorest. A large and beautiful map of Greece was presented to the school by the Minister of the Interior, in 1853, with a very kind and appreciative letter. They had warm friends among the Greek clergy, especially the younger ones, who took up the matter of studying the Bible. One, appointed by the government as public preacher in the capital, addressed a class in one of the public schools on this subject, in language which would befit an evangelical congregation.

In April, 1836, Mrs. Hill returned to United States for much-needed rest, as at one time it was feared that she would have to give up her work.

The board had sent over Rev. Hilliard Bryant, with two teachers, one of whom was Mrs. Hill's sister, who reached Athens in time to take charge before she left.

MR. BRYANT, JANUARY 27, 1836.

* * * And now in regard to the great work which is going on here, properly to appreciate one must be on the spot. He must witness with his own eyes the degraded material, the patient persevering process, and the finished and glorious result. He must see the squalid, naked, starved daughter of poverty, superstition and wretchedness, converted into the smiling intelligent Christian lady; * * * I arrived in time to witness the annual review and examination. It took place on the 6th of January, the Christmas of the Greek Church. Two large apartments were chosen for the occasion; in one of these * * * was a large table containing presents for the children, and also examples of their work. * * * After exercises in reading, a Christmas hymn was sung, * * * The exercises were closed by delivering the presents, and it was noticeable that the books were the most highly prized.

It may serve to show the high estimation in which these schools are held here, to observe that the following distinguished individuals were present: The Aide and Grand Equerry of the King of Greece; two officials representing the King of Bavaria, who is here on a visit; the British Minister, and the Secretary of the British Legation.

* * * For the present, my attention must be principally directed to the languages—the Greek and the French—the latter, if not absolutely necessary, is very essential. * * * However, in the meantime, I can make myself useful in various ways. Mr. Hill has every Sunday an English service in his own house, for the benefit of his own family and all others who please to be present. This service is attended by naval officers and others who are transiently here. In these, of course, I can take a part. * * *

SUMMARY OF LETTER FROM REV. DR. HILL, ATHENS, JUNE 6, 1836.

The school was in three departments—Boys', Girls' and Infant-room. Religious instruction was given daily, and the regular school branches were taught. It was hoped to start a Boys' High School, as the pupils left the Mission School when they wanted more advanced instruction. In the Girls' Department, there was the elementary, industrial and teachers' training. In the industrial department were generally very poor girls, many of them orphans. Considerable wisdom and tact were exercised in the use of the Scriptures, especially in the boys' school. Attendance was compulsory, and as the pupils were required to attend the Greek Church, the portions of Scripture used in the school followed the Greek services. This feature was warmly commended by a writer of that time. Conditions being as they then were in Greece, the domestic and industrial training of so many young girls had an effect on the homes of the people apparently highly appreciated.

THE SONG OF A SHEPHERD-BOY AT BETHLEHEM.

Sleep, Thou little Child of Mary,
Rest Thee now.
Though these hands be rough from shearing
And the plough,
Yet they shall not ever fail Thee,
When the waiting nations hail Thee,
Bringing palms unto their King.
Now—I sing.

Sleep, Thou little Child of Mary,
Hope divine.
If Thou wilt but smile upon me,
I will twine
Blossoms for Thy garlanding.
Thou'rt so little to be King,
God's Desire!
Not a brier
Shall be left to grieve Thy brow;
Rest Thee now.

Sleep, Thou little Child of Mary,
Some fair day
Wilt Thou, as Thou wert a brother,
Come away
Over hills and over hollow?
All the lambs will up and follow,
Follow but for love of Thee.
Lov'st Thou me?

Sleep, Thou little Child of Mary,
Rest Thee now.
I that watch have come from sheepstead
And from plough.
Thou wilt have disdain of me
When Thou'rt lifted royally
Very high for all to see;
Smilest Thou?

JOSEPHINE PRESTON PEABODY.

"LORD, INCREASE OUR FAITH."

A MEDITATION FOR EPIPHANYTIDE.

The Epiphany teaches us that truth, if it is to be grasped in its fullness, must be sought for, and that earnestly. The Wise Men have a little stock of truth to start with; a shadowy tradition, a vague presentiment. This was their excellence and their safety: they made the most of what had been given them. Like the faithful servant in the parable, their pound gained ten pounds. They did not put away from them what they knew, or felt, as if it were only a scruple or a superstition, and not worth considering. They applied themselves first to the studies from which, as they believed, they could obtain an answer, and next, to carrying into practice, by a serious and painful effort, the further duties which the answer imposed on them. They studied till they found the star; they left the homes, in which they were surrounded by wealth and consideration, to journey into a distant land; they reached its capital, and, having ascertained that the object of their search was to be found beyond, they set out again. They might too easily have given up inquiry when it became evident that to complete it would be costly and fatiguing; they might have persuaded themselves that, if Jerusalem did not reward their efforts, it was folly to travel on to a provincial town, and that they had better return. They succeeded, because they did not yield to these temptations. They persevered, until they had found.

Most true it is, that God does give to every man, at the outset of life, a certain elementary knowledge of Himself. The star, which might lead to the cradle of the Divine Infant, shines at some time into every human conscience. God endows us all, without exception, with the sense and perception of a distinction and a law; the distinction between right and wrong, whatever right and wrong may be; and the law of obedience to right, when once it is discovered. And if a man makes the most of this endowment, instead of shunning, or scorning, or doing it violence; if he allows himself to reflect that such inward legislation implies a Lawgiver, and to search for other traces of His Presence and action, then, assuredly, is he on the way to learn more. Men often ask why, when St. Paul preached at Athens or Corinth 1,800 years ago, or when a missionary preaches to-day in India or in Africa, one heathen listens with thankful interest, while another turns away in anger or disgust. And the answer may be, that the one has made the most of the gift of natural life within him, while the other has not. The one has dwelt on the faint glimmer of truth, rejoicing in it, longing that it might become brighter, wondering whence it came, and what can be known of its Author; and, therefore, when a messenger from that Author, who can show trustworthy credentials, comes to tell him more, he listens and believes. The other has felt haunted and disquieted by the inward light; he has wished it extinguished. And who does not know that such wishes will in the end prevail? God leaves those, who will away with Him, to the darkness which they prefer. And, therefore, when Christ's Apostle speaks to such an one, he speaks a language which the soul has no ears to hear. Micah's prophecy of the coming glories of Bethlehem would have seemed to the Wise Men the wildest nonsense, had they not seen, and followed, the star in the East. Our knowledge of higher truth depends on our fidelity to lower truths; on our making the most of whatever we may know at starting, and making good each step in our advance.

This is the law of God's Kingdom to the end of time. Whosoever hath, to him shall be given; and whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he seemeth to have. And to "have" is to make the most of that which God gives; to possess with conscious joy at the possession; to seek that which lies beyond whatever we already possess. "If thou criest after knowledge," says the Wise Man, "and liftest up thy voice for understanding; if thou seekest for her as silver, and searchest for her as for hid treasures, then shalt thou undestand the fear of the Lord, and find the knowledge of God."

REV. H. P. LIDDON, D.D.

A CHRISTMAS CAROL.

The Christ child lay on Mary's lap,
His hair was like a light.
(O weary, weary were the world,
But here is all aright.)

The Christ child lay on Mary's breast,
His hair was like a star.
(O stern and cunning are the kings,
But here the true hearts are.)

The Christ child lay on Mary's heart,
His hair was like a fire.
(O weary, weary is the world,
But here the world's desire.)

The Christ child stood at Mary's knee,
His hair was like a crown,
And all the flowers looked up at him,
And all the stars looked down.

G. K. CHESTERTON.

OUT OF THE SHADOW OF THE NIGHT.

Out of the shadow of the night
I come, led by the starshine bright,
With broken heart to bring to Thee
The fruit of Thine Epiphany,
The gift my fellows send by me,
The myrrh to bed thine agony.
I set it here beneath Thy Feet,
In token of Death's great defeat;
And hail Thee Conqueror in the strife;
And hail Thee Lord of Light and Life.
All hail! All hail the Virgin's Son!
All hail! Thou little helpless One!
All hail! Thou King upon the Tree!
All hail! The Babe on Mary's knee,
The center of all mystery!

PARISH NOTES.

The Sisters expect to open St. Anna's House during this month.

There were one hundred and twenty guests at the turkey supper of the Mothers' Guild.

The Monday night Bible Class of Sunday School teachers will meet monthly hereafter.

Half-yearly rewards were given to the Sunday School after the Children's Mass of Quinquagesima.

The new Sunday School class of St. Joseph of Nazareth has recently been organized, Mr. Paul Fancher, teacher.

All recently confirmed boys and girls will be gathered into two appropriate guilds. There will be a simple rule and regular devotions.

St. Francis of Assisi's class of boys has won the monthly banner for best attendance and increased offering at Sunday School. Miss Brodie is the teacher.

The entire "copy" for the magazine unfortunately went astray in the mails, and has not yet been traced. In consequence, this issue of the magazine has been delayed.

The members of St. Vincent's Guild are planning a match basketball game for Eastertide. The clubroom in the basement has proved popular with the young men of the parish.

Souvenirs of First Holy Communion, and special rewards for the best Diligence Books of Instructions, will be presented after the 9.15 Mass of the first Sunday in Lent.

A match game of basketball went to the St. Agatha's Club, of West Philadelphia, in St. Clement's gymnasium on January 21, but St. Nicholas Guild looks for another story after Easter.

On Tuesday night, February 4, the St. Nicholas boys took part in an indoor athletic carnival. Judges, the Rev. Fr. Quin, and the Messrs. Leon Beaudry, Morris May, and Clinton Jenkins.

There was used for the first time with the white cope at the Solemn Mass of January 12, a golden memorial morse, studded with carbuncles, the design and workmanship by Miss Helen K. Mills.

Although the acoustics of the nave were satisfactory before the restoration, yet they may now be considered extraordinarily good. Not a few of the noblest Church edifices are marred by wretched acoustics.

Marybai, a high-caste Bramin Christian now studying medicine at the Woman's College in preparation for missionary work in India, talked to the members of Holy Cross Guild on January 17. Photographs and miniature utensils added to the interest of her remarks.

The St. Nicholas Guild will continue to meet for a brief instruction in St. John's Chapel at 7.15 every Thursday night before the opening of the gymnasium and the handicraft room. Thus far there has been an average attendance of between forty and fifty boys at these religious instructions. Several boys confirmed in previous years have voluntarily written Diligences at home.

With an enrollment of over seventy boys, and the services of two paid teachers, the Tuesday night division of the St. Nicholas Guild is in immediate need of special donations, which may be sent directly to the treasurer, Miss Eugenie M. Fryer, or to Miss Lea or Miss Brock. Among the recent items of the Guild's equipments are gymnasium shoes and running "togs," bath towels, brass-working materials, and new work benches.

The children of St. Clement's gathered for carols, devotions and a party during the Epiphany Octave instead of on St. John's Day, as originally planned. The religious service was in the chapel. Afterward, in the Hall, there was an amusing program of acrobats, together with a troupe of trained dogs and a baboon. Gifts and candy were distributed to all members of the Sunday School. The tree was beautifully lighted with tiny colored electric bulbs.

On Friday night, January 31, Miss Wightman, a member of this parish, addressed the combined Guilds with a lantern lecture on her Church work in Alaska. During Lent the Guild will make the Stations on Friday nights, but after Easter there will be several lantern lectures in connection with the study of the General History of the Catholic Church. All women, whether Guild members or not, are welcome at the lectures of the Holy Cross Guild.

On Tuesday evening, January 28, the Girls' Friendly Society celebrated the recent marriage of one of its members by a supper in the Parish Hall. The guest of honor was presented with a framed G. F. S. certificate and a silver spoon especially designed. She was afterwards admitted as a Branch helper at the service which followed in the Chapel. Among those present were the Chaplain of the Branch and three members from the "Friendly" of St. Elizabeth's Parish.

The choir boys are rehearsing twice a week, under the direction of the Messrs. John C. Middaugh and Henry S. Fry, for the Camp and Outing Benefit, a musical extravaganza, never before given anywhere, to be sung on April 2, at the Parish Hall of the Church of the Advocate, Eighteenth and Diamond streets. Tickets, at 25 cents, may be secured from any of the choir boys. In addition to the operetta, the program will include music by the Children's Orchestra of the Northwest School, and features by the Dumont Minstrel Quartette, Master Gurney Mattox, Boy Violinist, and others.

Over sixty men attended the opening 1913 smoker-musicale in the gymnasium, on January 2. There were songs and monologues by choir men from Holy Trinity Chapel and St. Clement's, and dances by Mr. Henry Zehn. The principal talk of the evening was by Mr. Roy Smith Wallace (Harvard M. A.), secretary of the Society for the Protection of Children. Mr. Wallace spoke of the conditions which have to do with the cases that are brought to his attention and that of the affiliated bureau. The next smoker will be held soon after Easter. Suggestions for the program will be gratefully received by the rector.

On the evening of January 22 the Diocesan Guild of St. Vincent held its first service in St. Clement's. The Guild office was sung by the Chaplain and a helpful sermon was preached by Father Hughson, O. H. C. At the conclusion of the service the acolytes met for a conference in the Parish Hall, where speeches were made by M. Ernest Linton on the "History of the Guild;" Mr. Wallace Arnold, of St. Mary's, West Philadelphia, on "The Purpose of the Organization;" and Father Hatton, Rector of the Church of the Transfiguration, on "The Spiritual Aspect of the Guild." About one hundred and fifty members were present. The boys of the choir kindly gave their services for the occasion.

THE BISHOP'S VISITATION.

The Bishop of the Diocese made his first official visitation to the parish on Quinquagesima Sunday. On Saturday evening he met the congregation in the Parish Hall for a devotional conference, and there was a corporate communion of the parish at eight o'clock the next morning, with the Bishop as celebrant. A large number made their communions. He addressed the children at ten o'clock in the Church, and at the Solemn Mass blessed the new work in the nave and preached. As the full amount has been raised to pay our indebtedness, the Mass was sung solemnly as a Thanksgiving to Almighty God for His many blessings upon this parish. That so large a sum of money has been given in so short a time is an evidence of the real devotion and self-sacrifice of our people. It will be a satisfaction for all to feel that each one has his share in the preservation of the Church, which holds so firm a place in the affections of the congregation.

In the evening a class of 67 was confirmed, the largest that has been presented in St. Clement's since the year 1889.

THE NECESSITY OF INTERCESSION.

To pray for others is an indispensable duty. It is a very grave part of our self-examination. It is a duty which we were, most of us, taught when we lisped our first prayers. As soon as we were taught to pray, as soon as we knew that there was a God to pray to, and that He heard prayers, we were taught not to pray for ourselves alone.

We cannot be Christians without intercessory prayer. For we should be breaking a primary law of love, which our Lord has given us. He has hedged us in by His prayer which He has given us. We cannot say an "Our Father" without doing it, at least with our lips. We must have emptied our Blessed Lord's prayer of its meaning before we can have ceased intercessory prayer. We ask in it for exactly the same gifts for others as for ourselves.

I fear that there is a very heartless way of saying our Lord's prayer, and so also of many of the common public prayers, which have been framed upon it, that people rather use one prayer in common, each praying for himself in it, than one common prayer, each for all. This is, of course, a great loss, as all unloving things are. For if five hundred people pray together, then, if each time they say "Forgive us our trespasses," or "Give us this day our daily bread," or "Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil," each prays for all those present, under the word "us," then each will have had five hundred prayers for himself; for each, five hundred voices will have gone up to the Throne of God; for each, in whose five hundred prayers, the Holy Ghost will have interceded with those unutterable divine groanings; for each, those intercessions will have been united with the Perpetual Intercession of the Intercessor. And if any one has so prayed, he will have set to his account the love with which he so prayed, whatever others may have done. So that in all intercessory prayer there are these three things: (1) we shall have fulfilled, so far, a duty commanded to us by Jesus; (2) we shall become sharers of the prayers of others; (3) we shall obtain grace for our own act of love; according to that, "my prayer returned into my own bosom." But, however people may evade it in common prayer, it seems hard to think how they can use the Lord's Prayer for themselves alone, when they use it as our Lord bids, in their private devotions. And in the public use of it, we cannot tie it down, even to that particular congregation, with whom we pray. For those great words, which we have to take first into our mouths and hearts, "Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven," are manifestly co-extensive with the whole world. They pray for the extension of the Church, and, which is one, for the conversion of the heathen, of Jews, of Turks, infidels and heretics; they pray for the well-being of the Church, that Christ may indeed reign in the hearts of all those whom He has made members of Himself; that all hindrances to the coming of His Kingdom may be removed; that all may live as they believe; we ourselves lose ourselves in the deep compass of those three notes from the seven-stringed harp which make such beautiful music in the ears of God. We are taken out of ourselves into the society of saints and angels; we are borne along with the interests of Jesus throughout the world. We were taught that His Glory, the fulfilment of His Will, were to be the primary object of our prayer; that the angel-like fulfilment of His Will in each was to occupy our thoughts and prayers, before we asked for anything directly for ourselves; that we were to desire that His Name should be hallowed; that His Kingdom in the heart of men should be expanded and should grow, prior to all besides. His glory, in the fulfilment of His Blessed Will and salvation of mankind, came (we were taught by the very form of prayer which was put into our mouths, as our Lord's own teaching and bequest) before all besides, all of our own, except as we were included in it.

2. But then, too, He not only commandeth intercessory prayer; He takes away the only forcible temptation against it. God's command ought to have been enough to remove temptation. For what He commands, His wisdom will provide for, His Omnipotency will fulfil. Yet the one only temptation, which, in any loving heart, would have any force, is this, our own unworthiness. What are we, that we should ask for such a great thing, as the salvation of a soul, the checking of a sin, the conversion of a soul from Satan to God?

God does not give what we ask for, for our unworthiness, but for the worthiness of Jesus. The Church ends every prayer, "through Jesus Christ our Lord," which is one with the fuller, "for the merits of Jesus Christ our Saviour." And then, too, it is not we alone who pray. "The Spirit also helpeth our infirmities. For we know not what we should pray for as we ought; but the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered. And He that searcheth the hearts knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit, because He maketh intercession for the saints according to God." As then our Lord forbade His Apostles to take thought what they should speak, for "it is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father who speaketh in you," so it may be said of us, in a manner, "It is not ye who pray, but the Spirit of your Father who prayeth in you." We pray, as best we can: we know not what to ask for, as we ought: we pray in broken syllables or timid words or half-formed thoughts; but He who made our hearts, knoweth what the Holy Ghost who prayeth in us meaneth "when He maketh intercession for the saints," and He is heard.

3. Another difficulty, I think, comes to some of us, as if some great effort was necessary to reach God. They think of God, as far away, in the Highest Heavens, in some place where Jesus is, high above all Heavens, and so they go up and up in their thoughts, and they send up their prayers, and they can scarce believe that such prayers as theirs can go up on high. God seems to them as One who had "covered Himself with a cloud, that our prayer should not pass through." And yet prayer has no strain; least of all, of imagination. We pray in the midst of God. For "in Him we live and move and are." His ear is ever near us. It is at our heart. The lowest whisper reaches it. It is open to the faintest velleity of the soul. What a great thing it is which is open to us, and at what small cost! God has laid it upon us as a duty, that we may not give way to sloth or unlovingness or self-deceit under some disguise of conscious unworthiness. It is often a gain, not to be able to help ourselves. It is like being plunged into water out of our depth, that we may learn to swim. We must strike out for our lives, that we sink not. But then there is an Almighty Arm under us. We must do everything badly, in order to learn to do it well.

What have we to do with estimating the value of our prayers? As if we could keep a debtor and creditor account with God, and, if we thought our prayer earnest, then God was bound to do something in return for it; if otherwise, then little or nothing! Prayer is especially the province of faith. From first to last it is inscrutable. It is part of that wondrous harmony, whereby He has bound up our free-will with His own Omnipotence. It is part of that love, whereby he would bind in one the work of the creature with His own Omnipotence! Men stumble at prayer, because they sever what God has united. The Will of God was the God-enabled will of man. What were the will of the highest seraph, that he should change the mind of the Author of all? But does the fire burn less mightily, because God has assigned it the fuel which it should convert into itself? Does the river sweep to the ocean less strongly, because God has appointed the channel for its tide? We are the fuel; the fire is the love of God: we are the channel; the tide is His perpetual flow of grace. Only let us be persuaded, that it is God's voice in us. Only remember we, that our dear Lord has pledged His own Almighty word, "Ask and ye shall receive!" We spoil and defeat our prayers by thinking of ourselves. Apart from the waste of time, in which unknown graces might be won, we are forgetting the All-prevailing Intercession of Christ at God's Right Hand, the Intercession of God the Holy Ghost in us, in the thought of our miserable selves. God's command is, Pray! This is ours: the rest is His. Be we the tiniest wheel in the wondrous compass of the creation, He has assigned us our place. We have no imagination to measure the profuse munificence of our God. Only, since He has said, "Ask and ye shall receive," we know that we cannot ask things according to His Will, without receiving. Every petition, which is put into our mouth is a treasure of grace to us. We have admired the marvelous imagination of Eastern tales, how the touch of a common household instrument at once unlocked all inconceivable treasures of lustrous beauty and wealth. Faint image of the omnipotence of prayer! For it is gifted by God with power over Himself; it unlocked the treasures of His grace and love. The doors of heaven fly open at His word, to receive the penitent stricken soul, or to pour down graces upon us. Every prayer may gain a grace. How differently would the Litany sound in our hearts, if we had more faith in the rich profusion of God's love. As many prayers, as there are, so many graces we might obtain. But our comfort is this: that we must do it. His love and His commands have bound us. Say we the words, "Forgive us our trespasses, lead us not into temptation, deliver us from evil," and leave the rest to Jesus! O that we could, more and more, go forth out of ourselves and go to Jesus! He will not defeat His own end. He will not let His own word fall to the ground. We have done his bidding, in what poor miserable way we could. The Omnipotence of His love will accomplish the rest.

Only, then, do we what we can. God Himself wishes to hear us. He wishes to give, more than we to pray. It is His own plan, which He has given to us, in part, to carry out. It is not for ourselves that we are asking: it is for God. They are His interests more directly than ours, and ours because they are His. He is waiting to be gracious to those souls. He longs to give Himself to them. But it is part of His love, that He would give us inestimable things, even the salvation of souls, on our asking. Our prayers which He will inspire, are part of the plan of His eternal predestination for the souls, for whom He puts it into our heart to pray. We are, in praying, only fulfilling a purpose of His love. It is, as when a king, wishing to forgive a rebel, suggests to one of his friends or trusted advisers, to ask for his life. When God puts it into our hearts to pray, He is admitting us into the near relationship of friends to Him. He might have contrived other ways, but they did not satisfy His love. Nothing would satisfy Him, Who "arranges the services of angels and men in a wonderful order," but to employ His creatures, as far as they could be employed, and associate them with Himself. Think we then nothing of our ourselves. If we could feel but as that organ which peals forth the praises of God, yet yields no note, but as it is attuned and as those notes of joy are elicited from it, then we should indeed pray as God wills, then God would thank us, that we had done what He longed for us to do, and had been the last link in the salvation of the soul which He longed to save.

Set we the value of souls before us, how God, Father, Son and Holy Ghost love them, ourselves included; how sin dishonors God; what a misery it is in His creation; how souls are perishing every day; how they are forever losing God; and how God wills that our prayers should cooperate to their salvation. "Hath He said, and shall He not do it?" He has said, "Ask and ye shall receive; that your joy may be full." "Ask;" so ye shall have part in the Saviour's joy "over each sinner that repenteth," and, in helping to save the soul of others shall the more save our own. So in the heavenly court shall our Saviour say to His friends the Holy Angels, "This and that soul has he and she, and he and she (naming you) won for Me;" so shall we together rejoice before Him, Who redeemed us together, has together called us, hath together given us perseverance to the end, and will together glorify us.

PARISH NOTES.

The second smoker-musicale for men will be held in the gymnasium during Eastertide.

The young men of the parish have played several games of basketball in our gym during the past month.

The Feast of the Annunciation falls this year within the Easter Octave. According to ancient custom it will be transferred to Monday, the 31st of March.

On Wednesday night, February 19, the Stations of the Cross were shown with the magic lantern in the Sunday School Hall. Hymns were sung from the slides.

The sermon at Sunday Evensong on January 26 was delivered by a former Curate of this parish, the Rev. Nelson Kellogg, now Rector of St. John's Church, Poultney, Vt.

On Wednesday, February 26, the Rev. Charles Carroll Quin, observed the thirty-first anniversary of his ordering to the Diaconate, by the Rt. Rev. the Bishop of North Carolina.

The Blessing of the Paschal candle will take place this year on Holy Saturday night after the first Vespers of Easter are sung. The service will thus be restored to its primitive position.

The Rector finds it necessary to speak again of the empty coffers of the Sunday School and the St. Nicholas Guild. Gifts for the S. N. G. had best be sent direct to the Treasurer, Miss Eugenie M. Fryer.

Parents and guardians will please remind children of the Lenten Devotions in the chapel on Friday afternoons at four. Punch cards are used, and at Easter, mementoes will be given all faithful attendants.

The St. Nicholas boys play two teams, junior and senior, from West Philadelphia, in the gym on Tuesday night, April 25. Members of the parish are invited to attend on this occasion, and to visit the Guild at any time.

On February 6 Father Beede addressed a committee of women at St. Mary's Church, West Philadelphia, upon the subject of the St. Clement's Guilds for Young People. The Rev. Fr. Richardson, Rector of St. Mary's, presided.

Communicants are urged to make out their communion cards as usual this year, that the parish list may be corrected. Those who have absented themselves from communion for two years, without a stated cause, are dropped from the parish list.

For the best written Confirmation Diligences, a Pugin Pectoral Crucifix was awarded to Norman Ruark, and to Frank Bowers, Jr., a copy of Abbie Farwell Brown's "Book of Saints and Friendly Beasts." Both boys are members of the choir.

Miss Wightman has recently addressed the Woman's Auxiliary regarding her missionary work in Alaska. The Guild of the Holy Cross has donated the following altar furnishings for use at the mission in Alaska: One missal stand, one pair of altar vases, one pair of brass candlesticks and an altar book.

The Bishop of the Diocese gave a day's retreat to the associates of the Girls' Friendly Society of the Diocese, at St. Clement's Church, on February 11. The Bishop said Mass in the chapel at eight. The hours of meditation were ten, twelve and three. The women also attended the parochial intercession and Evensong. There was a good-sized congregation throughout. Mattox, boy violinist.

After the 9.15 Mass of Quinquagesima, Bishop Rhinelander spoke to the children in St. John's Chapel, and gave them his blessing. Half-yearly Sunday School rewards were distributed. For most faithful attendance at children's Mass, crucifixes to David Coles and Ontamenia Kline. Children's Mass medals were given to Arthur Riley, Raymond Edwards, William Smith, William Crockford, Jessie Smith, Clara Bethel, Irene Fulmer, and Rachel Stokes. For attendance and conduct at classes: Kindergarten—Elsie Edwards, Charles and Clara Bethel; Primary—David Coles, Sarah Siverd; Middle Grammar—Kenneth Haskins, Charlotte Stokes; Highest Grammar—George Stowers, Le Roy Edwards, Hannah Harris; Young Men's Bible Class—Frank Schaeffer. For picture pasting or written work: Primary—William Smith, Ontamenia Kline; Middle Grammar—Robert Ruark, Mary Rothwell; Highest Grammar—Norman Ruark, Mary A. Evans. Banner (to be kept one month) for the most faithful attendance and greatest increase in the weekly offering: St. Francis of Assisi's Class of Boys, Middle Grammar, Miss M. F. Brodie, teacher.

The Rector would recommend the following-named books of spiritual reading to the members of the parish: "Civilization at the Cross Roads," Fr. Figgis; "The Wondrous Passion," F. W. Drake; "The Companion by the Way," W. L. La Trobe-Bateman; "The Path of the Eternal Wisdom," John Cordelier.

Several boys, already confirmed, voluntarily attended instructions for this year's Confirmation and First Holy Communion. Special medals were given to Russell Copestick, Charles Fortune, and Charles Fullerton. Similar medals were also given to boys whose Confirmation was delayed through no fault of their own: Leaman Finnissey, Augustus French, Edward French and Harry Brown.

At the Shrove Tuesday Athletic Carnival of the G. S. N., Miss Brock awarded the All-round Championship Baseball to James McLauchlan, of the choir. Jackknives were presented to Norman Ruark, William McLauchlan, James McLauchlan, and Russell Copestick. Other boys who gained the most points were: Charles Fortune, Arthur Riley, John Couthart, Thomas Behrle, Francis McLauchlan, Harry Livingston, Marshall Watts, and Albert Craft. The judges of the events were the Messrs. Leon Beaudry, Morris May, John C. Middaugh, and Clinton Jenkins.

Those Confirmed on Quinquagesima received First Holy Communion on the following Sunday (Sexagesima), February 9, at seven o'clock. At the close of the 9.15 Mass the Rector gave blessed medals (gold, silver and bronze) to the First Communion boys and girls. The Choirboys' Gold Medal, for most faithful attendance at instructions, went to Arthur Riley, the silver medal to James McLauchlan. Gold and silver medals for boys not in the choir were awarded to Edward Wilson and John Boyle. The girl medallists were Edith Boyle and Mary Rothwell.

Wednesday night, April 2, is the date for the choirboys' benefit, to be held in the Parish Hall of the Church of the Advocate, Eighteenth and Diamond streets. The proceeds of this musical extravaganza (which has never been given anywhere) are to go towards the summer camp or outings of the choir. As the tickets are but twenty-five cents, a great many must be sold if the thirty-five boys are to have the right sort of a vacation. The operetta is being coached by Mr. John C. Middaugh, a former solo boy at St. Clement's, and by our choirmaster and organist, Mr. Henry S. Fry. Besides the extravaganza, the program will include extra features by the Dumont's Minstrel Quartet, Mr. Henry Zane, dancer, the children's orchestra of the Northwest School, and Master Gurney

PARISH SUPPORT.

The fiscal year of the parish ends on Lady Day, March 25, and it is hoped that all who may be in arrears in their weekly envelope pledges will make a special effort to settle their indebtedness prior to that time. During the past year about 225 persons have used the envelopes as their method of contributing towards the support of the parish, but this number should be greatly increased, as it is a small number when compared with the total number of communicants. It is the only regular, systematic way of contributing for parish expenses, and means therefore a certain, definite income that can always be relied on. During the six months when the Church was closed and services were held in the Parish House, the congregations naturally were very much smaller than they would otherwise have been, but during this time, envelope offerings kept up to practically their usual amount. Cash offerings, however, fell off quite considerably, as it was expected they would do, and hence the accounting warden has been unable to pay bills that are long past due.

Now that the money has all been raised for the work done in the nave, it is hoped the members of the parish will contribute as generously as possible towards "current expenses."

Envelopes for the new year will be sent to all who have used them during the year now closing, and others who may be willing to use them during the new year may give their names to the clergy or to the accounting warden, and the latter will see that they are properly supplied.

CONFESSIONS.

The hours of the clergy for Holy Week are as follows:

Father Hutchinson: Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, 10.30 to 11.30 a. m.; Good Friday, 4 to 5 and 7 to 8 p. m.; Easter Even, 10 to 12 m. and 7 to 9 p. m.

The other clergy: Wednesday and Thursday, 4 to 5 p. m.; Good Friday, 3 to 5 and 7 to 8 p. m., and Easter Even 3 to 5 and 7 to 10 p. m.

Persons are urged not to delay their confessions, but to make them as early in Holy Week as possible.

Much confusion might be avoided if penitents would kneel before the confessional they intend to enter. After making a confession, they should go to the front of the Church for their devotions.

They should wait their turn. The time of one person is of no more value than that of another—and selfishness and impatience at such a time is unseemly.

As the time of Christ's Passion approaches, the urgency of His desire for the cross increased. "And they were in the way, going up to Jerusalem, and Jesus was going before them and they were amazed, and they that followed him were afraid." There is no haste in the moments of Christ. There is no shrinking, no delay. With steadfast, resolute acceptance, Jesus fulfills each day the will of His Father. He has waited while word, book and deed have proclaimed the love of God. He has waited while hatred, indifference and sin have closed men's hearts to the appeal of the Divine Holiness. Now the time of waiting is over. He sets His face as a flint toward Jerusalem. For Him there is no ignorance of the issue. Even the disciples stand awed at the dangers; amazed at His courage. Affection and loyalty bid them follow, but they follow in fear. That perfect love has not yet been born in them which casteth out fear. The torment of fear is upon them. But they follow. And fearlessly He goes before.

It is thus that Jesus calls us to-day to go forward and accept suffering. Ever He goes before. We are not alone. He takes us with Him. In His heart there is the joy of victory, the vision of the fruitfulness of His Passion. He would communicate that joy to us and share with us the inspiration of that vision. We may not know all that lies befores us of suffering, of sorrow, and of pain. But He knows. And still He urges forward. Failure, loneliness, bereavement, poverty, sickness, infirmity; who can say what the way of the Passion will be? But if it be companionship with Jesus, who shall say that it does not bring its own mysterious happiness? It is the way of fellowship with the saints, of communion with Christ, the way of conquest, the way of love.—From "The Wondrous Passion."

Of your charity, pray for the repose of the soul of

for many years a faithful communicant of this parish.

Grant unto her, O Lord, eternal rest, and let perpetual light shine upon her. Amen.

"O Christ who holds the open gate,
O Christ who drives the furrow straight,
O Christ, the plough, O Christ, the laughter
Of holy white birds flying after,
Lo, all my heart's field red and torn,
And thou wilt bring the young green corn,
The young green corn divinely springing,
The young green corn forever singing:
And when the field is fresh and fair
Thy blessed feet shall glitter there,
And we will walk the weeded field,
And tell the garden harvest yield.
The corn that makes the holy bread
By which the soul of man is fed,
The holy bread, the food unpriced,
Thy everlasting mercy, Christ."—From "The Everlasting Mercy."

SOME MESSENGERS AND WHERE THEY WENT.

Athens—Rev. John H. Hill, July 14, 1838:

The ideal of Christian womanliness, as taught by Mrs. Hill and her helpers, and its beginnings in the young girls whom they had begun with, roused all right-minded people, so that parents came long distances, bringing their daughters, and leaving them implicitly; the last at this writing was a noted physician from a distant town, bringing his little daughter, Evantha. The "Pay-School" department, thus carried on, amounted to over $1,000 a year; this, and the fact that an English gentleman named Bracebridge had undertaken to rent a house for them, made the financial part easier so far. As a knowledge of ancient Greece was considered the height of a good education, the sensation, then, was great, when at a public examination, one of the girls (who two years ago had not known her letters) opened the exercises by reading the epistle and gospel for the day (in the Greek Church, Feast of Saints Peter and Paul) in the most beautiful manner.

The children, according to the plan, attended the Greek Church, and their religious teaching was upon the lectionaries and proper of these services. But the Hills took Sundays to hold service for foreigners in English, and generally had good congregations.

At 7 a. m. Holy Communion; at 9 a service in Greek with preaching; at 11, service and sermon in English; at 6, the same in Greek; and the first Sunday in the month, Intercessions for Missions, in English.

Crete—Rev. George Benton, August 1, 1838.

The whole house was thronged with children; in the long room 25 by 14 there were 200; the entrance to the house was set out with benches for those who could not be accomodated within. This was the Boys' School; the girls' department was not so large, but as many as could be gotten in there were—about 1,261.

The children themselves were eager; one little girl fainted entirely away the day before the school closed; when questioned, it was learned that she had had nothing but bread to eat for two days, very small pieces, and that she came a long walk to school.

The clergy were friendly, and gave their blessings in the churches, urging the people to send their children; one priest came to ask an explanation of a passage in the O. T., and to beg the loan of a book on the Bible. Mrs. Benton explained that the Turkish influence had led the people to think education useless in the case of the girls, the only object being to settle them as soon as possible. Still, the influence of the girls' department was gaining. The school had no vacation period, but the workers got their rest on the holy days, on which, although the children objected to doing without school, the use of the Greek Church was respected; the days being those of the Greek Kalendar. The school was from eight to eleven, and from two to five.

"By the order of Mahomet Ali, recruits of soldiers for Syria from among the Cretan Greeks have been raised in the island, when the heart-rending cries of their wives and mothers, who followed them to the city, were beyond description. This appears the more cruel when it is known that more than half the crop of olives was lost for want of laborers, and the scarcity of men is such that there are none to till the ground for the next year's crop."

Athens—Rev. J. H. Hill, October 15, 1838:

A new wing was added to the school, and the house and school were full; the Sunday evening prayers and extemporaneous sermon in Greek, delighted those who could attend.

Syria—Rev. J. J. Robertson, October 1, 1838:

Yielding to circumstances, the school of 240 little ones was closed, but about ten days later the school was in part re-opened by the town authorities; the popular feeling was so great, that an effort was hastily made to conciliate the people in this matter; two of the teachers were re-engaged, and the Robertsons let them have the school apparatus at a very low price, and allowed the ancient Greek lessons to be continued at their own home.

Crete—Rev. George Benton, September 28, 1838:

The children were beginning to be missionaries to the older people; they took their books home at night, when the families would gather around to hear them read, and ask them questions. After the Greek services were over, on Sundays, people would gather in little groups around the children, as they came out of church, and hear them explain the Christian Year and Sacramental teachings, in the simple language which they had learned during the week.

Syra—Rev. Dr. Robertson, January 22, 1839.

Dr. Robertson distributed much reading matter, and decided that it was best to do this gratuitously; soldiers begged for them to read while on duty; priests liked the "Harmony;" the quarantine stations rejoiced in books; and the master of a packet-boat asked for a supply for his crew.

Dr. Robertson used the Sundays and holy days in visiting along shore on British men-o'-war, and in the hospital. He had been able to sell most of his printing and binding outfit at pretty good terms, and expected to stay at Syra till March.

The Church of England, being able to extend its work here, will take over the mission schools shortly; meanwhile, the local government will keep up the system after a fashion.

Crete—Rev. George Benton, December 27, 1838:

A very pretty and gratifying present was made to Mrs. Benton by some of the older girls; they met secretly and prepared an address of appreciation, which one of their number read at the public exercises on Christmas Day. It was so unexpected, and so well done, that the good lady was almost overcome.

Athens—Rev. J. J. Hill, August 10, 1839.

Two of their girls had been appointed to take charge of government schools for girls. Their examination was conducted by the Director of Public Schools, and some of the professors—the professor of Theology, for one. A third girl had gone to a town where her brother was government public teacher, and she was to have a girls' department, in connection with his work.

The Queen of Greece made them a visit, attended by two ladies, one of whom was a daughter of the famous Marco Bozzaris.

Crete—Rev. George Benton, August 1, 1839.

"In the school are three destined certainly for the ministry in the Greek Church, and some others who look forward to that holy profession. The Latin scholars begin to make progress in translating from that tongue into the modern Greek. And the Deacon of the Greek Church in this city has begun the study of Hebrew with great zeal. . . . Even such beginnings, though small, may serve to break the chain of ignorance which holds the Greek priesthood. They are, in this island at least, a class of people who know nothing beyond the mere chanting of the various part of the Church service."

Athens—Rev. J. J. Hill, October 29, 1839.

"All the objects which we thought it desirable to bring within the scope of our mission have been attained; and we have now reached a point, beyond which we do not think possible to advance without some risk of losing by attempting too much. Our duty in future will be to hold our ground . . . The primary object of the mission to the Greeks should never be lost sight of—the spiritual renovation of our Mother Church. . . . This cannot be accomplished until there is an enlightened clergy. . . . But where are such to be found? Nowhere, except among the pupils of the mission schools. Boys who entered the infant schools, when they were old enough to enter the gymnasia, were then lost sight of, just at the most critical age; . . . the work among the girls has progressed so that now anxious parents are feeling that their boys have not the same opportunities! Would not an institution, understood to be for those who were studying for the ministry, be a long step in Christian Unity between the East and the West? . . . The true feeling of the Greeks, with all their ignorance, for the reality of Religion, are shown by the fate of Theophilus of Andros, once head of the College of Haivali, in Asia Minor. . . .

PARISH NOTES.

The Rector's Tuesday afternoon class has been discontinued.

The Paschal candle was decorated this year by Miss Edna Hagert.

The Choir Camp Benefit in Advocate Hall, Eighteenth and Diamond streets, takes place on April 2d. A report of the entertainment will be given in the May issue.

At 7.45 P. M. of Tuesday in Easter week a double-header basketball match was played in the Gym. by St. Agatha's Juniors and Seniors vs. the St. Nicholas Junior and Senior teams of the Parish.

At 3 P. M. on Easter Day the rector sang Vespers for the children, and gave small bronze crucifixes, of a new design worked out by the Cowley Fathers, to the most faithful attendants at the Friday devotions during Lent.

The Tuesday night classes of the St. Nicholas Guild will come to an end on April 29th, when there will be an exhibition of brass work and gymnasium sports, with prizes offered by the managers. Miss Eugenie M. Fryer is treasurer.

After the game, chocolate Easter eggs were presented by the lady managers of the S. N. G. to all boys who have been faithful in attendance during the last half year. About forty eggs were distributed, each egg decorated with the name of the fortunate boy.

Two banners, one for the boys, the other for the girls, are awarded each Sunday to the classes that show the best attendance and the greatest proportionate increase in alms. On Passion Sunday there was the largest offering which the books show for the last two years. The banner for the girls has been donated by our faithful secretary, Mr. Richard Ashhurst.

On Wednesday night, April 16th, in the Gym. there will be held the second smoker-musicale of the series for men. The Papy Brothers will play on the piano, violin and mandolin, and W. A. Nightingale will give an illustrated lantern lecture on "Panama, Old and New." The January smoker was decidedly a success, and it is hoped that a still larger number of men will come to the Eastertide affair.

The nave was filled to the utmost, with persons standing, for the Blessing of Palms and Solemn Mass of March 16th. It is interesting to recall that the ceremonies of the Blessing contain an Epistle, Gospel and Sanctus in addition to those sung later in the Mass. In the old days the palms were blessed in the course of a Mass said in a church outside the city walls. The procession then took its way to a city church, where a second Mass was offered.

The Rev. Father Robert E. Wood, of Ichang, China, spent Holy Week and Easter Day with us. Father Wood, who is on a six months' furlough, is a member of the Society of Oblates of Mt. Calvary, in association with the Order of the Holy Cross, and an old friend of the clergy of this Parish. He has long been saying his prayers for the establishment of a men's religious community, to work in China. He hopes to return to his trade-school for beggar boys in company with several recently ordained clergy, who will cast in their lot with him.

In the effort to prevent one of the most heartbreaking features of all parochial life, the lapsing of the confirmed, two new Guilds have been organized for children who have recently made their First Holy Communion. The rule is of the simplest character, and is nothing more than what is enjoined upon any Catholic lay person. The boys' group is known as the Guild of the Most Precious Blood; the girls' group is called the Guild of the Blessed Guest. Cards have been given to the members to sign and return to the clergy. From time to time a brief service of devotion will be held in preparation for an important festival.

Following are the scores of basketball games played in the Gym. by the young men of the Parish: February 15, St. Clement's 45, U. G. I. 24; February 22, St. Clement's 21, Cathedral 27; February 26, St. Clement's 26, St. Clement's Reserves 33; March 1, St. Clements 39, Travelers 30; March 6, St. Clement's 26, Twenty-ninth Street 25; March 12, St. Clement's 21, Winola 19. A challenge has been received from the Y. M. C. A.

The game on March 6th with the team from the Northwest Association was anybody's contest until the last minute, when Mullen's grand field goal gave St. Clement's the victory by one point. This was by far the most exciting match that has been played in our Gym. The clergy have been present at all of the games.

St. Clement's line up: Forwards, A. Johnson and Kraft; center, H. Johnson; guards, Mullen and Nolan.

THE OFFERING FOR MISSIONS.

On Sunday, April 6th, the second Sunday after Easter, we will make our annual offering for the mission work of the Church.

St. Clement's Parish is called upon, under the apportionment plan that has been adopted as the best means of raising funds necessary to carry on the work of the Church in the foreign and domestic fields, to contribute the sum of $3,473.28 as its share, during the fiscal year of the Board of Missions that ends on September 1st.

The amount sent by this Parish to the treasurer of the Board since September 1st, 1912, is about $400, hence we still have a large sum to raise if we are to meet our apportionment.

To very many the amount will seem far too great, and perhaps even beyond the range of possibility this year, especially when we realize the fact that it has been necessary for us to spend nearly $2,500 on necessary repairs to our own church building, but we should ask ourselves one question, namely, is it not our duty, the duty of each member of the Parish, to do his or her part in furthering the Mission work of the Church?

We believe in Missions, no man or woman, bearing the name of Christian can do otherwise than hold a belief in Missions, for the whole Ministry of our Lord was distinctly a "Missionary" Ministry, and His last commission to His Apostles was to bid them go to the uttermost parts of the earth, and preach the Gospel, the Gospel of the Incarnation.

All, therefore, who are trying to follow His steps, who bear the name of Christian, thereby professing their faith in Him, must take their part in the work of extending His Kingdom.

To many persons the Apportionment System does not appeal: it seems but an assessment that ought to be met, but to which they object.

But as the Bishop of the Diocese said in a recent issue of the Church News: "The Apportionment is not a menace, but a means. . . . Make the money side of the Apportionment entirely subordinate. Treat it in terms of spirit—straightway the menace is turned into a means."

Let us, therefore, each member of the Parish, do our utmost to see that our apportionment is met, each one giving of his or her means as the Lord has prospered us. If we do this we will not only lighten the hearts of those who attend to the details of Missionary activities, but we will be doing our simple duty, and above and beyond all else, we will be doing His will.

The following schedule that has been prepared by a member of the parish may be of interest.

If	15 persons give	$60 a year,	$900
If	25 persons give	25 a year,	625
If	50 persons give	15 a year,	750
If	150 persons give	12 a year,	1,800
240			$4,075

HOLY WEEK AND EASTER.

There was a noticeably good attendance at all the Masses and devotions of Holy Week. The Rev. Fr. Robert E. Wood, of Ichang, China, gave the address that preceded the making of the Stations Good Friday night. At 8 P. M. of Holy Sabbath a number of persons accompanied the priests and acolytes from St. John's Chapel to the sanctuary of the High Altar for the blessing of the Paschal candle.

Four hundred and twenty-seven persons communicated on Easter day, as follows: Mass at 6, 56; 7, 230; 8, 129; 9.15, 12. The offerings amounted to $872. For the current expenses $1,200 are required at this time.

The preacher at Solemn Evensong of Easter day was the Rev. Fr. Seyzinger, of the Community of the Resurrection, Mirfield, England.

ST. CLEMENT'S PARISH.

Easter Monday, March 24.

The following twelve Vestrymen were elected under the new charter to serve as follows:

Mr. Francis D. Wetherill, Mr. G. Theodore Roberts, Mr. Francis M. Berry, and Mr. George H. Lea, for three years, or till Easter-tide, 1916.

Mr. S. McKean Bayard, Mr. Clinton Rogers Woodruff, Mr. Caleb F. Wright, and Mr. George Lewis Mayer, for two years, or till Easter-tide, 1915.

Mr. W. W. Lukens, Mr. Stevenson H. Walsh, Mr. Edward A. Casey, and Mr. J. Lawrence Wetherill, for one year, or till Easter-tide, 1914.

On Easter Monday night the meeting of the Vestry was held in the clergy house. Mr. F. D. Wetherill was appointed Rector's Warden, Mr. S. McKean Bayard was elected Accounting Warden, and Mr. Caleb F. Wright was elected Secretary of the Vestry.

Messrs. Lea, Mayer and Bayard were elected delegates to the Diocesan Convention.

THE PASCHAL CANDLE, AND OTHER "PILLARS OF WAX."

The word candle (candela, from candeo, to burn) was introduced into the English language as an ecclesiastical term, probably as early as the eighth century. It was known in classical times, and denoted any kind of taper in which a wick, not uncommonly made of a strip of papyrus, was encased in wax or animal fat. We need not shrink from admitting that candles, like incense and lustral water, were commonly employed in pagan worship and in the rites paid to the dead. But the Church from a very early period took them into her service, just as she adopted many other things indifferent in themselves, which seemed proper to enhance the splendor of religious ceremonial. We must not forget that most of these adjuncts to religious worship, like music, lights, perfumes, ablutions, floral decorations, canopies, fans, screens, bells, vestments, etc., were not identified with any idolatrous cult in particular; they were common to almost all cults. They are, in fact, part of the natural language of mystical expression, and such things belong quite as much to secular ceremonial as they do to religion.

The salute of an assigned number of guns, a tribute which is paid by a warship to the flag of a foreign power, is just as much or as little worthy to be described as superstitious as the display of an assigned number of candles upon the altar at High Mass. The carrying of tapers figures among the marks of respect prescribed to be shown to the highest dignitaries of the Roman Empire in the "Notitia Dignitatum Imperii." It is highly probable that the candles which were borne from a very early period before the Pope or the Bishop when he went in procession to the sanctuary, or which attended the transport of the book of the Gospels to the ambo or pulpit from which the Deacon read, were nothing more than an adaptation of this secular practice.

The use of a multitude of candles and lamps was undoubtedly a prominent feature of the celebration of the Easter vigil, dating, we may believe, almost from Apostolic times. Eusebius speaks of the "pillars of wax" with which Constantine transformed night into day, and Prudentius and other authors have left eloquent descriptions of the brilliants within the churches. Neither was the use of candles in the basilicas confined to those hours at which artificial light was necessary. Not to speak of the decree of the Spanish council at Elvira (c. 200), which seems to condemn as an abuse some superstitious burning of candles during the daytime in cemeteries, we know that the heretic Vigilantius towards the close of the same century made it a reproach against the orthodox that while the sun was still shining they lighted great piles of candles (moles cereorum accendi jaciunt), and Jerome in answer declared that the candles were lighted when the Gospel was read, not indeed to put darkness to flight, but as a sign of joy.

This remark, and the close associations of lighted candles with the baptismal ceremony, which took place on Easter eve, and which no doubt occasioned the description of that sacrament as illumination, shows that the Christian symbolism of blessed candles was already making itself felt at that early date. This conclusion is further confirmed by the language of the Exultet, still used in our day on Holy Saturday for the blessing of the Paschal candle. It is highly probable that St. Jerome himself composed such a praeconium paschale, and in this the idea of the supposed virginity of bees is insisted on, and the wax is therefore regarded as typifying in a most appropriate way the flesh of Jesus Christ born of a Virgin Mother. From this has sprung the further conception that the wick symbolizes more particularly the soul of Jesus Christ, and the flame the Divinity which absorbs and dominates both. Thus the great Paschal candle represents Christ, "the true light," and the smaller candles are typical of each individual Christian who strives to reproduce Christ in his life. This symbolism we may say is still accepted in the Church at large.

Besides the use at baptism and at funerals, we learn from the so-called Fourth Council of Carthage (really a Synod held in Southern Gaul, c. 514), that in conferring the minor order of acolyte, the candidate had delivered to him "a candle-stick with a candle." The usage is observed to the present day. Such candles as these when carried by acolytes were constantly used in the Western ceremonial from the seventh century, and probably still earlier. These candles were placed upon the pavement of the sanctuary, and not until much later upon the altars. Still the practice of setting candles upon the table of the altar itself seems to be somewhat older than the twelfth century. As the Roman pontiff, according to the "Ordines," was preceded by seven acolytes carrying candles, and as these candles at a later period were placed upon the altar and no longer upon the pavement, it is a tempting hypothesis to identify the six altar candle-sticks of an ordinary High Mass (there are seven when the Bishop of the Diocese pontificates), with the acolytes' candle-sticks of the "Ordines."

The lighting of six candles is now customary for every High Mass, four at every Missa Cantata, or for the private Mass of a Bishop, on festivals, and two for all other Masses. Still a certain freedom is left of lighting more candles on occasions of solemnity. Six candles should also be lighted at Vespers and Lauds when the Office is sung on great feasts, but on less solemn occasions two or four suffice. Custom also prescribes that two acolytes should walk at the head of the procession to the sanctuary, and these two candles are also carried to do honor to the chanting of the Gospel at High Mass, as well as to the singing of the little chapter and the collects at Vespers, etc.

As regards material, the candles used for liturgical purposes should be of beeswax. This is adhered to on account probably of its symbolic reference to the flesh of Christ, as already explained.

As a rule the color of candles should be white, though gilded and painted candles are permitted under certain restrictions. In Masses for the dead, however, and in Holy Week, yellow or unbleached wax is used. It is also fitting that the candles for liturgical purposes should be blessed, but this is not prescribed as of obligation.

Candles were, and are, sometimes used to burn before shrines toward which the faithful wish to show special devotion. The candle burning its life out before a statue is no doubt felt in some ill-defined way to be symbolical of prayer and sacrifice. Curious mediæval practice was that of offering at any favored shrine a candle or a number of candles equaling in measurement the height of the person for whom some favor was asked. This was called "measuring to" such or such a saint. The practice can be traced back to St. Radegund (d. 587), and later right through the Middle Ages. It was especially common in England and the North of France in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries. There are many other uses of candles, e. g., in the service of Tenebræ, in the hands of the dying, at First Communion, etc.—Adapted from the Rev. Herbert Thurston.

THE BLESSED MOTHER.

Her Virgin eyes saw God incarnate born,
When she to Bethl'em came that happy morn;
How high her raptures then began to swell,
None but her own omniscient Son can tell.

As Eve, when she her fontal sin reviewed,
Wept for herself and all she should include,
Blest Mary with man's Saviour in embrace
Joyed for herself and for all human race.

All Saints are by her Son's dear influence blest,
She kept the very Fountain at her breast;
The Son adored and nursed by the sweet Maid
A thousandfold of love for love repaid.

Heaven with transcendent joys her entrance graced,
Next to his throne her Son his Mother placed;
And here below, now she's of heaven possest,
All generations are to call her blest.

BISHOP T. KEN.

SOME MESSENGERS AND WHERE THEY WENT.

Crete—Rev. Benton, February Number of S. O. M., 1841.

(There is need of prayer that God will continue to bless this work, now reverting to the government of the Sultan.)

One of the new pupils was the niece of a Greek priest, who said at first, "I hated you, but now I pray for you always in my heart."

SPIRIT OF MISSIONS, February, 1842. Points in common with the Greek Church: It differs from the Roman in allowing the free use of the Holy Scriptures, the marriage of the clergy, and Communion in both kinds to the laity; and the Greek Church is in opposition to the Papacy.

Mrs. Benton, December 23, 1840: "You will have learned . . . that Crete has been disturbed by an insurrection, which at one time threatened to be very serious, but through the interposition of the English and French commanders of those vessels stationed here, the insurgents have all left the island. . . . this has crippled our school; the panic was so great that it dwindled down to about thirty-two."

Athens—Rev. J. H. Hill, December 31, 1841:

Dr. Hill's anxiety not to miss his home Christmas led him to take an unusual and rather amusing way of escaping the fourteen days' quarantine which his steamer would have, as she hailed from Alexandria. At Syra, instead of boarding the steamer, which would have brought him under quarantine, he arranged with the captain for a tow, saying that the ancient Greeks used to travel all over the sea in rowboats, and he was not afraid to try it. He stowed his baggage carefully into the boat, and took a few men to manage the steering and balance, so that the wake of the steamer should not upset them. The captain was much interested, and in a true Christmas spirit, reduced the speed of the vessel at starting, so as not to have too strong a wake. Dr. Hill said it was a lovely trip, a beautiful night, and at daybreak they were off the Piræus, coming in nine hours; they cast off the ropes, and rowed up to the wharf on December 22, meeting a joyful, if bewildered welcome!

If our readers have followed the foregoing chronicle of our mission in Greece, and its ever-growing hold on the hearts and souls of the people, they will appreciate the keen anxiety with which the Hills entered on the final chapter of their life-work. A quarter of a century they had toiled among these people, helping them to understand and gain by their Catholic heritage, rescuing their daughters from the degrading social influence of the Turks, giving back to them the Word of God, so long a sealed book.

Twenty years went by, in hardship, and poverty, and obscurity. Then came great popularity and success, which, as always, roused jealousy.

In October of 1842, the Spirit of Missions published a full account of the trouble which Mrs. Hill had to face alone, during Dr. Hill's absence. No good work can succeed without raising up enemies, so the Mission School at Athens became the subject of bitter attack from an Athenian paper called The Aion (The Age), which got hold of letters from Mrs. Hill, published in American Church papers, and inserted them in their columns, with gross mistranslations and alterations, under the heading, "Religion Insensibly Undermined." The only result was to raise a storm of indigation, and finally the Synod appointed a commission of five leading clergymen, none of them by the Hill's request, including their personal friends, who took the ground that The Age, in objecting to the presence of leading Greek clergy at the Mission School commencements, was attacking the Synod. After an exciting series of trials, the editor of The Age was sentenced, on three different charges, to imprisonment for thirty, forty, and sixty days; and the paper was to be stopped for those periods, or bonds furnished to the amount of five thousand drachmas.

Mrs. Hill kept bravely on with her work, but was exhausted by the physical and mental strain, and was obliged to give up the work of the boarding department for girls, and retire to the country for a while.

But meanwhile the uprising in Crete had deprived one of the church-workers there of her position; not being able to await the outcome, she came to Athens, and obtained a position in one of the government schools there, they being very cordial to an American missionary teacher. So Mrs. Hill's pupils were transferred for the most part to this Government School, where Miss Watson took a great interest in them—was the assistant principal. Here are printed letters from the Department of Religion and Public Instruction, signed by the Secretary of State, and letters from the parents of some of the scholars.

This last says, "we offer you a tribute of thanks which the whole country owes you, for you were the first who gave us a model of education and suitable training for the female sex, beginning your system even from the infant years."

PARISH NOTES.

The collection on Ascension Day will be applied as usual for the Summer Outing Fund.

The Church will be open as usual for intercession on the Rogation Days from 6 A. M. until 9 P. M.

As the feast of SS. Simon and Jude coincides this year with Ascension Day, the former will be transferred to May 2d.

The annual meeting of St. Saviour's Ward of the Confraternity of the Blessed Sacrament will be held on Wednesday, May 21, immediately after Evensong.

On the Feast of Corpus Christi, the annual service of the Confraternity of the Blessed Sacrament will be held at St. Clement's. Solemn Mass will be sung at eleven o'clock, followed by a Conference and Luncheon in the Parish Hall. The Rev. Fr. Burnett of St. Ignatius Church, New York City, is expected to preach at eleven o'clock.

A very successful "Smoker" was held in the Parish building on the evening of April 16. An illustrated lecture on Panama was delivered by Mr. W. A. Nightingale, and after the lecture a musical programme was given in the Gymnasium. The Messrs. Papy gave several selections for piano, violin and mandolin. Mr. Kraft sang and Mr. Riley entertained the men with a Victor talking machine.

There are many using the weekly envelopes who seem entirely to disregard the monthly envelopes for Missions. There are also many in the Parish who do not use the weekly envelopes at all. This means that many are not contributing regularly to the support of the Parish, and many are selfishly unconcerned as to whether or not any souls but their own have a knowledge of the Christian Faith, or the privilege of the Church's Sacraments.

On Tuesday evening, April 15, the parish of The Transfiguration, West Philadelphia, entertained the Guild of St. Vincent of the Diocese of Pennsylvania. There was a service in the Church, at which the Guild office was sung with Fr. Hatton as officiant, and a very helpful sermon was preached by Fr. Townsend, of Rosemont. A letter was read from the Bishop of the Diocese, regretting his inability to be present, and containing some sound words for the edification of the Acolytes. After the service, refreshments were served in the Parish Hall, and the evening passed very pleasantly.

THE DEATH OF FATHER DAVENPORT.

Word has been sent to us of the death of the Rev. John M. Davenport on Monday, March 10th, at the home of his sister in Parkstone, England. He was buried on March 13th.

Father Davenport was at one time Rector of St. Clement's Parish for a little more than a year, having come from the Church of St. John Baptist, St. John, N. B., to which he returned at the end of his Philadelphia ministry.

In 1900 he accepted a call to St. Thomas' Church, Toronto, and was also Chaplain to the Sisters of St. John the Divine, the pioneer Canadian Sisterhood. Later he returned to England, where he became Rector of St. Clement's Church, Bournemouth, which he held until the illness which caused his death forced him to resign.

There are many of our people who will remember him before the altar. May he rest in peace.

THE CHOIR CAMP BENEFIT.

The thirty-seven choir boys worked hard over their Camp Benefit Operetta, which they sang on April 2d, to an audience that filled the Advocate Parish Hall, 18th and Diamond streets. But as the tickets sold for only twenty-five cents, it is not surprising that the profits did not go beyond fifty dollars.

The boys did well with the singing of their extravaganza, considering that most of them had never gone in for such a thing before. There were seven solo parts. All were well received.

Three of our Acolytes, the Messrs. Alfred and Harry Johnson, and Leon Kraft, all of whom were once in the choir, made a decided hit with their minstrel sketch. Master Gurney Mattox showed himself a violinist of promise.

Special thanks are due to the Rev. Henry M. Medary for permitting the boys to use his Parish Hall, which is fitted with all stage requisites; to Mr. Andrew M. Strang, son of a former choirmaster at St. Clement's, for bringing the Children's Orchestra of sixteen players; and most of all, to Mr. John C. Middaugh, a one-time choir boy of the Parish. Mr. Middaugh has directed the rehearsals from the beginning.

FATHER STANTON OF ST. ALBAN'S.

With the passing of Father Stanton one of the noblest figures of modern times is lost to the Church of England. In the history of the Anglican Communion during the past century, there has been no more heroic life. Persecuted and spoken against for many years, Father Stanton lived out his life humbly and devoutly, content to be for fifty years the curate of a London Parish, neither seeking nor desiring preferment; content if he were able to say his mass and preach the word of God. He was a man quite fearless in voicing his convictions, a preacher of rare ability, and endowed with a personality that drew all hearts to him.

The account of his burial as we read it in a recent number of the Church Times is most wonderful. Through the most crowded thoroughfares of the great city, the choir and clergy escorted the body to the grave, with smoking censers and Crucifix going before, while silent crowds stood bareheaded or knelt reverently as the coffin passed. All sorts and conditions of men honored him at his death, and countless souls in the English Church owe their salvation to his unceasing care and loving shepherding. May he rest in peace.

The account rendered by the Pennsylvania Company for Insurances on Lives and Granting Annuities Trustees of the Endowment Fund of this parish, shows that on March 1, 1913, the date of the report, the value of the securities in which the fund is invested, together with the uninvested balance, was $28,617.98.

Under the terms of the deed of trust the amount of income payable to the parish was as shown in the statement of General Account, $235.72.

BOUDINOT FUND.

This fund was left the parish by Mrs. Elizabeth Coleman Boudinot, deceased, for the erection and endowment of a Lady Chapel, and consists of cash and securities to the amount of $41,000. Plans for the chapel are in course of preparation.

INSURANCE.

During the past year a considerable amount of fire insurance on the church properties ran out, being held in term policies. It was therefore necessary to renew it, and after the work on the nave was completed, new sound values on all the properties were obtained, and several adjustments and increases made in the amount of insurance carried.

At the present time the property has on it the following insurance:

Church building	$85.000 00
Parish house	37,500.00
Clergy house	15,500.00
Church and parish house, contents....	22,800.00
Organ	8,000.00
	$168,800.00

Of the amount of insurance carried on the church building $56 500.00 is in the form of perpetual policies, $5,000.00 of the parish house insurance is in perpetual policies and the entire amount carried on the clergy house is in perpetual policies.

S. McKEAN BAYARD,
Accounting Warden.

E. & O. E., April 3d, 1913.

We do hereby certify that we have examined the above report for the year ending March 25, 1913, have compared vouchers with records of payments made, have examined the assets and find the report to be correct as above set forth.

Persons desiring pews or sittings are requested to apply to the Accounting Warden after eleven o'clock Mass, on Sundays, or communicate with him at his office in the Clergy House.

PARISH NOTES.

The friends of the late Bishop Coleman, of Delaware, are asked to assist in purchasing a Crucifix to be hung in the Coleman Clergy House, Rehoboth Beach.

The pointing of the Church walls is at last completed, and the appearance of the building greatly improved. The removal of the vines has added much to the dignity of the exterior.

We will print in another column a letter from our good friend Father Convers. There may be some persons in the Parish who may desire to contribute toward the memorial for Father Davenport.

After the first Sunday in June the 8 o'clock mass on Sundays will be omitted until the autumn, and the 7.30 mass on weekdays will be discontinued. The Litany usually said at noon on Fridays will also be omitted.

A series of illustrated lectures on Church History and kindred topics have been given under the auspices of Holy Cross Guild on Friday evenings in the Parish Hall. It is suggested that this be made a permanent feature of the Parish life next winter.

On Whitsun Eve., Saturday, May 10, at 11 a. m., in St. John's Chapel, the Guild of the Most Precious Blood and the Guild of the Blessed Guest (Confirmed boys and girls under seventeen years of age), met for their first devotions. Rev Father Harvey, officer, G. H C., gave an instruction on the Guild Rule of Monthly Confession.

THE DIOCESAN CONVENTION.

The Annual Convention of the Diocese was held on the 6th, 7th and 8th of May in the Church of St. Luke and the Epiphany. Little was accomplished beyond the routine work of the Convention. On the first day of the session the rules of order were suspended to permit Mr. Francis Lewis to introduce a resolution memorializing the General Convention and expressing the opinion of the Diocese that a "Change in the name of the Church is inexpedient at this time."

After an amendment was added, which made it quite clear that the Diocese was in no sense instructing its delegates as to how they shall vote when the matter is brought up in New York next October, the resolution was passed without serious opposition. With the general tenor of the resolution we are in sympathy. The change in the Church's legal title, if it comes at all, should not be made the occasion of dissension and party bitterness. For many years the American Church has been able to win souls to Christ and to uphold its claim to be an integral part of Catholic Christendom. This it will continue to do so by whatever name it may be called. The stirring up of party spirit not only robs us of our Christian charity but seriously retards the work of the Church. We regret that certain members of our Diocese have thought otherwise. It remains for those who believe in the fulness of their Catholic heritage to show that in "quietness and confidence" lies their strength, and so to manifest the Spirit of Christ that they may "convince the gainsayers."

A MEMORIAL TO FATHER DAVENPORT.

42 Paradise Row, S. John, N. B.
May 12, 1913.

Rev. and Dear Brother: I do not know how far any of your people at St. Clement's care to help us in our effort to get a reredos of carved wood in the Mission Church here as a memorial to Rev. John Metcalf Davenport. It is rather an ambitious plan for us and we shall be glad to have those who cared for him join forces with us. I do not know just how to bring the matter to the notice of St. Clement's congregation except by writing you. Most of those who were my own friends and allies in St. Clement's have died before this. But should you see fit to let the congregation know of our plan we shall be glad to have the help of their sympathy and prayers. So far we have $179 on hand and $260 pledged. For us $439 is a large sum, however small it may seem to you.

Faithfully Yours,
D. Convers.

THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY.

St. Clement's branch of the Woman's Auxiliary has discontinued its meetings until October.

During the winter a good deal has been accomplished and much interest taken in the work. Boxes have been sent to Kentucky, Kansas, Tennessee and Alaska. Also a contribution to a box for Africa, the total valuation being $499.45.

Three hundred and eighty-eight dollars in money was also given, $105 of which counted in the apportionment.

When the work is resumed in the autumn it is earnestly hoped that every woman in the Parish will take an interest and come to the meetings. If such could be the case we could have a splendid organization and the results would be far-reaching.

THE CHOIR CAMP

Through their own efforts, our choirboys have got together about fifty-nine dollars toward the expenses of a week's camping on August first. Twenty or twenty-five of the thirty-five boys will be able to go—providing that subscriptions come in at once. Five or six dollars per week per boy is required. A number of the Philadelphia parishes send their boys to camp. There are several choir camp bungalows which are used by various choirs in succession. One hundred dollars would place our own camp on a sure footing. Checks should be made payable to the Rector.

THE SATURDAY GUILDS

The Saturday morning classes, including girls and boys of the Holy Child and St. Nicholas Guilds, ended the Easter term on May 17th. A number of parents and associates came to see the excellent showing of work: Basketry, sewing, embroidery, hammocks, baseballs, beadwork, kindergarten designs, etc., and, most noteworthy, the products by the group of boy cooks. So attractive indeed were the tea-biscuits and cakes that the audience was restrained with difficulty from taking souvenirs. It is reported, on good authority, that one young chef has been giving lessons to his mother in the art of apple sauce. On two Saturdays of each month the children have had guild offices with instructions in the chapel. Prize winners are as follows:

Conduct: John Coulthard, Kenneth Haskins, Ontamenia Kline. Attendance: Kenneth Haskins, Charles Fortune, David Fairbanks, Ontamenia Kline, Elsie Edwards. Work—Hammock-Making: Charles Fortune. Baseball: Joseph Llewellyn. Cooking School: John Coulthard. Sewing Class: Ruth Popp. Beadwork: Louise Stokes. Raffia Work: Janet Rothwell. Kindergarten: Alice Fairbanks.

G. S. N. CLOSING CARNIVAL

The boys' Guild of St. Nicholas held its final athletics and brasswork exhibit on Tuesday night, April 29th. The attendance was the largest of the year. A number of grown-up relatives and friends were present, beside the Rev. Fathers Quin and Beede. The Committee on Awards: Miss Fryer, Miss Sarah Brock, Miss Lea. Field Officials: the Messrs. J. Clement Cloherty, U. of P. Director of the gym. classes, Charles Decker, John C. Middaugh, John Kelly, Alfred M. Cody, Sr. and William H. Francis.

The athletic events included: High hurdles, obstacle race, three-legged race, rope-climbing, blindfold boxing, regular boxing, catch-as-catch-can wrestling, and a pyramid of boys.

Prizes were awarded solely on the basis of the most points gained in the various events. Thus, a first place gave a gold star, a second place a red star, and a third place a green star. The results were as follows:

1. All 'Round Champion, Norman Ruark, Chorister, age 13.
2. George Stowers, Chorister, age 13.
3. Alfred Cody, Jr., age 12.
4. Edward Wilson, Chorister, age 12, won on a tie with Franklin Francis, chorister, age 15.
5. James Crawford, Chorister, age 13.
6. Russell Copestick, age 13.
7. Tie between Thomas Behrle, Chorister, age 12, and Augustus French, Chorister, age 10.

The brasswork exhibit brought out a good deal of deserved enthusiasm on the part of the judges and visitors. Much credit is due to the instructor, Mr. Morris May, who had for his task the training of boys of all sizes and ages and varying ability. The contestants were ranked as follows:

1. William J. Brown, Chorister, age 13, octagonal lampshade in a pattern of butterflies.
2. Lloyd Engle, Chorister, age 13 jewel box.
3. Kenneth Haskins, Chorister, age 12, jewel box in both brasswork and pyrography.
4. Weir Darrah, Chorister, age 13, octagonal lampshade.
5. Charles Fortune, Chorister, age 13, octagonal lampshade.

Special Mention: John Griffiths, Chorister, age 12, for inventing and constructing a steam ship in brass.

The class also showed soap-dishes, blotter-corners, sconces and glove boxes. All boys were permitted to keep their work.

The Tuesday and Saturday divisions of the G. S. N. have comprised about 95 boys. One of the most gratifying achievements of the organization has been the taking of a weekly shower bath (mostly cold) by a large majority of the members, despite the universal parental tradition that this form of exercise is a perilous undertaking not to be compared with the warm and gentle domestic washtub.

Throughout the meetings the rule has been maintained that members must attend Mass at St. Clement's every Sunday, and that Roman Catholic boys will not be accepted save through a written letter of transfer from the parish priest. Thus far the rector has not received communications of this character.

All bills are paid, but there is so small a balance in the treasury that contributions will be gratefully received at this time by Miss Eugenie M. Fryer, Treasurer G. S. N., The Warwick, 19th and Sansom Sts., Phila.

EJACULATORY PRAYERS.

At a recent meeting of the District Assembly of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, the subject of "Ejaculatory Prayer" was discussed, the subject having been introduced by one whose early days were spent in Ireland, where the peasantry, belonging most of them to the Roman Catholic Church, indulged continually in this practice. This subject was before the Milwaukee Convention, a report of the same appearing on page sixty-six of the Milwaukee Convention number of the St. Andrew's Cross. The following ejaculatory prayers will be found helpful:

Going Out. O send out Thy light and Thy truth, that they may lead me.

Going to Church. Lord, I have loved the habitation of Thy house.

At Work. Labor is sweet, for Thou hast toiled.

Thinking. O let not mine heart be inclined to any evil thing.

Talking. Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth.

Actions of the Day. Let me not be occupied in ungodly works with the men that work wickedness.

In Doubt. Teach me, O Lord, to do the the thing that pleases Thee.

Tempted. Lord, Jesus, save me, help me, keep me.

After a Sin. God be merciful to me, a sinner.

Sorrow or Loss. Thy will be done. Blessed be the Name of the Lord.

When the Clock Strikes. Lord teach me to number my days.—Los Angeles Churchman.

SOME MESSENGERS AND WHERE THEY WENT.

Crete: S. O. M., August 1843. "The Committee unanimously recommend the discontinuance of this mission. No communication has been received from Mr. Benton for more than two years, but authentic information conveyed to the committee, does not present sufficiently encouraging prospects of the usefulness of this mission to justify its continuance."

Athens: July 31, 1843, Rev. J. H. Hill. When the Hills returned from their absence, after Mrs. Hill's sickness, they found that a number of small pay-schools had been started, on their lines, with their old pupils. Athens having now learned to care for the children of its wealthier people, the Hills reverted to their original plan of 1836—to work ardently among the poor only. They still controlled the work of education, being reverenced and sought in many ways, but felt their recent troubles had been providential in sorting out that was urgent from that which was now the clear duty of others.

Spirit of Missions, August, 1844, report of the Foreign Committee: " . . . Recommended the gradual reduction and ultimate relinquishment of this Mission, in the hope that the community of Athens (which has made a very considerable advance in its intellectual, moral and financial condition) would, upon its discontinuance retain there an institution . . . The committee has made a reduction of $1,250, and proposed to make an annual reduction of $750, at which rate the school would cease to be part of our Mission work in five years."

Crete: Mr. Benton reached New York on June 1, 1844.

Athens: October, 1844. The Spirit of Missions published a perfect sheaf of letters from prominent people interested in the Mission, or visitors of it; they contended that as the boys of Greece were its future men, and the training of them devolved upon their mothers till they were past fourteen, it was very important that the girls of Greece should have every chance; the pay-schools could not cover the situation; the Hills, who had had about 750 in their free and pay-schools together, now were overwhelmed with work, when the poor saw that there was more room for them; that now the Mission, working among the daughters of the poor and degraded, had over 700 on its roll.

The Board then reconsidered its action, and sent word to that effect; Mrs. Hill's letter of joy and thankfulness is touching.

September 22, 1844: "To-day we assembled the children for the first time on Sunday since the vacation. After arranging the different classes and appointing each teacher to her charge, old Mari came and said that there was a Bishop waiting in the porch who wished to visit the school . . . . . He was a stranger to me, and was accompanied by a priest and deacon. . . . . Eryena had the children who could not read on the gallery and was asking the questions on the lesson they had learned. It was part of the first chapter of St. John. As the Bishop approached the gallery, the question was asked, 'To whom was the law given?' to which the children answered, 'Moses,' and when it was asked, 'From whence have we grace and truth?' the answer was 'Through JESUS CHRIST.' Eryena continued her questions, 'Hath any man seen GOD?' The answer was 'No.' 'Who hath declared Him to us?' The children onswered, 'The Only-Begotten Son, Who dwelleth in the bosom of the Father.' The Bishop bowed his head, and his face expressed his approbation. The other classes were then brought in, at least two hundred were present, all of them repeated the Creed, after which dismissal, with prayer, and singing of their hymn to the Trinity.

My visitor announced himself as the Bishop of Achaia, lately of Sparta, one of the members of the Synod. He said it was his intention to send for his niece and place her with us."

Athens: Miss Muir, September 24th, 1870.

A sort of summer school was held during the vacation, and the children came early, brought their lunch, and were happy all day. Once we took them on an excursion to the Piraeus, and as many of them had never been in a railway car in their lives, this was a great day.

Many more Jews are attending this year.

Dr. Hill takes charge of the teachers' Bible Class. The Sunday school is held at his house.

January 19, 1871. A remarkable movement sprang up among the Greek clergy of Athens, and one of their number wrote to Dr. Hill, seeming to feel that it was a personal matter to him. He sent the letter in full to the Board. One of the Judges of the Court of Appeals, feeling that the instruction in the Scriptures ought to be everyday work, and was properly the work of the clergy, realized how helpless the Greek clergy were in this matter; agitating the subject, the discussions that followed resulted most unexpectedly in two Associations:

(1.) All the secular clergy in Athens and in the suburbs formed an association, first, for the establishment of Sunday schools; second, the improvement of the secular clergy of the Greek Church in religious knowledge, and in spirituality of life. They determined to hold regular meetings, to study, and help each other to prepare for work in their schools.

Mrs. Hill further wrote about this, and said that the meetings were held weekly at the house of a layman of education who had devoted himself to this matter. What they study at that meeting they teach the children in Church on the following Sunday afternoon. The Mission rejoiced and co-operated at once. Christmas time was drawing near and a copy of the Christmas lesson was given to the meeting. The next Sunday, in one of the parish churches, the priest spoke of the prophecies of Christ's birth. A little girl from the mission was present, and she piped up with a prophecy from Isaiah, repeated word for word. The priest paused astonished, gave her his blessing and asked her mother about the work of the Mission.

From among these holy and humble men of GOD is coming forth a preacher of rare gift, who speaks as if under immediate divine inspiration; at one preaching service this Rev. Latas spoke unweariedly for nearly two hours, the congregation listening breathlessly, on the existence of God, coming to a climax in a sublime description of this truth as it appeared to him when reading Apocalypse.

Standard of the Cross, August, 1871.

"Our venerable missionaries, Rev. Dr.

Hill and Mrs. Hill have retired from active service, residing at Athens, and helping in every way. Miss Marion Muir is head of the Mission Schools, with twelve teachers.

"The Jubilee of the Domestic and Foreign Society was celebrated on October 12, 1871. The Presiding Bishop Smith, of Kentucky, opened with an address; his presence and leadership were fitting the occasion, as he was Secretary of the Society when the Greek Mission was begun. He was followed by Bishop Bedell, because it was in his father's house that the Greek Mission was first discussed—at this time he was to present Revs. Drs. Robertson and Hill as the oldest Foreign Missionaries.

"In Bishop Bedell's address he mentioned the four fields which had been opened during these fifty years: (1) Greece, (2) West Africa, (3) China, and (4) Hayti. But he chose to dwell upon the mission to Greece.

"It was founded . . . . in my father's house in Philadelphia . . . . in these latter days men have forgotten in some respects the principles upon which the Mission was founded.

"The intense interest that encompassed the subject of Greece at that time can hardly be understood now. Our own political freedom was not a thing of the past, and the War of 1812, which confirmed it, was an experience with many of that generation. You must remember, in thinking of those days, that news did not travel as it does now by telegraph, nor cross the ocean by steam; nor was the newspaper laid at every man's door before breakfast. Consequently events made a deeper impression. And as the news of the cruelty of the Turks and the awful struggle of our brethren in the Christian faith against Moslem oppression gradually and slowly reached the hearts of our people, there was response of agonizing sympathy.

"I was a boy then, but, though a boy, I can remember it distinctly. I remember when my beloved father preached before the Common Council of Philadelphia, at their request, on that subject, how intense was the interest; there was not a place left unoccupied, and I, as a boy, was lifted up and put into the pulpit, standing close to my father, and feeling the throbbing of his heart. I shall never forget it.

". . . . . The Battle of Navarine had taken place; that grand victory had opened the certainty of peace; peace was secured, but it had not been attained. Greece was not yet placed among the free nations of the earth. The first movement was to send out on a mission of inquiry among us as the Rev. Dr. Robertson, and he is here to-day. I beg him to rise—the oldest Foreign Missionary of our beloved Church. (Dr. Robertson arose.)

". . . . He reported favorably. Then, in 1831, the Rev. Dr. Robertson and his family and the Rev. Dr. Hill and Mrs. Hill were appointed on the Mission; and I now ask that my venerable friend, the Rev. Dr. Hill will present himself, in order that the congregation may see one who has labored for the Church for over forty years. (The Rev. Dr. Hill arose.) These friends went out to Greece. They were not permitted to land first at Athens, for it was still in the hands of the Turks. They landed first on the classical ground of Tenos, where they spent six months preparing themselves for the work. . . . . There was not a habitable house in Athens, ... The Turks had left nothing standing. They found under the Acropolis an old, ruined Italian tower. A portion of that they managed to fit up. The missionaries steadily labored amid doubt and misconception and discouragement until the Church at home learned what the Greeks had known all along, that the labors of the Hills were a blessing which could not be estimated.

"SPIRIT OF MISSIONS, August, 1882. 'DEATH OF A FORMER MISSIONARY.'

"The following cable dispatch, dated Athens, July 1st, was received at the Mission Rooms, on the ninth of this month:

"Dr. Hill at rest.

"THE REV. JOHN HENRY HILL, D. D., LL. D., after experience in secular life, was, upon his ordination, appointed by the Board of Missions under the first regime, in June, 1830, to accompany the Rev. Dr. Robertson as Missionary to Greece. The party . . . sailed from Boston on the second of October of that year.

"Dr. Hill served uninterruptedly till May, 1869, when he handed in his resignation, to take effect six months from that date . . . . in view of his advanced age and that of Mrs. Hill. He spent the remainder of his days in Athens, the scene of his life-work.

"Dr. Hill was in the ninety-first year of his age.

". . . . . It is proper to say that the labors of Dr. Hill were not confined to the schools. He and others connected with the Mission have given time to the translation of devotional and other books into modern Greek, and in 1845 he was appointed Chaplain to the British Legation, and officiated on Sundays in the English

PARISH NOTES.

Four new hymn boards are to be placed in the Church, filling a long-felt need.

A new Bible has been purchased for use on the lectern in the Church.

The Vestry has been able to provide from the Yarnall Fund an additional scholarship at St. Stephen's, and also at Kent School.

At the commencement exercises of St. Stephen's College, the honorary degree of Master of Arts was conferred upon the Rev. C. C. Quin.

After July first the eight o'clock service on Sundays will be discontinued and Evensong will be read in St. John's Chapel at five o'clock.

The amount at present in hand for the Choir Outing Fund is $77.80. If more is not in hand by July first the scheme of the camp will be abandoned and the boys taken on a day's trip to some suitable place.

The Yarnall Library of Theology is at last an accomplished fact at the Divinity School. A suitable bookplate, designed by the Rev. H. M. Medary, has been provided by the Board of Management, and a number of volumes have been purchased.

THE MISSIONARY APPORTIONMENT.

St. Clement's has fallen far behind this year in its contribution to the Missionary Apportionment. While one realizes that this was perhaps inevitable in view of the unusual expenses incurred in making necessary repairs, it is perhaps as well to remind the congregation of this unfulfilled obligation.

Perhaps it would enable many to have a clearer conception of the whole matter if a few words of explanation were given concerning the system under which the various parishes are assessed.

The Board of Missions in New York sends each year to the various Dioceses the amount that it desires each to contribute toward the Mission work of the Church, both foreign and domestic. This Diocesan assessment is put into the hands of a special committee and is apportioned among the parishes, each one being asked to give an amount based upon a certain percentage of its current expenses. Parishes the size of St. Clement's are assessed 30 per cent. on the yearly expenditure. Formerly the committee was given discretionary power to ask for less in the case of certain congregations. In consequence St. Clement's has never been asked until this year to make up the full amount. As this discretionary power caused some difficulty in certain quarters, the committee were instructed by the Diocesan Convention to make the appropriation strictly according to the fixed rule and to make no exception. Consequently the sum asked of St. Clement's this year is $3,400. We have not yet given one-third of that amount, but we have until September first to meet our obligation. It is hoped that some of the parish may be moved to make a special offering before that time so that we may give as much as possible of the amount asked of us.

This raises the whole question as to the best plan to follow in raising our apportionment each year. Heretofore we have depended upon a yearly offering, and some have used the "monthly envelopes." This seems not to be the best or most satisfactory way of accomplishing our purpose. It is not easy for some to give any considerable amount at a specified time and consequently the missionary collection is not adequate. There are comparatively few who use the envelopes. It would doubtless be a better plan to adopt the system used in so many parishes, viz., the "Duplex Envelope." This is a form of the weekly envelope system. The usual weekly envelope is divided into two compartments, one of which is used for contributions toward the parish expenses, and the other for contributions for missions. Each person using the envelopes thus gives regularly and systematically to both parish and missionary objects. If this plan were carried out in St. Clement's a committee would be appointed to canvass the parish and to endeavor to place the envelopes in the hands of every communicant. It is a matter that is worthy of serious consideration, and one which would enable us to do away with the yearly missionary collection. In parishes where the Duplex system is in use we hear of increased offerings for both parish and missions.

In the meantime can we not do something more toward meeting our apportionment before September?

ST. MARGARET'S DAY (JULY 20).

The name Margaret signifies a pearl, that exquisite gem of pale, pure lustre, held in highest esteem in antiquity as now, as an object of luxury, and for which almost incredible sums have been given. Herein lies the especial point in our Lord's choice of the pearl for the subject of the short parable in which He sets forth the surpassing value of that which the merchantman sought. The name in its French form, Marguerite, is, however, better known to us by its association with the little lowly flower, with golden heart and crimson-tipped rays, which, for the sake of her humility, became the especial symbol of Margaret of Cortona—Chaucer's Day's Eye, "of all flouris the floure."

In England, Margaret became one of the most popular Christian names for women, partly, however, from the honor paid to St. Margaret of Scotland, the saintly Queen of Malcolm Canmore, the first personage of distinction in Europe who bore it. The name was subsequently borne by other celebrated women, of greater or less saintliness, such as Margaret, the Maid of Norway; Margaret of Provence, Queen of St. Louis; Margaret Beaufort, the munificent Patron of Oxford and Cambridge; Margaret, Queen of Navarre, called La Marguerite des Marguerites, and Margaret Roper, the favorite daughter of Sir Thomas More.

On the festival of St. Margaret of Antioch, our thoughts are naturally drawn to the "One pearl of great price," with which our Lord's parable has made us so familiar. If by the pearl the soul be understood, then the merchantman is Christ, Who emptied Himself of His glory, that He might find and purchase the soul for Himself. If the Pearl is Christ, then the soul is the merchantman seeking goodly pearls. And, indeed, Christ is the "One Pearl of great price," for which the soul yearns. There are many "goodly pearls" in the world—worthy and noble aims in their limited spheres. And some have set these aims before them as the object of life. To relieve the sick, to comfort the bereaved, to help the needy, to clothe the naked, to educate the young, to raise humanity above the low level of mere animal existence, to promote the welfare of the people, to support philanthropic institutions, to restrain the oppressor, to cause justice to be impartially done between man and man, to stimulate noble actions and heroic deeds for the sake of others—these are indeed the "goodly pearls" of a Christian world; but oh! how comparatively valueless, when contrasted with the incomparable value of the "One Pearl of great price," Jesus Christ, the Emancipator of humanity, the Renewer of human nature, the Imparter of righteousness, the Hope of the living, the Joy of the blessed dead, the Light, the Saviour of the world. "Lord, Thou hast made us for Thee, and our heart is disquited till it resteth in Thee." (St. Augustine.) And the soul, too, is the "one pearl of great price." Created by more than that act of will by which God created all other things; created immediately by God, and individually, one by one, not mediately, as now the living creatures, nor multitudinously, as all other creatures in the first recorded exercise of Divine creative power; inbreathed by God with the Breath of Life; formed in His Image, His Likeness; made like unto Him in all those Divine attributes, which are communicable to the creature; immaterial and spiritual; deathless and eternal; endowed with the splendor of Free Will; capable of growth; infused with sanctifying grace; dowered with all virtues, moral and theological; made righteous; created to contain God Himself; the supreme object of God's creative Love; member of Christ's Body, of His Flesh, and of His Bones; partaker of the Divine nature; redeemed by the Cross and Passion of God's dear Son; recreated by the power of the Holy Spirit; restored by the co-operating Love of the Most Holy Trinity; guarded by Angels; destined to see God forever face to face, and to know Him as He is—such is the "One Pearl of great price," which the Divine Merchantman came to seek. Alas! for the defects, self-caused, which diminish the beauty of the soul, and may lead to its final rejection. Alas! for the hue of sin, the irregularity and roughness, like the dusky tinge and unshapely flaws which mar the roundness and the smoothness of the natural pearl. All pearls, indeed, are not of the same magnitude, the same form, the same polish, the same lustre. Just so, each Saintly soul has its own characteristic quality and difference. In one it is benevolence; in another patience; in another meekness; in another zeal; in another yearning pity over human misery; in another gentleness; in another spiritual insight; in another devotion; in another activity; in another contemplation; but there is one quality which it is never lacking in, for it is of the essence of the Saintly soul—the pure lustre of Love. So was it with all the Saintly Margarets, whose memories we treasure; so must it be with us, if we would be His, Who came down from Heaven to seek, to find, and, with His own most Precious Blood, to purchase our souls for His own.

—Rev. G. Bayfield Roberts.

SOME MESSENGERS AND WHERE THEY WENT.

Although Dr. Hill had refused to receive decorations which had been conferred upon him, because he was an American citizen, by special decision of the Government, at the funeral, it was placed on the coffin—the honors of a Taxiarch of the Order of the Saviour.

The grave was lined with flowers gathered and brought by a great crowd of young women, honoring the man who uplifted them. One of the daily papers of Athens says:

"By his excellent and sensible management and teaching he acquired the love and reverence of all men; and although belonging to another form of religion, to which he steadfastly adhered, none the less he was most faithful to the Greek religion, making not the slightest attempt at proselytism. On this account many of the Greek priests mourned sincerely and accompanied the procession to the grave."

(This tribute, with much more, was from The Age, which once persecuted Dr. Hill so persistently.)

A. D. CYRIACUS, Professor in the University, made an address at the grave, in which he said:

". . . . . Dr. Hill revered the Eastern Church by reason of its antiquity and for preserving the traditions of the Christian Church through the first centuries, and he believed that, though wanting in certain respects, it was possible by educating the people and the clergy to furnish from her own inexhaustible springs what was needed for her."

THE GREATEST POWER IN THE WORLD.

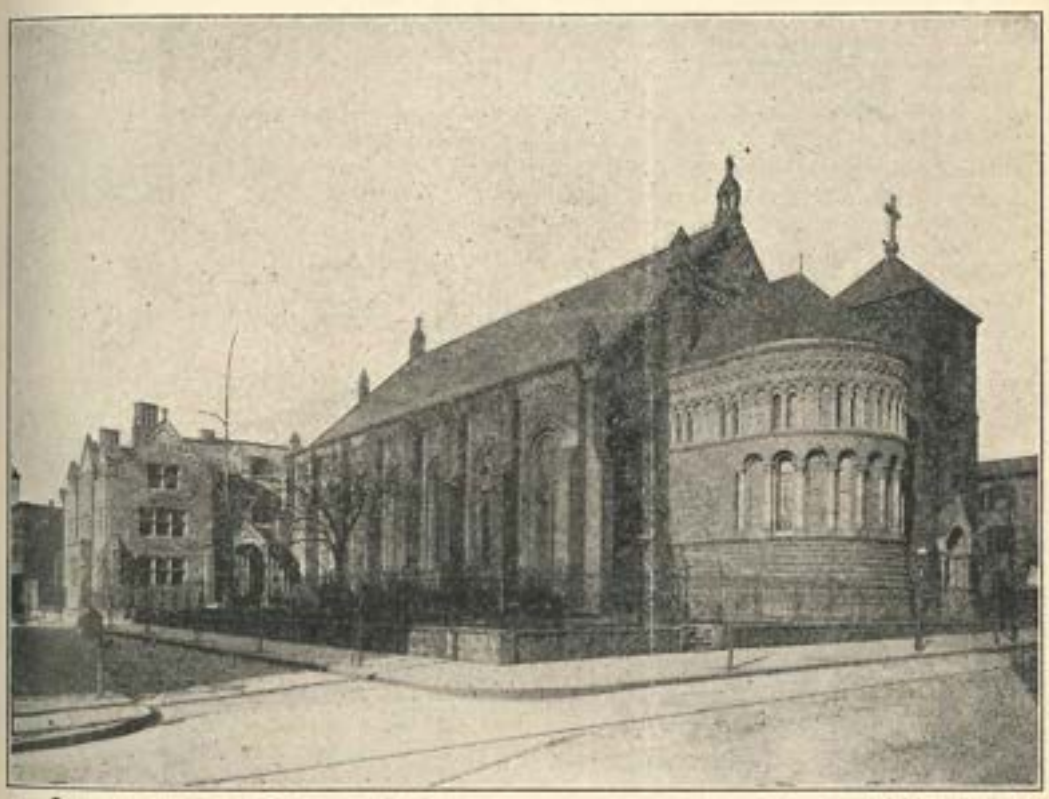
"Ye have not because ye ask not. Ye ask and receive not because ye ask amiss." S. James iv. 2, 3.

There is an old tradition which tells us that the writer of these words "used to enter into the temple alone, and was frequently found there kneeling on his knees, and asking forgiveness for the people; so that his knees grew hard like camel's knees, because he was ever on them worshiping God and asking forgiveness for the people." The form in which this tradition has come down to us is somewhat untrustworthy. Yet the tradition may well have been founded upon fact, and it is reasonable to believe that S. James was in a marked degree a man of prayer. We have no need of uncertain evidence to tell us this was the case. We have only to turn to his Epistle, and to read his own words in order to see that he knew, as few men know, the meaning of prayer. Most men when they discuss the subject speak as it were from the outside. They suggest, sometimes with some subtlety, arguments for or against the efficacy of prayer. S. James speaks from the inside, with a simplicity and force that comes from finding what it can do not by hearsay, but by personal experience. He speaks of what he knows. He uses no long words, nor brilliant arguments, but he is plain and practical.

Take for example the words which I have selected for my text. "Ye have not because ye ask not." There was a time when men asked God for whatever they needed. Read the Psalms and there you will find men telling God everything, laying their lives bare, pouring out—as they would have said—their hearts before Him. They did not keep their wishes and their hopes to themselves. They brought them to Him. Aye, and they brought to Him the darker side of their lives also—their doubts, their fears, their loneliness. And if at times they despaired, it was to God and not to man that they confided their despair.

How many of us pour out our hearts before God? How many of us think it worth while to tell him our ambitions, what we should wish to do and be in life? How many of us take our difficulties to Him and tell Him how at times we are inclined to doubt whether He exists or not, how still oftener we are tempted to be quite indifferent to the question? I have known men to pray for spiritual blessings, and yet think it unnecessary to pray for such blessings as health, success, influence. I have known others, who in conversation will express hard thoughts concerning God, who will question His Justice and affection. And yet they think it irreverent to tell their thoughts to Him who alone can understand and explain them. And what is the result? What comes of not asking for what we need? Simply this. We have not because we ask not. We do not ask God for help in the common routine of life, in our work, in our pleasure, in our leisure time; and therefore we have it not. We do not tell Him our doubts, and ask Him to explain them; and therefore we have no explanation.

"Ask and ye shall receive." The man who asks the most, honors God most. It is no sign of irreverence to pick out certain matters, which we think it possible to make subjects of prayer. It is a sign of reverence to act upon His command, to tell Him all that lies before us, all that we think we may need, all that we want to be, all that we are anxious to do, and then to leave it in His hands, knowing that He sees further than we do, certain that He will answer when and how He sees best.



At no period of life is it too late to learn to pray, but it is easier now than it will ever be again. Day by day as we grow older, it becomes harder to learn fresh habits. The younger we are the greater power of forming habits which will follow us through life. A good habit is more slowly learned than an evil one, but when once learned it has a stronger —a more iron—grasp upon the man. If you will only persist in spite of difficulties, if you will only compel yourself to pray, if you will make yourself think of what you are saying, if, when you fail, you will quietly recall your thoughts and begin again the time will come—and it will not be long coming—when you will naturally, almost instinctively make everything a matter of prayer. But even that is not enough. We have not simlpy to pray. There is a right and wrong way of praying. And if you pray in the wrong way you will not have what you ask. Ye ask and have not because ye ask wrongly. Do you say, "But how shall I know whether I am asking rightly or wrongly?" S. James answers your question in his next words. Ye ask wrongly that ye may spend it on your pleasures. The only wrong kind of prayer is selfish prayer, and that prayer cannot be answered. God has no private blessings to bestow upon favorites, and He does not hear us while we are thinking of ourselves alone. "After this manner"—and any other manner is a wrong manner—"pray ye;" not "give me my bread! forgive me my sins; deliver me from evil;" but "Give us our bread; forgive us our sins; deliver us from evil." Would you gain the bare necessities of life—the daily bread? Others need it. Pray for them as well. Are you in need of forgiveness? Our brother is also. Pray for him. Do you seek deliverance from the power of evil? Remember those who are fighting by your side in the same battle.

Thus we have not simply to learn the habit of prayer, but also a habit of unselfish prayer. This, I need hardly say is no easy matter. But it is easier now than it ever will be again. For in our life here, God is giving us a great opportunity of learning this lesson—of learning to understand and to pray for one another. If we neglect or despise it, the same opportunity will never recur. If we use it, however imperfectly, if we do our best to train ourselves to pray for those with whom we are brought into contact, to pray for our friends and for those whom we do not naturally care for, we shall by degrees come to pray thus naturally, spontaneously, constantly. It is worth while making any sacrifice to attain this end, for prayer is the greatest power in the world. Here we can dimly see its power.

Later on when the day arises and the mists are gone, when we see things as they are in the clearer light of the eternal world, we shall find that he has served his day and generation best, who has spent most time in prayer.—From "The Sympathy of God" by Forbes Robinson.

A PARISH MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

A man has little interest in that of which he knows little. A person's missionary zeal may be measured, usually, by his knowledge of the subject. We may urge people to generosity, and endeavor to stir sluggish consciences, but if we are unable to create an interest born of intelligent knowledge, the generosity will be forced and the conscience half awake.

It is the purpose of the rector to start again in the autumn, the Missionary Society which was in existence while "the Fathers" were in charge of the parish. There will be little in the way of organization, and all parishioners will be considered members of the society. Meetings will probably be held one evening of each month in the parish hall, and a speaker secured who will represent some special work in the mission field. It is hoped that by this method an enthusiastic interest may be aroused.

It is evident that the success of such an undertaking depends very largely upon the cordial co-operation of the people. It is hardly to be doubted that in this, as in all other ventures, the rector will be supported by St. Clement's people, and that the men and women of the parish will do all in their power to further the undertaking, both by their attendance at the meetings and by endeavoring to bring others. One night in the month is surely not too much to ask a faithful churchman to devote to the interests of the Kingdom of God.

The date of the first meeting and the name of the speaker will be announced in a later issue of the Magazine.

PARISH NOTES.

Father Quin will be in charge of the parish during the summer, and will take a further holiday in September. Father Reede will be absent during August.

The crucifix, purchased by several parishioners as a memorial to Bishop Coleman, has been hung in the Clergy House at Rehoboth Beach, Del., and is much admired by those in charge.

It was a disappointment to the boys that after their efforts in the winter, the Choir Outing Fund proved insufficient to send them to a summer camp. They will be taken for an outing by Mr. Fry, however, the date of which has not yet been determined.

On the 15th of September, the Rev. William C. Patterson is expected to enter into residence as a permanent member of the staff of clergy. Mr. Patterson is at present curate of Trinity Church, Wilmington, Del., and was ordained to the priesthood in June. We are sure that the congregation will give him a most cordial welcome.

CEREMONIAL WORSHIP IN THE ENGLISH CHURCH.

The Catholic Revival dates from 1833; the restoration of Ceremonial began twenty years later. The last eighty years have witnessed the free development of principles which had never died out. In the eighteenth century they had been struggling for bare existence, amid diverse and desperate perils. The dogmas, the traditions, the usages of Catholic Christianity had all but perished out of the Church of England. Her candle-stick had gone very near to being removed. Yet, through all that time, even in its darkest and deadest hours, God "left not Himself without witness." His prophets were hidden in the cave, and no Catholic doctrine was ever left, even for a season without its believers and upholders in the English Church. The leaders of the Oxford movement brought these things which had been buried in holes and corners, into the light of day, called public attention to them, vaunted of them, bade men recognize that they were no modern growths, nor morbid accretions, nor obsolete antiquities, but the pith and marrow of the Church's life. This was the special work of the years 1833-53.

Then came a new stage in the movement; and it was the stage which for convenience sake we must call Ritualistic. Speaking more fully, we must say that, very gradually, the men whose duty it was to teach Catholic doctrine to popular congregations found it expedient, and even necessary, to express that doctrine in acts and things, as well as in words. It is an interesting study to trace that development in detail. The leaders of the Oxford movement had nothing to do with it. They were fully occupied with the history, theology or philosophy of the faith, and they had no time to spare for external forms.

It was the second generation of the movement, and the men who were called to the pastoral work rather than to study, that first tried to restore the visible beauty of worship. Far back in the forties there were scattered attempts to mark the dignity of the Holy Eucharist by a special garb, and about the year 1850 the Eucharistic vesture was here and there restored in full. There was no playing at ceremonial, no passion for man—millinery and "solemn foppery," as the enemy politely said; but simply a desire to show forth the greatness of the Eucharist as the manifestation of our crucified, risen and ascended Lord. "This," said Dr. Pusey in 1866, "is from its very center a lay movement. The clergy have taught it (the Faith) the people, and the people have asked it of the clergy. We taught it them; they felt it to be true, and they said, 'Set it before our eyes.'"

It is true that some of the restorers of Ritual rather obscured what they meant to teach by insisting on symbolic meanings in everything they wore, used or did. Every article of the celebrant's dress was made to mean something. The eastward position was held to teach the Eucharistic Sacrifice, and the "north end" to deny it. Lighted candles on the altar proclaimed the Lord's presence, and seven lamps before it typified "the seven Spirits of God." With regard to incense, Dr. Pusey wrote: "I do not know that censing persons or things has anything to do with the Real Presence." * * * But when this tendency to attribute significance to trifles was avoided and Ritual was used, like the high priest's vesture in the Tabernacle, "for glory and for beauty," it told its tale and worked its way. Everything which tended to make the service of the Eucharist more glorious and more distinctive taught, as no words could ever teach, the central truth of the Sacred Presence. "Heaven itself seemed to have opened, and One fairer than the fairest of the Angelic Hosts to have come down to earth."

Such was the Genesis of Ritualism.

* * * * * *

"Ritual," said Mr. Gladstone, "is the clothing which, in some form and in some degree, men naturally and inevitably give to the performance of the public duties of religion." The "form" and "degree" of Ritual as revived in the Church of England, were extremely various, and chiefly because those who were attempting to revive it had no authoritative guidance. But study and patience gradually brought to light what had been so long concealed. As the labors of the architects had discovered the hidden beauties of the sacred fabrics, obscured by stucco and upholstery, so the labor of liturgiologists discerned the ancient and glorious service of the Church of England, embedded in the directions, allusions and historical setting of the Prayer Book, but long concealed by the uncomely accretions of Puritanism.

These various causes have combined to produce the external aspect of the English Church as it is to-day. It must be admitted that this aspect is highly variegated. In some quarters the hideousness of Puritanism still survives; in others, it is difficult to tell at a glance whether one is taking part in the English or the Roman liturgy. But in the great majority of churches called "ritualistic," the statuesque dignity which is characteristic of the English use, the clear enunciation of the English words, and the loyal fidelity and the "prescript order" of the Prayer Book, tell the worshiper at once that he is in an English Church. * * * Even amid the confusions and perplexities, which must beset an age of reconstruction, the Church of England presents a type of divine worship which may fairly rank among the glories of Christendom.—From S. Alban the Martyr Holborn, by G. W. E. Russell.

ANECDOTES OF FATHER STANTON

Many are the stories told of Father Stanton, for his intense spirituality gave him a joyous outlook upon life that allowed free play to the powerful sense of humor that was part of his many-sided personality, and, indeed, made it possible for him to say things which in other men would have seemed to border on the irreverent.

He once accepted an invitation to preach at a musical festival held in a great church, and in the vestry before the service a dignitary remarked to him, "Well, Father Stanton, I hope you are not going to say anything very outré." Of course, that set him off all at once. "Oh, no," he replied, "I am only going to point out that I expect we were all provided with long noses so that we can the better sing Gregorians."

This was how he once drove home the evil of inducing people to come to church for what they can get. He said: "There are religious institutions for poor, sick people, and those who run them, when they have got the sick people in bed, say 'Now's the time to get hold of 'em.' I should say 'Now's the time to let 'em alone.'"

Then he told the story of a St. Alban's boy who was given a ticket to enable him to stay at an institution for three weeks, but after three days he ran away. Father Stanton met him and said, "What's the matter, isn't the food good?" The boy said, "Yes, the food's good." "Aren't the beds comfortable?" "Yes, they're all right." "Is the air all right?" "Yes." "Well, then, what's the matter?" "Oh," said the boy, "they make you go to church every day." "But, surely you might have put up with that." "Psh, they'd 'ave made me a parson in three weeks."

At the same time he gave another instance of a woman who, after coming back from a stay in an institution, was asked, "Did you go to Holy Communion?" "Yes," she said. "I did." "But why, you never went before?" "Oh," she answered, "they wanted me to, and the food was so good."

When a boy in the parish called to see him at the clergy house on one occasion, Father Stanton told the maid to say that he was too tired to see any more boys that day. What followed is best told in the Father's own words: "She told the boy I was tired and could not see him, and I heard him say, 'That's a nice message to send a boy in the parish. You tell him I want to see him spiritual.' So, of course, I put on my biretta and came downstairs. When I got down the stairs the boy said, 'Father, that's a nice message to send to a pore boy in the parish—to go away because you are tired. I want to see you private. I don't want to see you out in this 'all, where everybody can 'ear our business. Mayn't we talk somewhere quiet?' So I said, 'Come into the dining room,' and took him there, prepared for fearful revelations and spiritual difficulties, naturally! And he said, 'Father, you ain't got such a thing as a pair of trousers, 'ave yer?' So I said, 'Yes, old chap, I have; and I have got them on.'"

Some one walking near St. Alban's Church one day met a small boy who seemed to be in distress, and stopped and talked to him for a time. Presently he asked the boy if he knew of Jesus Christ, whereupon the boy replied, referring to Father Stanton, "Well, I know a friend of His what lives near Him."

Another gamin, who was asked at a Confirmation class who was the Head of the Church, said without any hesitation, "Why, Father Stanton."

Referring once to the interview between our Lord and Nicodemus, who came by night, the Father exclaimed: "Fancy a respectable member of the Sanhedrin coming to talk to an itinerating preacher. Just as if a Bishop should go and have a spiritual talk with a Primitive Methodist preacher."

Protestantism, once observed Father Stanton, puts the Devil and the Dead in the same category—they are both past praying for.

He used to tell a story of a Dissenting minister who was sent for by a pious old woman in a village. But for a long time he could get little out of her. At last he said, "What I want to know is, are you on the Lord's side?" "No, indeed," she answered, "certainly not; I'm on the Vicar's."

—From The Treasury.

"God dropped a spark down into every one,
And if we find and fan it to a blaze
It'll spring up and glow like—like the sun—
And light the wandering out of stony ways.
God warms His hands at man's heart when he prays,
And light of prayer is spreading heart to heart;
It'll light all where now it lights a part."

CEREMONIAL AND LIFE.

It is well to state first what the word "ceremonial" exactly means, since it is often mistakenly confused with the term "ritual." Many have been called ritualists, when the person who so describes them means that they are ceremonialists. Ritual and ceremonial are connected, but it is an error to suppose that they are one and the same thing. Ritual, as the word implies, describes that which is concerned with a rite, or service; that is to say with its structure or words. It deals with such things as the particular prayers and passages of Holy Scripture which may occur in it, their relationship to one another or to former stages of the development of that rite, or to the prayers and passages of a similar nature in other and kindred rites. The books which contained these rites would be called "rituals," and the learned professor or scholar who had made them his special study would be called a "ritualist." "Ceremonial," on the other hand, deals not with the structure and wording of the prayers and Scriptural passages, but with the mode and manner in which they are offered in acts of worship. We should, for instance, go to a "ritualist" to learn that the ancient "Liturgies" or services of the Holy Communion, the great Intercession Prayer for Quick and Dead, corresponding to one Church Militant Prayer, is placed after the Consecration in the West Syrian Liturgies, in the middle of the Consecration in the East Syrian Liturgies, and in the middle of the Preface (one of those prayers just after the "Lift Up Your Hearts," and just before the "Holy, Holy, Holy"), in the Alexandrine Liturgies. On the other hand, we should go to a "ceremonialist" to learn that genuflections at certain parts of the Eucharist were the Roman use, while profound bows at the same parts were the Sarum or Salisbury use. The study of ritual would be like studying the various parts of a play of Shakespeare, their relationship to each other and to other plays which he wrote. The study of ceremonial would be like studying the positions and movements of the actors, the intoning and managing of their voices, the costumes they wore, and all the arrangement necessary for carrying the play through without a hitch when actually presenting it on the stage before an audience. It would be quite possible, therefore, for a person to be a very learned ritualist and yet know nothing of ceremonial, or vice versa.

In religion, then, we may say that ceremonial concerns those material motions and means by which we actually worship God according to some sacred rite.

This being our definition, we come to show that all life is ceremonious, and that therefore life itself is a verification of the ceremonial of the Catholic Church, divinely taught of God.

Let us begin with an illustration which lies close to our persons, such a thing, for instance, as a smile. In its proper place there are few things we more like to see than a smile. We all sympathize with the saying, "keep on smiling," with which the English soldiers cheered themselves in the South African war. But what is it that we are doing when we smile? We are giving an outward expression to what is in itself an inward and invisible feeling. And how do we give this outward expression? We do it by means of conveying a motion to a certain part of our bodily nature, namely, our cheeks. When we give this motion an upward direction it means that we feel pleased. When, on the other hand, we give this motion a contrary direction, it means that we are conscious of the opposite feeling to that which produced the smile. A smile, then, or its reverse, is facial ceremonial. Merely to look pleasant is to be a ceremonialist. Yet we do not condemn a person for thus giving expression to his feelings. Indeed, if he never smiled it is doubtful if we should welcome him into our society. It is not on record that the Scotchman who "jocked (joked) with deeficulty" was considered on that account a highly developed specimen of humanity. On the contrary, we like those who can smile; that is to say, we like those who can express their feelings ceremoniously. But if we admit the principle of ceremonial in the persons of our bodies, it is impossible not to admit it in that which our bodies wear. Or to put it the other way, if it is wrong to use ceremonial in that which our bodies wear, it must be far more wrong to use it in the substance of our bodies themselves; for here the wrong, if so, is much closer home and more intimately connected with our being. In that case, then, it would be a sin to smile. Life itself will say whether such a conclusion is right or not. But if not, then we must say nothing against the use of ceremonial.

Ceremonial, then, is a universal law of life; and so of course, the world's greatest thinkers and writers have reckoned it. In that beautiful dialogue of Plato, called "The Banquet," we may remember how Aristodemus, in describing his meeting not long since with Socrates, says that he appeared "fresh from the bath and sandalled," and that the sight of the sandals particularly struck him, since it was not usual for Socrates to wear them. He goes on to say that when he asked Socrates whither he was going in such holiday attire, he replied that he was on his way to sup with Agathon, who had just won the prize for poetry, and was consequently celebrating his triumph with his friends, and so," added Socrates, "I have made myself adorned because one ought to be beautiful in approaching one who is beautiful."

And so, because the use of ceremonial is a universal law of life, we find that it enters into all our arts. As Principal Caird has told us, "the idea, which, gazing on nature and human life by the intuitive force of imagination, the great artist has divined, he gives shape and expression to insensible forms and images." We experience this when we enter some grand Cathedral, where the inward vision which inspired the architect is expressed in graceful groupings of piers and arches, fringed with panels and cusps, and meeting aloft in glittering bosses that stud the vaulted roof, in the gleaming rows of traceried and colored windows, and in the mystic windings of arcaded cloisters and triforium. As we cast our eyes around we are moved with noble thoughts and a sense of infinite longing, for these are immanent in what we see, and have given to them their shape and ordering. And yet we are beholding nothing but ceremonial in stone, through which we catch what was in the architect's soul. We experience it when we gaze on some great picture produced by the artist who thinks, not in stone, but in paint, with its subtle handling of light, shade and hue, such for instance as we find in looking at a work of Rembrandt, of whom it has been said that there is no other European artist whose forms are so expressive of the mind of their creator. How our souls are touched by them. And yet we are only looking at ceremonial in color. We experience it when we are listening to some great symphony or overture, with something of the feeling of Wagner himself when he exclaimed as he was composing, "My God, what sounds!" And yet this ordering of notes and chords and phrasing, conveying to us those secret meanings which so inspire and stir us, are only ceremonial in sound. We experience it when we are pondering some beautiful piece of poetry produced by the artist who thinks in verse.

As we do so we understand something of the saying "Give me the making of a nation's songs, another may make its laws," of what the hymns of Charles Wesley were to the Methodist Revival, of what Keble's Christian Year was to the Oxford Movement, and of what General Wolfe meant when he said that he would rather be the author of Gray's Elegy in a Country Church Yard than take Quebec. . . .

And yet verse and prose like this are but ceremonial in words. And we can go a step farther and say that even in the printing of these words we find the same law again. To take an example from the Book of all Books, the Bible, why are the words "GOD" and "LORD," for instance, put into capital letters, if this distinguishing feature conveyed no teaching to our minds, and our natures were not so constituted that what we see makes us think. Yet such a distinction of lettering is but ceremonial in typography.

And as in our arts of daily life, so in our acts of daily life we find the law of ceremonial. We find it in the highest national act, the Coronation of a Sovereign. We find it in the normal conduct of a court. "Majesty without its externals is a jest" ([m]a jest[y]). And rightly so, for to ignore ceremonial is to ignore a law of life, and so far to play the fool with it. . . .

We may be reminded here of how Queen Elizabeth had two gentlemen to lay the cloth in her dining room, two to bring in her plate, salt and bread, while all, before they approached the table and when they retired from it, had to make three genuflections. (Luigard vi, 320.) It is usual today for the recipient of an order to kneel when he is invested with its insignia. Again we find the same ceremonial in Parliament, in the reverence made to the throne in the House of Lords when passing it, even when it is unoccupied; in the reply to the address from the throne being made by a mover in uniform; in the Speaker of the House of Commons always being there in vestments, and in the mace which lies before him.

In the doings of our army and navy also we find this law of ceremonial. Could these services be carried on without salutes, uniforms, medals, badges which distinguish both rank and attainments, regimental colors, and such like ceremonial, to the maintenance of which men like Frederick the Great and Napoleon attached the highest importance. . . .

We find the same law at work in our most ordinary and recognized social rules. Who is considered exemplary by entering a drawing room with his hat on, or by remaining seated when a guest comes into the room? We see it in the commonest courtesies of life. Even in the grades of a railway or other company, the subordinate is not only expected to carry out his orders, but to carry them out ceremoniously, with outward marks of respect and the use of the word "sir," which are rightly and punctiliously demanded and rendered. All these things are ceremonial, but they are a part and parcel of human life. And would it go better or more smoothly if such things were left out of it? Would a man so freely give himself out to others if he had always to be guarding the recognition of his position for himself instead of finding it secured to him by life's ceremonial? Is not this ceremonial sometimes more important than the service in connection with which it is rendered?—for it shows that most valuable part of all, the spirit and intention with which that service is done.

Indeed so necessary is ceremonial to our life, so entirely is it a law and factor of our life, that even those religious bodies which are outside the Catholic Church, and in some cases strongly opposed to it, are nevertheless compelled—compelled just because they are still a bit human—to bow to and respect this law. We need only refer to the ceremonies, vestments and incense used by Masonic Lodges; the colored scarves and badges of Friendly Societies; the bonnets and "rig," that is to say, the vestments of Quakers, Quakeresses, and Salvationists. A well-known and courteous Quaker, in kindly promising to send a certain book to an Anglican clergyman, asked that he might be excused from using the word "Reverend" in addressing the package. The clergyman, while begging him to omit it, if he could not use it sincerely, at the same time was able to point out to his Quaker friend that he was none the less careful to observe the ceremony of words in his own particular way, since it was always noticeable that he always said "thee" and "thou" for "you." At Mansfield College, the intellectual seat of Dissent at Oxford, there is a large row of images of Protestant saints in the interior, together with images of Catholic Fathers robed in their Eucharistic vestments in the porch, while at the east end of every Lutheran Church, as we know, there is a large crucifix, and the vestments of chasubles are worn by the Lutherans of Norway and Sweden. Images abound in the Protestant Churches of Germany. In the nave at Marburg, for instance, there is a large statue of the Blessed Virgin and Child, in bright coloring and gilt. Dean Henson has reminded us, that in the days of Queen Elizabeth "The great difference between the Lutherans and Presbyterians to the popular mind, was that the former retained and the latter discarded most of the old ceremonial." (Robert Lee Lecture, 1911, p. 83.) We may sum up this conformity of non-conformity to the law of ceremonial by quoting the noteworthy remarks of the great Vestryman, Dr. Adam Clarke, on the second verse of the twenty-eighth chapter of Exodus. That verse runs: "And thou shalt make holy garments for Aaron, thy brother, for glory and for beauty." Upon which Dr. Adam Clarke observes:

"Should not the garments of those who minister in holy things still be emblematical of the things in which they minister? Should they not be for glory and beauty, expressive of the dignity of the Gospel ministry, and that beauty of holiness without which no one can see the Lord. As the high priests' vestments, under the law, were emblematical of what was to come, should not the vestments of the ministers of the gospel bear some resemblance to what is come? Is, then, the dismal black, now worn by almost all kinds of priests and ministers, for glory and beauty? Is it emblematic of anything that is good, glorious and excellent? How unbecoming the glad tidings announced by Christian ministers in a color emblematical of nothing but mourning, and woe, sin, desolation and death! How inconsistent the habit and office of these men. Should it be said, 'These are only shadows, and are useless because the substance is come.' I ask why there is black almost universally worn? Why is a particular color preferred (and this!), if there be no significance in any? Is there not a danger that in our zeal against shadows we shall destroy or essentially change the substance itself? Would not the same argument exclude water in baptism and bread and wine in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper? The white surplice in the service of the Church is almost the only thing that remains of these ancient and becoming vestments which God commanded to be made for glory and beauty. Clothing emblematical of office is of more consequence than is generally imagined. Were the great offices of the Crown, and the great officers of justice, to clothe themselves like the common people when they appear in their public capacity, both their persons and their decisions would be soon held in little estimation."

We see, therefore, that all our every-day life, in its smiles and tears; in its arts and in its acts, in its secular and in its non-Catholic religious bodies is a verification of the ceremonial of Catholicism; and indeed the more civilized man is, the greater the verification becomes, for, as Burton has remarked: "Expression is the grand diversifier of appearance among civilized people; in the desert it knows few varieties." (El Medinate, p. 319.) To discard or disparage the ceremonial of the Catholic Church is to discard or to disparage humanity itself.

It follows, then, that the man who assumes the lofty position of being able to do without ceremonial is, in reality, the man who is in an inferior position. His is not the exalted, but the deficient life; for at best he is living in one side, not in the whole of his nature. His is not the stronger but the weaker position; for as it is a greater expression of ourselves to use words and not thoughts only, so is it a greater expression of ourselves to use actions and not words only. Further, the very expressing of ourselves in action as well as in thought and in word, reacts upon us in so doing, and develops and fixes us more firmly in that which we express. . . .

Ceremonial is a language; and the more we believe what we say, the more particular shall we be in the saying it.

And it is a language divinely bestowed upon us; not only by the laws of life, but also by the revelation of God. It is taught us in the outgoings of the morning and evening which praise Him; in the pearls that lie on the gold-dust floor of the deep; in the jewels which blossom in the mines; in the flowers which rise to greet us in our walks, and pale the glories of a monarch's court; in the gorgeous hues of insects and birds; and in the crowning beauties of the human form. It is taught us in the Old Testament and in the directions for the Tabernacle and Temple worship. It is taught us in the New Testament in the Incarnation of our Lord. For as Christians we do not worship pure spirit. A Deist or a Theist may; but not a Christian. A Christian worships Christ, that is, "the Word made Flesh," whereby all that concerns our material, as well as all that concerns our spiritual nature, is caught up into fellowship with God, and offered to Him in the worship at His altar. It is taught us by the example of Christ, Who accepted the ceremonial gifts of the wise men; the ceremonial use of water at His Baptism; the ceremonial acts of personal reverence, such as palm branches and garments when He entered Jerusalem; the kneeling to Him and anointing His feet; and Who Himself washed the feet of others. We are taught it throughout the history of the Church, the spirit and the bride, and notably in the lessons of iconoclasm. We are taught it in our Prayer Book, and most respectfully claim far greater "values" for ceremonial than those so far mentioned by Convocation in its Report upon the Ornaments Rubric. We are taught it in the vision of the glory to come, which is not only that of a new heaven, but also that of a new earth, or glorified materialism. Those who would arrive at that glory, as it is presented to us in the Revelation of St. John, must be training themselves for it while here. Where can this be better done than in the ceremonial of the Catholic Church?

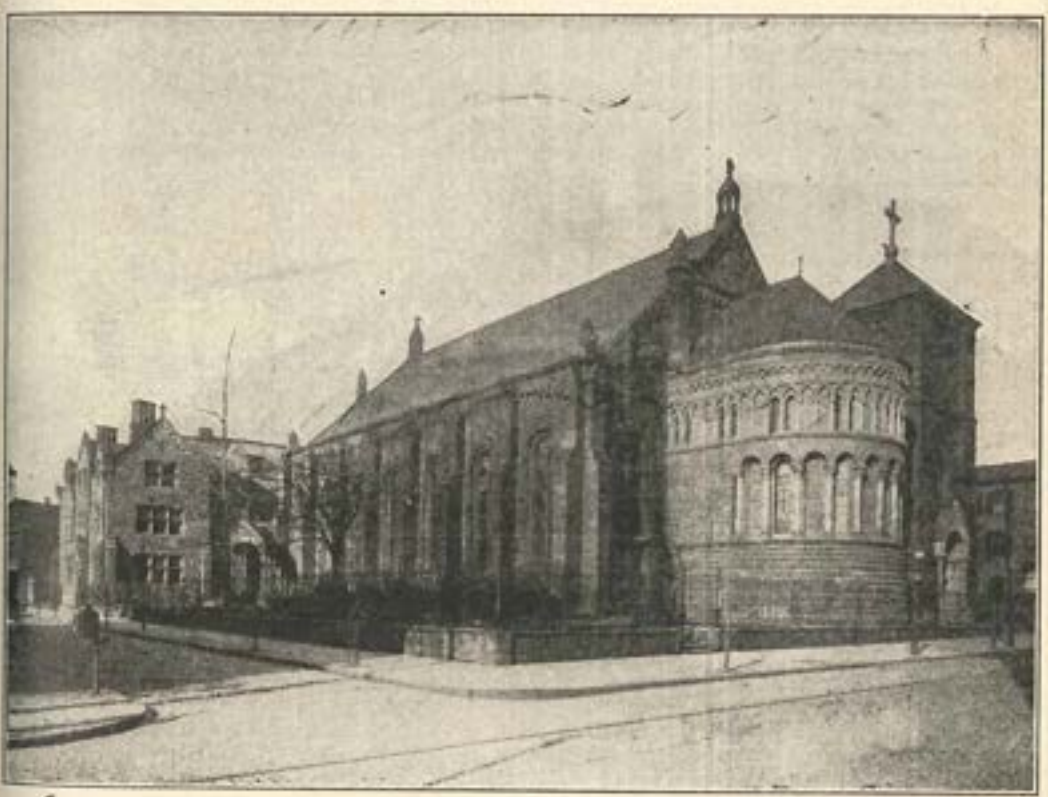
Let us conclude with one word upon opposition to religious ceremonial. We now see that such opposition can only proceed from one or other of the following causes: either that Christ has not come to save the whole of our human nature as God made it, or else that we are to be governed by an observance of God's laws when we serve Him in ordinary life, and by their non-observance when we serve Him in His Church. Opposition founded on the first of these two causes is simply a denial of the Gospel. Opposition founded on the second is so hopelessly self-contradictory as to carry its refutation with it. It would mean that it is right to retain priestly vestments in our law courts whither they have come, but wrong to do so in church from whence they have come; that it is right to kiss the Gospels in a court of law into which it has been brought, but wrong to do so in the church from whence it has been fetched; that it is right to show bodily reverence to God when represented in our king and superiors who are our fellow creatures, but wrong to do so to God when we are facing Him direct in Himself as our Creator; that it is right to salute the British flag with all its crosses when elevated on board a ship, but wrong to salute that which our Lord called His own Body and Blood, on the eve of the crucifixion, when it is elevated in the sanctuary; that it is right for a bishop to wear a special vestment to mark off the distinction of his ministry from that of priests, but that it is wrong to wear a special vestment to mark off the distinction of the service of the Eucharist from that of Matins; that this ceremonious mark of distinction may be bestowed upon the servant of the Lord at all times; but not upon the service of the Lord at any time. Such incongruities of thinking have only to be stated to be condemned.

And what is to be said of those who, on principle, forbid the use of Eucharistic vestments? It can only be said that no greater rebuke can fall upon them than that the God-created laws of life itself hold them convicted of either not having a belief, with the continuity of the Faith of the Church, that our Blessed Lord's Service is something distinct and unique in itself, or else of objecting to that belief being confessed.—From Catholicism and Life, by C. H. SHARPE.

ALTAR BREAD.

O dearest Jesus, here we weave
These swaddling clothes for Thee.
As fine as finest silk,
As fine as whitest milk,
These tiny garments be.

O holy Mother Mary, see
These robes as light as air.
Bless with thy stainless hands,
That they be swathing bands
For thy sweet Babe to wear.



Beneath their shining veils of white
Jesus in love will hide;
Lest, seeing God so near,
Our hearts should shrink for fear,
His longing be denied.

For in His visits now to earth
He only asks for love.
More fair to Him than flowers,
These pearly hosts of ours,
That bring Him from above,

PARISH NOTES.

The eight o'clock Mass on Sundays will be resumed after October 1, and the 9.15 Mass will be sung.

* * *

Father Quin spent the last two weeks in September in the Canadian provinces. Father Odell, of the Church of the Annunciation, was his traveling companion.

Commencing September 27, and continuing until October 6, the parishioners are asked to join with the clergy in special intercessions for the General Convention. It is hoped that many may find an opportunity to come to the daily Mass, or spend some portion of each day in church. Intercession leaflets will be provided.

* * *

Every year a necessary expense is incurred in obtaining supplies for the Sunday School. As the school increases in numbers, the expense also increases if the work is to be efficient. There is no more important part of the parish life than the instruction of the children. Contributions for "Sunday School expenses" will be much appreciated.

MEETING OF THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY.

The annual meeting of St. Clement's Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary will be held on Friday, 17th October, at 3 P. M. There will be a service in St. John's Chapel and an address by the rector, followed by a business meeting in the Parish Hall.

Every woman of the congregation is invited and it is hoped that many will avail themselves of this opportunity of becoming instructed and interested in the great work of preaching the gospel to every creature.

"AND THE PRAYER OF FAITH SHALL SAVE THE SICK."

"Indeed a notable miracle hath been done in the parish of Christ Church, Chattanooga, Tenn.!" One of the women of the parish, a young mother, was desperately ill recently with poison. Her physician had given her up entirely and telegrams had been sent to her relatives and friends that there was no hope for her recovery. Arrangements had really been started for her funeral, so certain were her physicians of her death. She had had ten convulsions and was so swollen as to be unrecognizable. Her tongue was so swollen that it protruded from her mouth. Her last convulsion took place at 4 o'clock in the afternoon of the Second Sunday after Easter. At 4.30 Father Robertson, the rector, anointed her. Her improvement was immediate, and in twenty-four hours she took part in the Thanksgiving service for her recovery. On Trinity Sunday she was present at the baptism of her baby at the church. As a result of this, seeing the power of God in the Sacraments of the Church, her nurse and several of her friends asked for confirmation, and to be admitted to Holy Communion.—Church Times, Milwaukee.

Let us make earth heaven; let us hereby show our fellow-citizens of how great blessings they are deprived. For when they see us gentle, free from evil desire, from envy, rightly fulfilling all our other duties, they will say: "If the Christians are become angels here, what will they be after their departure hence? If where they are strangers they shine so bright, how great will they become when they shall have won their native land!" Thus they, too, will be reformed, and the word of godliness will have free course not less than in the Apostles' times; for if they, being twelve, converted entire cities and countries, so we, being teachers by our conduct, should exalt our holy cause to heaven.—St. John Chrysostom.

The Bishop of Manchester, England, is determined to make the Church public understand what the papal decree on mixed marriages, Ne Temere, involves. He has been publicly attacked for his references to the decree, but he is in no way undismayed. He appeals to facts and his facts are unchallenged, for the very good reason that they cannot be explained away—much less denied. He summarizes the position as follows: "Rome treats as invalid and adulterous marriages that have been lawfully contracted. Rome uses pressure to force Protestants to go through services which treat their own religious services as a mere nullity; wage-earners in Lancashire have been told that though they have been married and are living pure lives, yet they are but adultresses or prostitutes; wives have been encouraged to leave their husbands and to take away the child from his father." Prominent Roman Catholics, it is said, are much distressed by the operation of the decree and wish to see England excluded, as Germany and Austria-Hungary have been, from its working.

THE GENERAL CONVENTION OF 1913.

The General Convention of the Church will meet in New York City on Wednesday, October 8. It is made up of four clergymen and four laymen from each diocese, elected by the diocesan conventions. The large place that the laymen hold in the legislature of our Church is indicated by the fact that every member of the General Convention, Bishop, presbyter or layman "derives his authority in part from Vestries controlled absolutely by the laity, and from diocesan conventions controlled equally by the clergy and laity." When this is remembered the office of Vestrymen in a parish takes on dignity and importance.

The opening service of the General Convention which in this case will take place in the New York Cathedral, is on the first day and is a most impressive occasion. About 110 Bishops will be in the procession; there will be present 300 clerical deputies and 300 lay deputies, representing about one million communicants organized in 68 diocese and 23 missionary jurisdictions, not including our foreign districts. This is the most representative legislative body of any religious organization in this country in that practically every portion of the territory covered by our flag is represented in it. This is true of the legislative body of no other Church. The organization of this Church corresponds more closely to our American political system than does that of any other Church.

At this great opening service of the General Convention Bishop Lawrence will preach the sermon. The appointment of Bishop Lawrence is particularly complimentary because heretofore the choice was by seniority. A new rule was recently adopted, and the House of Bishops appointed a committee to choose a preacher. Bishop Lawrence is the first choice under this new rule.

When the General Convention assembles for business, it will sit as two houses—the House of Bishops and the House of Clerical and Lay Deputies. It was planned in the beginning by those who organized the legislative framework of this Church after the Revolutionary War that the Bishops, as clergymen, should also sit in the one house, but Bishop Seabury, of Connecticut, the Tory Bishop, refused to agree to this; and in order to avoid a schism the point was yielded; and at the first General Convention, in July, 1789, in Philadelphia, the three Bishops—White, Seabury and Prevoost, sat separately and in secret session as the House of Bishops! Bishop Seabury and the Connecticut clergy also objected to the presence of the laity in the legislative councils of the Church, but this point Bishop White, Bishop Prevoost, and the Virginia churchmen would not yield.

Bishop Seabury had a curious history. He was a convert from New England Puritanism, and like many such converts he was a high churchman. He was hostile to the American cause in the Revolution, and wrote some bitter criticisms of the Congress. He conducted a literary bureau advocating the British side. He was imprisoned by the Americans, but escaped to the British lines on Long Island. They made him a regimental chaplain, and placing his knowledge of the topography of the surrounding country at the disposal of General Howe he made military maps for the British and in so far contributed to the defeat of Washington in the battle of Long Island. When he was elected Bishop of Connecticut he was drawing half-pay as a retired officer in the British army, and he drew that pension to the day of his death. Bishop Prevoost, of New York, could hardly be civil to him because of this personal history. But his Toryism and his high churchmanship were agreeable to the clergy of Connecticut; and the influence of this Tory Bishop still abides in the two facts that the House of Bishops still sits in secret conclave, and that there are no laymen to this day on the Standing Committee of the Diocese of Connecticut.

The expenses of the General Convention are met by a tax upon each diocese of three dollars for each Bishop, presbyter and deacon resident therein. The Convention sits for three weeks.

In connection with the meetings of the General Convention other meetings are held. The Woman's Auxiliary holds its triennial meetings, at one of which the great United Offerings is presented, which at the last Convention amounted to $250,000. These meetings are of immense interest and importance.

The great meetings of the Missionary Society held in connection with the Convention are stirring, instructive and enthusiastic. Bishops and other missionaries from all over the world address these meetings. Rowe, of Alaska; Brent, from the Philippines; Graves and Root, from China; McKim, from Japan; Restarick, from Hawaii; Aves, from Cuba; Kinsolving, from Brazil, and others nearer home, also well known, stir the hearts of the people with the spirit of missions. These missionary meetings will be held in the Cathedral

There will be other meetings in connection with the Convention, for example, those of the Commission on Social Service, of which Bishop Lawrence is chairman. Bishop Lawrence will preside at a mass meeting to be held in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine on Wednesday evening, October 15, at which "The Church and the Social Problem" will be the subject. This commission will also hold conferences for parish workers and representatives of diocesan Social Service Commissions, at which such topics will be discussed as "The Church and the Rural Problem," "The Church and Industry." The commission will have an exhibit showing what has been accomplished since the last General Convention.

The House of Bishops will meet in the Old Synod Hall. The House of Deputies will meet in the New Synod Hall. The Women's Auxiliary will meet in St. Michael's Church.—Church Militant.

Here are some of the questions which will be brought before the General Convention:

Four Amendments to the Constitution passed at the last General Convention and awaiting confirmation.

THE HOLY ANGELS.

More and more the wisdom of this world is recognizing that man is a spiritual being, that spiritual forces are the motive power of things around us and of things within, that the visible is always an expression, a manifestation of the invisible.

So the way is cleared in many a soul for faith in God. Faith is seen to be reasonable, though reason cannot beget faith. God reveals Himself, and He can reveal Himself as He pleases, but the removal of prejudices, of misconceptions, of mental prepossessions, lets the Light shine through unhindered. It is His own Spirit working who removes and softens these hindrances that lie in ourselves.

But between man and God, between man's personal being and the Personal Being which is God, lies an infinite abyss. We need to think highly of ourselves, as made in God's Image, but we must not think so highly of ourselves that we should suppose that there are no other personal beings than ourselves created by God. The Angels do not fill the abyss between man and God. Between the highest Order of Angels, and the Being of God, that abyss still yawns infinite. The Creator must ever surpass infinitely the creature. But the remembrance of the Angels adds reverence to our sense of God's creation. It fills the vacant space, which our increasing knowledge of the universe seems to create, if man, an inhabitant of one of the smallest of the worlds, and himself so limited in power, is the only being who is cognizant of God. We wonder, we worship, we praise along with a mighty host. We see but the fringe of God's garments as we search out the little we can know of His works. His glory, even in nature, is revealed to, and is acknowledged by, the angelic world, which is also the work of His hands. A volume of praise is ever rising to Him from them, by the side of which our praise is but a whisper.

Cardinal Newman, when Vicar of St. Mary's, Oxford, preached a wonderful sermon on the Holy Angels from the words "He maketh His Angels spirits, His Ministers a flaming fire."—Ps. civ, 4. And he spoke of them as the powers of nature, that just as man's body is but the manifestation in all its acts of man's spirit, so that which we call nature, in its varying expressions of force, of growth, of change, of beauty, or of terror, is but the fruit of the ministration of angels, who supply thus to that which is inanimate, its power of fulfilment of God's will. Led by the frequent Scriptural attribution of what we should ordinarily call natural processes, to angelic power, as "An Angel troubled the water" of the healing bubbling spring, or "The Lord sent a pestilence upon Israel from the morning even to the time appointed; . . . and when the Angel stretched out his hand upon Jerusalem to destroy it . . . " he taught, "Nature is not inanimate; its daily toil is intelligent; its works are duties. . . . 'For all things serve Thee.' . . . Every breath of air, and ray of light and heat, every beautiful prospect, is, as it were, the skirts of their garments, the waving of the robes of those whose faces see God in heaven."*

So faith reveals to us a wisdom of origins, agencies, and purposes in that natural world, whose course and outward appearance we try to spell out and understand with the best instruments of knowledge we can bring. But the lesson does not end there.

The spiritual world is a moral world, and we are interested parties and respondents in every cause that is pleaded there. Evil and good are interests as vital to us as pain and pleasure, or as sickness or health to our bodies. And faith again has received of God the revelation of moral evil, or sin, in angels, as also of the service of those who do the will of God in heaven. Here on earth it is not nature only, but nature's lord, man, that angels affect. And the sin of man on earth is the repetition, the outcome of sin in the heavenly places.

Thus we get a vision of the origin, agencies, and purposes of evil, of sin in the world, as Satan and his angels seeks to work their way in, and through, man. In that "war in heaven," of which St. John writes, Michael is the leader of the Holy Angels. Michael means "Who is as God?" Satan's temptation is, "Ye shall be as gods." This is the whole meaning of our life on earth—to vindicate God's honor, to refuse self will and pleasing, to establish the kingdom of God on earth.

The Holy Angels are not mere spectators of our life. If we are tempted, we are also succored. In the life of Jesus there were the angels of the Wilderness, the angel of Gethsemane, the angels of the Tomb and of the Ascension, as real as the evil spirits and their leader, but coming with how far more exceeding a weight of comfort. The struggle had to be endured, but the comfort and joy are eternal.

Help in prayer, succor in life, care after death—these are our 'good angels' offices for us—each soul of man with his own guardian—and how specially each Christian soul! And then the joy in heaven, the loving welcome, the praise of God, as we too win the victory, and pass in!—H. P. Bull, S. S. J. E., in St. John's Messenger.

PARISH NOTES.

A requiem will be said every allowable day in November, at 7.30 A. M.

Bona Mors will be said every Monday during November, after Evensong.

Vespers of the dead will be sung in the Church after Evensong, on Sunday night, November 2.

On Tuesday, November 4, a club for the young women of the parish will hold its first meeting in the Parish Hall.

Commencing Thursday, November 6, the rector will hold a Bible class in St. John's Chapel, immediately after the 9.30 mass.

The parish tea will be held on Monday night, November 24. Parishioners and friends of the parish are cordially invited.

On Saturday November 15th, there will be a Mass of Requiem for Geo. Herbert Moffett, Priest, in S. John's Chapel, at 9 o'clock.

As our parish feast falls on Sunday, this year, it is to be hoped that there will be a large communion of the parish. We should all come together in a great corporate act of worship and communion.

A troop of Boy Scouts has been organized in the parish. Meetings will be held on Thursday evenings. Mr. Thatcher Souder is to act as Scout Master, with Mr. Donald Kent of the University of Pennsylvania, and Mr. Clinton Jenkins, as assistants. The rector will be the chaplain.

The following offerings will be taken during November: November 1, For All Saints' Sisters of the Poor; St. Clement's Day for the expenses of the parish; Thanksgiving Day, for the Episcopal Hospital. Offerings are asked also for the Poor Fund. Such offerings should be designated.

The Rev. W. T. Capers, Rector of the Church of the Holy Apostles, will be the special preacher on S. Clement's Night. The Preacher for the Morning will be announced later. Owing to the Reorganization of the parish work, there will be no procession of the Sodality this year, but there will be a solemn procession, with Te Deum, on S. Clement's Night.

Beginning on one of the Fridays of this month there will be a series of stereopticon lectures by the clergy, in the Parish Hall, on the subject of a Biographical History of Holy Scripture. This course is provided at the request of the Holy Cross Guild and other persons who attended the Easter Lectures in General Church History. The new material is designed for any man or woman who may be interested.

On the Feast of the Martyrs of Uganda, Wednesday night, October 29, the Rev. F. E. Aitkins, of St. Mary's Mission, St. Mark's parish, gave the address at the second meeting of the confirmed boys' and girls' Guilds of the Most Precious Blood and the Blessed Guest. Father Aitkins emphasized the rule of regular confession. The next meeting of the Guilds will be made in preparation for our Patronal Festival, November 23, which falls this year upon a Sunday.

THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY.

The annual meeting of St. Clement's Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary was held on Friday, the 17th of October, and the attendance was most encouraging, and much interest was shown. All the officers were re-elected, with the addition of Mrs. J. B. Bernadon as Vice-President.

Mrs. A. W. Taylor, of Roanoke Mills, N. C., gave a graphic account of the very distressing conditions there, and made an appeal for funds to build an emergency hospital.

Miss Claudine Whittaker, formerly a parishioner of St. Clement's and now a missionary to Mexico, will give an account of her work, at the next meeting, Friday, 7th November, at 3 P. M. Her address will precede the business meeting.

LEAGUE FOR INTERCESSORY PRAYER.

A league for intercessory prayer has been organized. All members of the parish who are willing to give a short time each day for this great work are asked to send their names and addresses to the rector. A monthly paper will be sent out, containing the heads of intercession. It is hoped that we may have a large membership. Any person desiring prayers for any particular object is asked to send the request to the "League of Intercession," St. Clement's Clergy House.

Strengthen and confirm the faithful; visit and relieve the sick; turn and soften the wicked; rouse the careless; recover the fallen; restore the penitent; remove all hindrances to the advancement of Thy truth; bring all to be of one heart and one mind within the fold of Thy Holy Church; to the honor and glory of Thy Holy Name; through Jesus Christ our Lord. THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

The Sunday School reopened Sunday, October 5th. The standard text-book for the Middle School is "The Ways and Teachings of the Church," by the Rev. Lefferd M. A. Haughwout, M.A., rector of Christ Church, Meadville, Pa. As the author remarks: "There is a great need to-day of practical instruction. The average child is taught a great deal about the history of ancient Israel, the life and times of our Lord, and the founding of the Christian Church; and there his religious education ends—just nineteen hundred years short of where it should. The order of the lessons has been determined by the natural intellectual processes of the child mind: the concrete first, and then the abstract. So instead of beginning with the doctrine of God, and ending with church furniture and details of ritual (somewhat of anti-climax), the reverse order has been chosen. First, the material house of worship, its furniture, symbolism, ministers, and services; and then the True Church as the Body of Christ, its origin, history, teachings, and sacraments."

Every teacher of the Middle School has been asked to begin every lesson with the recital of an answer from the Prayer Book Catechism.

As the alms of the children are to be given entirely to the China Mission, there is all the more need for generous donation to the expense fund of the Sunday School. No appropriation is made for this purpose, and the items are not easily met, especially at the beginning of the Church year.

It would seem desirable to subscribe for copies to the weekly "Young Churchman" and "The Shepherd's Arms," both excellent Catholic publications, at a cost of about thirty dollars for nine months.

The problem of the Catholic Sunday School in most of our parishes is the effort to give in a few moments once a week what ought to be taught daily in a parochial school.

LECTURES ON RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

By the generous invitation of the Rev. Father Richardson, rector of St. Mary's, and the Rev. Father Steel, rector of Calvary Church, West Philadelphia, all persons who may be interested are informed of a Tuesday night course of lectures, which began on October 21, at 7.45 P. M., in the Parish House of Calvary Church, Forty-first and Brown streets. For the first three-quarters of an hour, Mrs. John Loman will present the principles of teaching the Church Catechism. At 8.30 Father Richardson will discuss the teaching value of the Prayer Book and Church Worship. Beginning November 25, Father Steel will continue this subject, and Father Richardson will begin a series of lectures on how to impart Christian doctrine. From January 6 to March 10, the topics and speakers are as follows:

"Apostolic Church, Acts and Epistles," Rev. H. C. McHenry.

"History and Organization of the Sunday School," Mrs. Clarence W. Bispham.

"Biblical Geography," Rev. E. J. McHenry.

In these days of prejudice, ignorance, and misinformation, it is well that Catholics should stand by one another in the effort to comprehend and impart the groundwork of the True Faith. Nor is such a series of lectures intended simply for those who are formal teachers of the Catechism and the Holy Scriptures. No fee, nor even regular attendance, are asked of those who take advantage of the course.

THE GUILD OF ST. NICHOLAS.

This organization is for boys under sixteen. The first meeting was held on Tuesday night, October 7. Later on, Thursday night may be given to the boys for basketball only. A number of boys have entered the Saturday morning classes.

The sheet-brasswork is again under the able direction of Mr. Morris May. Last year the little artists were so keen and industrious that the managers have felt warranted this fall in giving the boys two hours of continuous instruction per week, instead of the one hour. At the close of the season there will be a sale of the work, which will be sure to show still more clever designs.

The gymnasium games and exercises are in the hands of Dr. J. Richard Allison, a senior at the University of Pennsylvania Medical School, assisted by Clinton Jenkins, one of our acolytes.

This year there will be no previous devotions in Chapel, except for First Communion and Confirmation boys. The Guild will open at 7.30 P. M. Visitors are welcome to come on any Tuesday night.

Needless to say, there is no small amount needed for the upkeep of this Guild, which last year numbered almost a hundred lads, every one of whom was identified with the religious life of the parish.

It may be that kind friends would care to give to any of these needs of the G. S. N.:

The stipend of the two teachers.

Five dollars for the purchase of table games, almost the entire supply having been worn out. Such games are also useful for lending to convalescent children, and others.

A springboard.
Extra mats.
Fencing foils and masks.
Another pair of boxing gloves.
A punching bag.
Push ball.
An indoor baseball set.
Badminton.
An indoor shot.
A vaulting horse.

All contributions should be sent direct to Miss Eugenie M. Fryer, The Warwick, Nineteenth and Sansom streets, Philadelphia. The other managers of the G. S. N. are Miss Lea and Miss Sarah Brook. Chaplain, Rev. V. Van M. Beede.

THE COMMUNION OF SAINTS.

The Practices, or Devotional Exercises, of the Church have developed from age to age to meet the needs of the Church's life in the world. The Doctrine of the Church is one and unchangeable. Its test is—that which was always, everywhere, and by all, held and taught. It is the Faith once for all delivered to the Saints, that the Church ever teaches.

But as the Church has grown to realize the full meaning of the Treasure of the Faith committed to her, she expresses it ever freshly in her Devotional Exercises. Errors arise, and it becomes necessary to emphasize outwardly the old faith, by a new Practice. Or, difficulties are removed, and the full expression of the Faith, which before was hindered, now becomes possible and natural.

In something of this way the article of "the Communion of Saints" came into the Apostles' Creed. It is not found in the earlier forms of the Creed. But at the beginning of the fifth century a controversy arose about the Invocation of the Saints, and the honoring of their memory by erecting altars at their tombs. One named Vigilantius scoffed at both, and St. Jerome vigorously refuted him. It was in Southern Gaul that Vigilantius found most of his followers, and it is in Southern Gaul that, in the second half of the century, this article first appears in the Creed. It seems that this article was expressly designed to declare the faith of the Church in the Communion between the Saints in glory, and the Saints on earth, in the reality of their prayers for the Church on earth, and in the lawfulness of invoking them.

It is in the fourth century that direct Invocations of Saints are frequent and continually commented on in the writings of the Fathers of the Church. Similarly the inscriptions on the tombs of the departed in the Catacombs often contained the words, "Pray for us," and these are all earlier than the end of the fourth century. But this century was the century in which the great Council of Nicæa was held. At that time the argument of the Fathers, against the Arians who denied the Divinity of our Lord, was that this was a new doctrine. "This is the old doctrine that we have, the old doctrine which the Apostles delivered, which has been the doctrine of the Church ever since, which we received from our predecessors, as they received it from theirs, and which we now here maintain as we received it—the same, the very same."

It is in this "conservative" century, that the great Christian teachers, in the East and West alike, uphold Invocation. It cannot have seemed to them an innovation, or a departure from the doctrine they had received. If, as is probable, in that age when the Church, set free from persecution, began to reckon the full tale of her martyrs and tell it out, the practice of invocation, like many other practices of external worship, received fuller and more manifest expression, yet these defenders of the Church's Faith felt it to be the natural expression of what the Church had always believed about the Saints.

The Church has had a long history since then. Distinctively Roman Catholic Church Councils have recognized the need of taking away "superstition" from the practice of Invocation, as well as our own; and there has been indeed justification enough for our jealous insistence on the honor due to God alone, and on the direct access to our Lord to which every soul of sinful, or penitent, man is invited.

We have had this lesson imprinted on our souls, and the witness was needed. But the period of protest may last too long. The severe restrictions of a time of sickness are not suitable to convalescence. Health restores to us our liberty.

The Catholic revival cannot stop short of the full Catholic inheritance. The nature of the Church once more understood, the supernatural grace of the Sacraments once more believed, the life in Christ once more realized, we begin again to appreciate what it is to be fellow citizens with the Saints, and of the household of God. We cultivate their friendship anew; we claim reverently but joyfully their kinship with us, and their fellow feeling with us; we appeal, as the centuries pass, to their abiding and ever growing love of Christ and of us in Christ, to their ever increasing anticipation of the completing of the number of the Elect, to their ever brightening desire of His Coming.

We have need enough to emphasize the true nature of the life beyond the grave, in view of the superstitions rife around us. And we shall make the communion of Christians one with another on earth more real, if we lay stress once more on our communion with those in heaven. But the revival of Invocation is more than timely, as against spiritualistic error or selfish individualism. The Saints are God's witnesses, the fruit of His grace, the work of His Hands. They are God's own joy, and glory. We need to glory in them. It is the light, and life, and love, and victory of Christ in them that we reverence, and rejoice in. It is this that we confess, and to this that we appeal, when we ask their prayers.

So the living reality of the great multitude before the throne comes home to us, and we become strong, as they become real. Their examples become powerful, as their prayers are invoked. And still it is the glory of Christ our Lord which fills our hearts, and His whole Church.

Your servant in Christ,
H. P. BULL, S.S.J.E.,
In St. John's Messenger.

MISSIONARY NOTES.

About the middle of September the welcome news was sent to the Church papers that the offerings of the Church for the fiscal year, ending September 1, together with the use of undesignated legacies, made it possible to close the year without further deficit. This is the first time since 1909 that the gifts of the year have carried the current expenditure. It has only been accomplished by increased gifts, but even more rigid economy on the part of the Board in making appropriations. The accumulated deficit of the former years amounting to $197,000 still remains to be provided.

When the floods of last spring wrought wholesale destruction in the Middle West, it was stated that the missionary offerings from the suffering dioceses would inevitably shrink. Strangely enough, this was not the case. Almost without exception they made increased gifts—an evidence of fine spirit which the general Church will greatly appreciate.

Bishop Knight, of Cuba, has presented his resignation to the House of Bishops, and will accept his election as Chancellor of the University of the South at Sewanee, Tenn. The Bishop had previously declined this call and decided to remain at his post in the West Indies, but has reconsidered his decision. The loss to the missionary work will be great, as Bishop Knight has shown himself an excellent administrator of a difficult field and a wise advisor in the settlement of missionary problems.

The Rev. H. Percy Silver, who for three and a half years has done most effective work as secretary of the Seventh Missionary Department, has been appointed to the chaplaincy of West Point and has accepted the position. His resignation as Department Secretary was presented to the Board of Missions to take effect on October 1st. While universal regret will be felt in the Seventh Department, and by all who are interested in missionary work, the Church will, nevertheless, be glad that so influential and important a position as the chaplaincy at West Point should be thus worthily filled.

Bishop Rowe reached Seattle on the revenue cutter "Bear," returning from a trip to our station farthest north at Point Hope. He reports conditions most favorable. In that little Eskimo community he confirmed ninety-eight people. A great disaster befell them in the loss of the Nigalik, a new motor launch given to the Mission about a year and a half ago, whose cost was $4,000. The Bishop says: "The Nigalik was carried out to sea in a fearful gale, in spite of our best judgment and care. She was secure and safe with twin anchors, as we thought; but owing to the hurricane wind and the current, she dragged anchor and drifted out to sea and out of sight. The Eskimos did their best to save her, tried to tow her back, but in vain. In fact, it was all they could do to make the shore and escape themselves from being carried out to sea. I am thankful no life was lost; but the loss of the Nigalik, with so many of our needed tools on board, is at this time too great to express."

The Lenten Offering of the children of the Church amounted on September 1st to the sum of $175,745.71. This is an advance of $8,000 over the offering of last year and constitutes the highest record yet made. The gathering of such an amount of money in small sums during the six weeks of Lent is a really remarkable achievement, and means not only great assistance to the Board of Missions, but a practical educational propaganda among the Church's children.

On August 24th there was celebrated the fortieth anniversary of the oldest Church of our communion in the Spanish possessions—Holy Trinity Church, Ponce, Porto Rico—which was erected by the English-speaking residents of the place in 1872 and was under the charge of the Bishop of Antigua. When the United States came into possession of Porto Rico the property was transferred to the American Church.

PARISH NOTES.

Masses on Christmas Day at 6, 7, 8, 9.15 and 11 A. M.

Fr. Patterson is training the children of the Sunday School in preparation for the Christmas festival. A mystery play will be given entitled, "Bethlehem," written by Laurence Housman.

The Sunday School Festival will be held on Monday night, December 20. A mystery play will be given by the children followed by the distribution of presents. As usual the rector will be grateful for contributions for the expenses.

The clergy will hear confessions on the Tuesday and Wednesday before Christmas as follows:
A. M.
Tuesday—Fr. Hutchinson, 3-5 P. M.
Wednesday—Fr. Hutchinson, 11-12 A. M., 7-9 P. M. The other clergy, 3-5 and 7-9 P. M.

On Friday evening, December 5, at 8.15 o'clock, Rev. Hudson Stuck, Missionary to Alaska, will speak in the parish hall. Archdeacon Stuck, it will be remembered, has recently accomplished the ascent of Mt. McKinley. His lecture will be illustrated and it is hoped there will be a large attendance.

We extend our congratulations to the rector and congregation of the Church of St. John Chrysostom upon the occasion of the consecration of their church edifice. Fr. Sherlock, who was at one time a choir boy in St. Clement's, has done hard and effective work in the northern section of the city, and we rejoice with him in the fruition of his labors.

A very successful smoker for the men of the parish was held in the gymnasium on the evening of November 12. A pleasant evening was spent with music and refreshments and an election was held for officers of the organization. The following were elected: President, Mr. Francis Y. Casey; Secretary, Mr. E. F. Nolan; Treasurer, Mr. Richard Ashhurst, Jr.; Committee on Arrangements, Messrs. Souder, Daniels, Kraft. The next meeting will be held on Wednesday evening, December 10. All the men of the parish are asked to attend these gatherings.

The Girls' Club held its first meeting on Tuesday, Oct. 28. Mrs. Frank Homan was elected President, Miss Olive Daniels, Secretary, and Miss Lucy Decker, Treasurer. The Committee on Arrangements was appointed by the President as follows: Mrs. Florence Dailey, Misses Haskins, Garber and Righter. The club is meeting every Tuesday evening in the parish hall and a regular program for the winter has been arranged. On Tuesday evening, November 11, an exceedingly interesting illustrated lecture on Bermuda was given by Mr. Barr. There was a large attendance.

The Convention of the Diocese passed a resolution last spring that it was the sense of the Convention that all parochial offerings on Christmas Day, should be given to the Christmas Fund. This fund of the Diocese is used to provide for the widows and orphans of deceased clergymen, and for disabled clergymen. In compliance with this resolution the offering on Christmas will be given to this object. It is to be remembered, however, that the Accounting Warden is still in need of funds for the current expenses of the parish. Those who desire their offerings to be used for parish purposes will be good enough to mark them "For the parish." All undesignated money will be sent to the Christmas Fund.

A troop of Boy Scouts was organized in the parish on Thursday evening, October 30. About twenty boys were present at the first meeting. Mr. F. J. Romanes, the Scout Master for the Troop of the Boys' Club of the Church Club, was present and put before the boys the idea and purpose of the organization. On Thursday night, November 13, twelve boys who were able to pass the tenderfoot test took the Scout oath. The ceremony was conducted in St. John's Chapel. Scout Master Roney represented the organization and Fr. Patterson, in the absence of the Chaplain, took the service. After some fitting devotions the boys stood in line before the altar and repeated the oath together, which is as follows:

On my honor I will do my best

1—To do my duty to God and my country, and to obey the Scout Law.

2—To help other people at all times.

3—To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight.

The boys are showing great interest in the work and we hope before long to have a model troop at St. Clement's.

At the meeting following, the troop was divided into two patrols with Lionel Bergen and Albert Craft as patrol leaders.

ST. CLEMENT'S TIDE.

We have rarely had a more joyous festival than that which has just passed. The favorable weather made it possible for many to receive their communion, and both the early masses were largely attended. At the Solemn Mass the church was filled with a reverent and devout congregation, and the choir deserves great credit for its rendition of Gounod's St. Cecilia Mass. Mr. Fry had spared no pains in perfecting the work of the men and boys, and the service in its entirety was most devotional and inspiring. It was a real pleasure to welcome as the preacher our old friend Fr. Odell, the rector of the Church of the Annunciation. He preached a most helpful sermon and sounded a personal note that was especially sympathetic and intimate. Fr. Odell has been a friend of the parish for many years and has more than once helped the clergy by his wise and understanding counsel.

In the evening the nave was again filled and Fr. Capers, the rector of the Church of Holy Apostles, preached an excellent sermon on certain aspects of the parable of the Prodigal Son, in its application to the work of the Church. The choir was assisted by a quartette of horns, and again the musical rendition of the service left nothing to be desired.

The parish tea was held on Monday evening. A large number were present and the young people enjoyed a dance in the gymnasium later in the evening.

BETHLEHEM: THE HOUSE OF BREAD.

Draw nigh, O man, in fear,
Bend knee and head;
Its lintel is full low
Our House of Bread.

Though fair the housel cloth,
Its web is mean;
Yet she who span and spread
Is Heaven's Queen.

See, as high Altar meet
For Love's array,
She takes the kine's rough straw,
A lock of hay.

And till the royal Mage
His censer bring,
The beasts with harmless breath
Salute their King.

The Tabernacle stands
With wide-flung door,
And, as a lamp, His Star
Flames white before.

Ruddy as Sharon's Rose,
As lily white,
Lo! here exposed the Host
To mortal sight.

Ye humble men of heart,
Souls gone before,
Green Earth, yea, all His works,
Behold, adore!

LETTER FROM ALASKA.

The following is compiled from two letters received by two members of the parish from Miss Wightman, our parishioner in Salchaket, Alaska.

After a few days visit in Oregon I went to Seattle. There they had what they call the "Golden Patlatch." I went to five different hotels trying to get a room. At last I managed to get one at $3.00 a night. It cost me nearly $5.00 a day for a week. The train I arrived in was eight hours late, so I missed the boat on the 12th and had to wait over until the 18th. During my stay in Seattle I met many of the Northern people, did my buying and settled every thing up for a year. I had the Holy Communion the day I left with Mrs. Rowe, the Bishop's wife. She has been very ill and confined to her room for over three months. I thought it was so kind of her to think of me.

Trinity Church, Seattle, is furnishing the room back of my little chapel for the visiting clergy and Bishop when he comes to our mission. When the 18th arrived, that evening at 9 P. M., I was standing on deck watching the last of the "outside," as we call it here, for the last time for many months. Seattle was in its greatest beauty, lit up with electric displays from one end of the city to the other. It was a wonderful sight from the Sound as we slowly steamed out of view and left all the beauty that was artificial and faced the glory of the Great North which is the work of God's own hand. The vessel was called the "Great Northern," and was crowded from stem to stern. I think every thing one could think of in the animal line was on board. Cattle to meet their doom at the journey's end, and men of all sorts and sizes, rich and poor, filling every sort of position in life. All for the most part bound for the copper mines.

The trip through the inside passage was beautiful. The blue water, blue sky, blue glaciers and not a cloud to mar the beautiful heavens. The snow-capped mountains, the glorious sunsets at midnight, the little villages and towns built close to the mountains as if they expected a storm and hugged closely for protection. The moving icebergs kept every one watchful and every minute was filled with change of scenery. When I reached Skagway, I left the boat and bid farewell to a great number of people whom I had met on board.

I made good connection with train and boats all the way through and I surprised all the people by arriving at Fairbanks the last day of July. I tried to get some one to bring me here, but the rainy season had set in and no one wanted to make the trip. At last I left Fairbanks on August 2, at 4 A. M., with a freighter, perched high up on top of a wagon. What was under me I can never say. These freighters carry every thing you can think of. I am sure I looked like a circus woman in one of those moving shows that one sees so often in the West going from town to town.

My ride was not an easy one by any means. I swayed to and fro, backward and forward, and when the wagon went down on one side I clung to whatever I could hold to, so that I might not take a header. It was rainy and I carried an umbrella, besides my bird cage and some flowers. It took all my time trying to keep on the wagon. The driver was on a seat far in front of me. He chewed tobacco and every mile I am sure he took a drink of whisky, for the bottle seemed to be up in the air most of the time. You may be sure that I was relieved when I saw the roofs of the village cabins. I was two days on the trail, staying over night at a road house. When the natives saw me the news flew like wildfire, and they seemed to come from all directions—men, women and children, to say nothing of the dogs. I was so glad to see them and they to see me that we cried and laughed alternately. It must have been a funny sight. When my dog, Robert Bruce, saw me, he gave one low cry and all the dogs gave a leap and nearly knocked me over. My clothes were wet, for it had rained all day, so one of our people made a fire and some tea, the women took my things off and made up my bed, took off my wet shoes and brought a pair of slippers. The children brought me some flowers and put them in a vase on the table where they remembered I always kept any that were to be had, and some of the men brought me meat and fish. As it was Sunday night, they all gathered around me and we had prayers, and each man said a few Indian words of welcome. A happy people rested here that night. I was happy and thankful that I had returned to them. They are all so grateful for what is done. I pray God may give me strength to do His will here in the far North.

We had a regular hurricane here the last of August. It snowed and blew from the 20th to the 30th. Imagine six feet of snow in the month of August! September was lovely but now we are having our real winter days. It has snowed for three days and is still snowing. The thermometer registers 12 below zero. It certainly looks like winter. But my little cabin is very cosy, and I have been wishing for some one to chat with and have tea. The Woman's Auxiliary things arrived safely in Fairbanks and they will be here in a few days. Here one must have the greatest patience with freight. At least I have my bed. I bought a bedstead and springs in Seattle, such as they use in hospitals. Now I can scarcely believe my eyes when I look in the corner of my room and see a real bed. When I took the nails (for nails are precious here) out of the old one and saw the rough boards, I wondered how I ever rested on it. We never realize what we can do until we have to try. I have still another little home-made bed beside my own. Little Philip, aged four years, is quite ill and I have him here with me trying to make his little life happy the few weeks he may be on this earth. He will not get better, as he has tuberculosis. I know it is not quite right to have him in the same room with myself, but I cannot do otherwise. So you see, with the services and the children in the morning, the older girls in the afternoon, and Philip, I am very busy. Susie, who was with me for a while, is far from well, and I had to let her go home, so I have no one to help me excepting at such times as the girls come in and scrub and wash for me. Last Sunday I had a service in the morning and then walked seven miles to Tenana River bluff to see one of my girls who is very ill. I left my house at 1 P. M., arriving there at 3, over a bad trail, wet and muddy. I bathed her and fixed her up, had a service, left at 4 and arrived home tired, muddy and wet at 7.30, and had a service at 8. Then tea at 10, and a bath, and then to bed, so you see how busy I was. The service I had that Sunday afternoon was very simple but lovely, and God seemed very near to us. Several families are camping there, getting their winter fish. We had the service in the open air by the river bank. When I looked at the white-capped mountains, the blue sky and the tall trees and running water I felt that the noblest Cathedral could not be more beautiful. And our service was full of devotion to Him who died to save all men. We are children of the woods, and no matter how beautiful we try to make our poor dear Chapel, our services cannot be more wonderful or touching than that Sunday afternoon beneath the setting sun of the North.

MISSIONARY NOTES.

An unprecedented condition in the Church arose in the simultaneous resignation of the missionary bishops of Southern Florida, Spokane and Cuba which, with the vacancies in New Mexico and Porto Rico, necessitated the election of five new missionary bishops. The Bishop of North Dakota having been transferred to Southern Florida, the House of Bishops sent nominations to the five vacant jurisdictions down to the House of Deputies, and all received confirmation, but before the convention closed declinations were received from three of five bishops-elect. Two of the positions thus vacated were filled by a new election, but the District of Spokane is left without a bishop, and some time is liable to elapse before the place can be filled. Meanwhile Bishop Wells remains in charge. Two of the bishops-elect, those of Cuba and Porto Rico, were chosen from the ranks of the missionaries in foreign fields. Bishop Knight will remain in charge of his several West Indian fields until bishops have been consecrated for them. He will retain oversight for the present of the Canal Zone.

The transforming power of Christianity is evidenced in the following statement made by Bishop Morrison in one of the joint sessions of the recent General Convention: "The instinct of revenge is one of the fundamental impulses of the Indian; but there is one power which can change even that. The Bishop told how the 14th of June is the great holiday of the Ojibways, and is the time he chooses for his visitation. This year many Sioux were present to join in the annual reunion. One of the Ojibway native priests administered the chalice to Sioux who in years past had killed his father; they had told him how bravely his father had died in battle against them; but peace and brotherly affection had brought them together by the Blood of the Cross."

The first industrial school in the world was founded in Hawaii by American missionaries many years ago. From these mission schools have gone out the men who effected the Chinese revolution, as well as political and social leaders in China, Korea, Japan and the Philippines. While the population of the Islands has increased 25 per cent., the Church's communicant list has increased 400 per cent.

The Triennial Service of the Woman's Auxiliary took place in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York, on October 9th. It was the greatest assembly of the women of the Church ever held, and the United Thankoffering, which they have been gathering for the last three years, amounted to $306,000.

Bishop Graves, of Shanghai, says: "The real emergency is in the United States rather than in China—the emergency which calls us to seize for God the marvelous opportunities He is placing before us. We need to rise to the realization of the fact that our missions are not small and feeble, but powerful in their influence upon the national life of China. Chinese laymen are showing by their gifts how fully they realize what a force for upbuilding their national and moral life our work among them is. And we need, above all other needs, men for the work.

In the triennial sermon, preached before the Board of Missions at the opening of the General Convention in New York, Bishop Roots, of China, thus summarized the four duties which the Church in America owes to other lands: (1) We must send out our best, in human lives, in prayer, in gifts, to help Christianize the world-powers of the future. (2) We must set the example of a united Christianity, for one example is worth ten thousand precepts. (3) We must do this now, for this is the day of golden opportunity in China, and "the progress of events" (as we faithlessly call God's ordering of this world) will not wait for our self-satisfied dandling. (4) We must see and treat Christian unity as a problem affecting, not a few religious societies or a few civilized lands, but as a great world-problem vitally affecting the unborn generations of nations yet unnamed. That is the way the Chinese see the problem of Christian unity, and unless we treat it in that spirit all our efforts toward it will help them not at all.

The Rev. F. A. Russell, who was a delegate to the General Convention from the district of Liberia, was the first African priest to visit the United States. Mr. Russell's father and mother were among the first Christian converts of this Church in Africa, and he himself is a product of our educational work, wherein lies the only hope of permanent success in Africa.

Three missionary districts have received a change of title by action of the House of Bishops. The District of Kearney becomes Western Nebraska; Cape Palmas becomes the District of Liberia, and in China the euphonious Wuhu becomes the District of Anking. The cession of two countries by the diocese of West Texas to the District of North Texas adds material strength to the latter field. The diocese of Erie was admitted into union with the General Convention, and Haiti was accepted as a foreign missionary district.

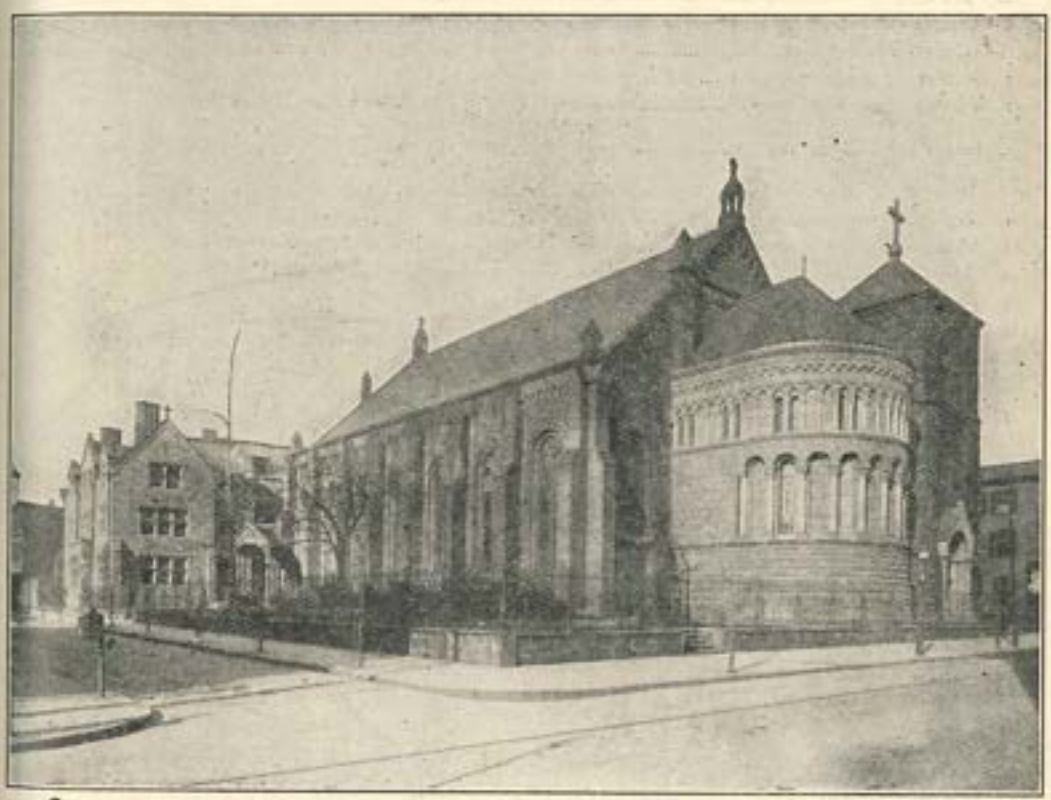
Bishop Lloyd, president of the Board of Missions, sailed for the Hague on November 1st to attend the meeting of the Continuation Committee of the Edinburgh Conference as its representative.

Bishop Rowe, of Alaska, says: "In the Eskimo work, as all over Alaska, 'the women-of-God put the men to shame.' Again and again that field furnishes examples of devoted women doing not only a man's job, but often two or three or four or a dozen men's jobs, and doing them splendidly, often standing utterly alone through one after another of the long Arctic nights."

During the last eighteen months, in the fields under the charge of Bishop Knight—Cuba, Haiti, Porto Rico and the Canal Zone—there have been 1,200 confirmed and over 3,000 baptized.

The giving of a fractional vote on all subjects to the domestic missionary districts was the successful ending, by the recent General Convention, of a movement of thirty-three years' duration. Delegates from the foreign fields succeed to the status formerly held by the domestic districts, and have a vote on matters not involving a vote by orders.

The General Convention of 1916, meeting in St. Louis, the home of the presiding bishop, will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of Bishop Tuttle's election as a missionary bishop.



The General Convention passed a concurrent resolution providing for a Church Missionary Exhibit at the Panama Exposition, in San Francisco, in 1915.

THE DAILY JUDGMENT.

Look upon me, Lord, in all my diverse possibilities, in all my contradictory impulses, now pure, and now impure; now prepared to love, and now full of scorn and bitterness, and choose Thou in me that which is Thine own; draw out in me, accomplish, realize, and manifest that part which pleases Thee, and pour into me that which I have not by natural descent; bring forth to-day the heavenly life which was planted in me in my baptism; grant me such fresh floods of the Holy Ghost that it may be as if I were regenerated afresh, that I may be as one now born anew and from above. —P. N. Waggett, S.S.J.E., in The Age of Decision, page 99.

PARISH NOTES.

On the Feast of the Conversion of St. Paul, the Rev. Dr. Rogers, president of St. Stephen's College, will preach in the morning.

On Tuesday, the seventeenth of December, Chaplain Stevenson, of the United States Navy, gave an interesting lecture in the Parish House, under the auspices of the Girls' Club. The subject was a trip around the world in a United States Man-of-War. The attendance was gratifying.

On Friday evening, the fifth of December, the Ven. Hudson Stuck gave a most interesting illustrated lecture in the Parish Hall on his work in the missionary district of Alaska. This was one of the first of a series of missionary addresses to be given at intervals during the winter. Archdeacon Stuck is one of the better known of our missionaries and the lecture was well attended.

On Wednesday evening, the tenth of December, the second monthly smoker of the Men's Club was held in the gymnasium. There were about fifty men present. After a short business meeting, Mr. Massey did some prestidigital tricks, after which Mr. Dyver and others sang some vocal selections. After refreshments there was a general good time. These meetings are an enjoyable way of promoting good fellowship in the parish, and it is too bad that they are not better attended. At the next meeting, on the second Wednesday evening in January, Sheridan's farce—"St. Patrick's Day; or, The Scheming Lieutenant"—will be presented by members of the Club.

On Friday night, December 10, there was a lecture on the "Principles of Catholic Religious Education," by the Rev. G. L. Richardson, rector of St. Mary's Church, West Philadelphia. A number of parishioners were on hand, is addition to the teachers of the Sunday school. Father Richardson emphasized that we are a teaching church, not simply a teaching Sunday school and confirmation class; and that therefore every communicant should be a well-instructed missionary, alert for opportunities to explain what we believe and why we believe it. Father Richardson is lecturing this winter at the General Seminary, New York, on sociological topics.

GUILD OF ST. NICHOLAS.

The shower baths have been repaired, and a cement floor laid in place of the terra cotta tiles.

On Tuesday, 16th December, a basketball team from St. Mark's, Frankford, won from G. S. N. by two points in a thrilling game. From a score of 12 to 2 in favor of St. Mark's, the points became 15 for each, the game ending 17 to 15. Much credit is due to our physical instructor, Dr. J. Richard Allison, U. of P., M.S., and to Clinton Jenkins, of St. Vincent's Guild.

The Sheet Brasswork Class has never been so flourishing as just now. One boy has executed a fine placque, showing the design of an elk's head. Other boys are ornamenting boxes, picture frames, sconces and lamp shades in attractive relief. This form of manual work was taken up in October at the wish of the boys themselves, who were also unanimous in asking that their popular instructor, Mr. Morris May, should again take charge.

The enrolment of the G. S. N. is now about 125, and the usual Tuesday attendance between 40 and 50, and it may become necessary to give an extra night to the gym work, under the direction, however, of an unpaid instructor.

THE CHURCH BOY SCOUTS.

Weekly hikes have taken place under the leadership of the Scoutmaster, Mr. Thatcher Souder, and his assistant, Mr. Donald Kent, U. of P. Troop 5, in this parish, is open to all boys of merit who are willing to work for their tests. It is well that there should be an organization which can be entered only by boys who prove their ability. Several boys under 12 are taken on hikes under the provision which allows for "Scout Friends." The regular meetings of the scouts are on Thursday nights at 7.30. Inquiries may be addressed to the Rector, who is Chaplain.

THE SATURDAY CLASSES.

Under the admirable supervision of the Sisters of All Saints, with teachers from Drexel Institute, manual work is now taught to more children than ever, there being about 75 on the roll. The Christmas party was held on the afternoon of St. John Evangelist's day, with plenty of smiling parents and beaming babies to look on and applaud. The classes this winter are in kindergarten, cooking, beadwork, basketry, leatherwork, weaving, hammock-making, sewing and dressmaking. The Rector and one of his assistants are particularly in favor of the boys' cooking class after personal inspection of the candy and gingerbread.

MEN'S CLUB ATHLETICS.

St. Clement's opened its Saturday afternoon basket ball series on December 13 by defeating U. G. I. in a fast game, 47 to 34. The passing of the St. Clement's team featured the game.

CHRISTMAS TIDE AT ST. CLEMENT'S.

We have had a particularly happy Christmas festival. A large number made their Communions at the early Masses, and there was also a good congregation at 11 o'clock.

The decorations have proved very satisfactory. The old wooden screen was not in condition to go up again, but fir trees were effective used in the sanctuary and choir. The trees on either side of the triptych were unusually beautiful. Owing to the danger in using oil lamps for the crêche at the side altar, a single incandescent light was hung, and the effectiveness of the manger is greatly heightened. Strangers remark on the good art of our manger figures.

The music on Christmas Day was a credit to the organist and choir. The setting of the late Mass was Moir in D. The composition has not been heard before in this parish and was especially pleasing and carefully done. After the Mass Mr. Fry very kindly went with the choir and one of the clergy to the House of Detention on Arch street. Three hymns, the Sanctus and Benedictus qui venit were sung in the school room.

There were carols and prayers in St. John's Chapel on Monday night, December 29. Afterward Laurence Housman's poetical mystery play, "Bethlehem," was given by the children in the parish hall, under the direction of Father Patterson. Both the little actors and their audience entered into the religious spirit of that which was a real act of devotion in dramatic form. Modern life is matter-of-fact, but such a little play as this goes to show that the Catholic faith is a real thing to children as well as their elders.

MRS. CATHARINE J. BALL, MRS. ELIZABETH CUTHBERT SMITH.

Our Christmas joy has been tempered with sadness by the death during the festal season of two of our oldest parishioners. On December 22 Mrs. Catharine Ball entered into rest. She had been an invalid for many years, and the end came as a release from prolonged suffering, courageously and patiently borne.

Mrs. Elizabeth Cuthbert Smith rendered her spirit to God on the Feast of St. John the Evangelist after several months' illness.

Both were women of rare virtues and sterling Christian character, of the type that was built up in the parish during the years of persecution and struggle, when allegiance to the Catholic faith meant the bearing of criticism and misunderstanding from many sources.

We may count it a high privilege that such brave, sweet souls as these have been among the "honorable women" of St. Clement's parish.

Grant unto them, O Lord, Eternal Rest, and let Light Perpetual shine upon them.

EPIPHANY.

"Arise, Shine, for Thy Light is Come."

O Lord, the midnight silence sings of Thee;
The midnight darkness may not hide Thy star;
And never shall the souls unguided be
That seek Thee from afar.

Encompassed with Thy love's infinity,
They tread the path unknown—unknown to them—
Until, in sudden ecstacy, they see
Their longed-for Bethlehem.

O happy starlit quest that ends in Thee,
True House of Bread, love's mystic mortal shrine,
O happy seeking souls, unerringly
Led home by light divine. —Selected.

MISSIONARY NOTES.

On December 17, in the chapel of the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., the Rev. C. B. Colmore, Dean of the cathedral in Havana, was consecrated as Bishop of Porto Rico, in succession to the Rt. Rev. Dr. Van Buren, resigned. Bishop Colmore will also be in charge of Haiti. Thus Sewanee sends forth to the mission field another of her sons, and again approves her value of the work of the Church.

After a long illness, on December 18, Bishop H. D. Robinson, of Nevada, died in St. Luke's Hospital, New York. Bishop Robinson was a graduate of Racine College, where he was under the famous James DeKoven. He had a most successful career as a teacher, becoming warden of his own college, from which post he was elected to the missionary episcopate. For nearly five years he exercised his office in Nevada, and died at the age of fifty-four, leaving a widow. The burial service was held in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York, and his body is interred at his old home in Racine.

With the death of the Rev. Reuben D. Nevius, D. D., at Tacoma, Wash., on November 26, there passes another of the missionary pioneers. For sixty years Doctor Nevius exercised his ministry, first in the South and then in the far West. The States of Oregon and Washington contain thirty parishes and missions of which he was the founder. He even made a scouting trip to Alaska before the days of Bishop Rowe. Ten years ago he retired from active missionary work but continued to exercise his ministry at St. Peter's Church, Tacoma.

At its meeting on December 10 the Board of Missions made several appointments to the foreign field. Conspicuous among them was that of Miss Eleanor Verbeck as a missionary to Japan. Miss Verbeck is a daughter of the famous Dr. Guido Verbeck, pioneer missionary of the Reformed Dutch Church, to whom Japan owes an enormous debt for his services as an educator, and who exercised in the transition days an influence equal to that of princes. So conspicuous a national figure did he become that he is familiarly known in missionary history as "Verbeck of Japan." His daughter has long been a faithful member of the Church, and returns as one of its messengers to the land where she was born.

On December 20 there was consecrated in Philadelphia a church for the deaf mutes, the rector of which is himself a deaf mute. The cost of the erection was largely borne by the members of the congregation, notwithstanding the fact that by reason of their affliction they are usually people of small means. It is hoped that in our large cities other centers may be established for the work among these children of silence.

Pennsylvania has a foreign-born population of 1,438,719. This total does not include the children born in this country to foreign-born parents. More than 800,000 are from southern and eastern Europe.

Bishop Roots, of Hankow, in speaking of the opportunity for work in China, gave utterance to what seemed a Hibernianism when he said that our greatest chance for work in China is here in America. "Why," he asked, "do you treat the Chinese as you do? Unless you deal squarely with the Chinese here, we shall have no opportunity in Hankow. We must make the action of our nation a true expression of the spirit of Christ in international affairs."

Bishop Knight has received a petition signed by sixty Cuban churchmen, expressing the hope that a native Cuban may be consecrated suffragan bishop. Under the present canon this would not be possible, as no provision is made for the consecration of suffragans in missionary districts.

If you were a Sunday school superintendent, and a man with thirty-five children appeared, what would you think? That was the experience of Rev. J. M. B. Gill, of Hanking, China. He writes on May 26: "Sunday a week ago, at my Sunday school, I was surprised to see a man come in with about thirty-five children following him. We are used to big families in China, but nothing like that. He informed me that he was the head of a day-school nearby, had heard of our doctrine, desired to bring his school in every Sunday for instruction, and desired to be instructed himself also. That was quite an addition to our Sunday school, and with only myself and one young Chinese communicant who, during the week, runs my reading-room for me, to do the teaching, it pushes us rather hard."

From the United Offering of 1910 $5,000 were set aside towards the erection of a new dormitory for young women students at St. Augustine's School, Raleigh. It was determined to make the building a memorial to the late George C. Thomas, former treasurer of the Board of Missions. The construction work was carried on vigorously so far as the money in hand would permit. For many months the unfinished building has stood as an appeal and challenge to the people of the church to complete a work well begun. The Auxiliary at its last triennnial meeting in New York decided to give another $5,000 from the United Offering of 1913. This amount, together with the individual gifts that have been made from time to time by many good friends in different parts of the country, and the sum the students have undertaken to raise, will be sufficient to complete the south wing of the building. Unfortunately the money so far given has been sufficient only for actual building operations and has not sufficed for equipment. The result is a debt of about $4,500 for the heating and plumbing. As the building was absolutely useless without this expenditure, it seemed wise to the Rev. A. B. Hunter and his advisors on the Board of Trustees to assume the obligation. The completed portion of the building was formally opened on November 26 by Bishop Cheshire.

The well-known play "Quo Vadis '" was recently shown in moving pictures in Tokyo. One of our missionaries writes that every performance was attended by crowds of well educated and prominent Japanese, who paid for the privilege of listening to what was really a Christian sermon. The story of the pictures was told as each scene was reproduced. One missionary said that one such performance seemed to him to be worth about all the sermons he could possibly preach. There can be little doubt of the impression created by the portrayal of the trials, patience and the courage of the early Christians.

COMPENSATION AND REPARATION.

When the author of Ecclesiasticus, before the Incarnation, gave a reason for the splendor of God's worship, he found it in the Majesty of God. (Ecclus. xliii, 28, 29, 30). But, if we be asked now to give a reason for using all possible splendor, and all possible exactitude, in the worship of God, we shall find that reason not merely in the Majesty of God, but in His humiliations—and the worship of Christians is not merely adoration, but it is compensation.

Compensation and reparation are instincts natural to the human heart. When a man has been to some expense, or gone through labor, or endured suffering, or submitted to humiliation for the sake of another, if the latter has any feeling of generosity, he resolves to make some return to his benefactor. It would be strange, indeed, if this instinct of the human heart found no place in the worship of Jesus Christ.

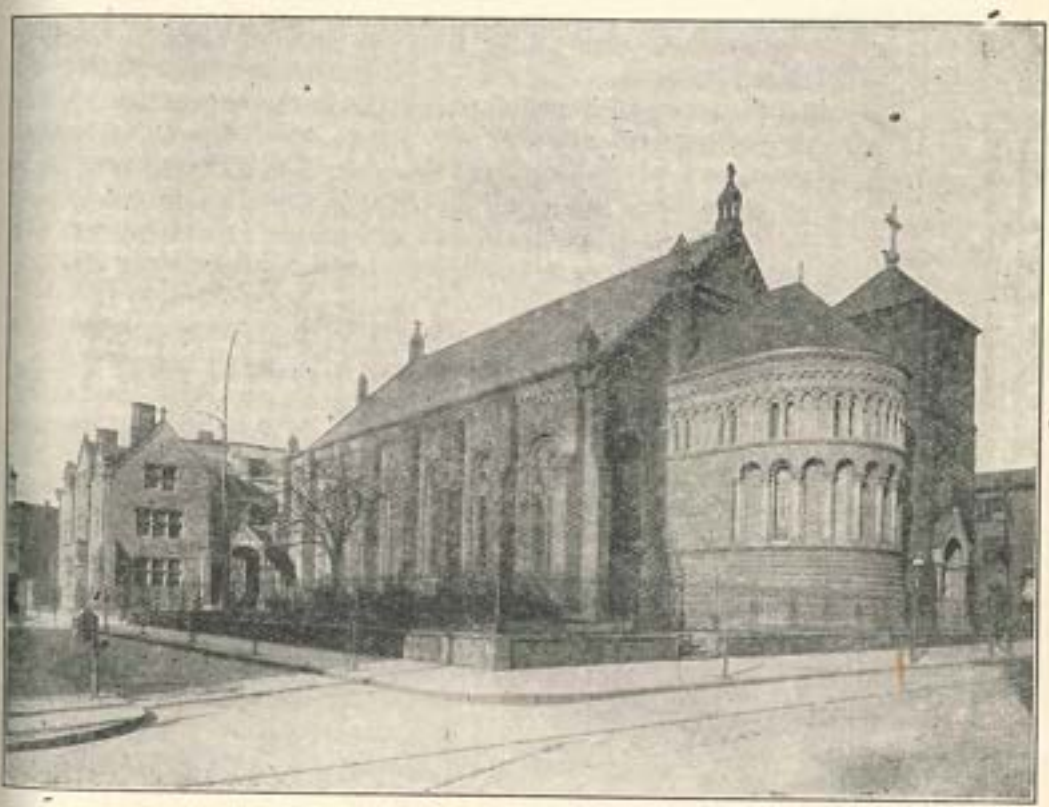
A writer, whose argument betrays an almost incredible confusion of mind, says, "Our Lod's whole life on earth was conducted in the very simplest and plainest manner. Should we not try to imitate His walk, if we are really anxious, for religion's sake, to act rightly?" I reply, that to imitate our Divine Master's poverty in what regards ourselves, is a sublime Evangelical counsel; but to retain our riches for personal use, and refuse to employ them in His worship, on the plea that for our sakes He became poor, is as sordid a sophism as ever entered the human heart. He cannot help recalling our Lord's saying about the children in the market place.

The Church may pipe to men, and they will not dance. She may mourn, and they will not lament. "Let the worship of Jesus Christ be rich and splendid," she says. "No!" "Then," cries the Church again, "if Jesus Christ loves poverty now, imitate Him in your own lives." "No," again answers the world; "it is enough that Christ was born in a manger; His children are not always to tabernacle there. Christ is not to be the pauper of the universe forever; He is to be the King of Glory."—H. W. Beecher.

I will accept these words in a nobler sense. No! "Christ is not to be the pauper of the universe for ever." We will not treat Him as a pauper, because, for our sakes. He became poor.

Was not that the thought of the Wise Men of the East, when they found Him in the crib of Bethlehem? Because as He seemed weak and lowly, they prostrated themselves at His feet; because He seemed so poor they opened their treasures and offered their gifts. Had theirs been the modern Protestant theory, how would they have acted? When they found the King of the Jews in such unexpected circumstances, they would have conferred together. They would have said, "We have made a gross mistake; we thought, before setting out on our journey, according to our traditional notion, that God should be worshiped by prostrations, and by the offering of gifts. Yet does not this spectacle now before our eyes convince us of the contrary? Look at that little Infant wrapped in poor swaddling clothes. What can be made 'simple and plain;' nay, abject and miserable, than his appearance? If He has chosen poverty, let us not insult Him with our treasures. If He loves to be humble let us not contradict him by our prostrations." Such language must sound ludicrous and irreverent. Let us then repeat again, "Christ is not to be the pauper of the universe forever."

PART II.



When the Fathers were assembled at Ephesus for the consideration of the teaching of Nestorius the Heresiarch, in the presence of several Bishops, exclaimed, that he could never bring himself to adore as his God a Child laid in a manger, nourished at a woman's breast, and seeking refuge from his persecutors by flight. As this pretended reverence for the Majesty of God had made impression on some gross minds, several Bishops undertook to explain the mystery of the Incarnation to the people. Amongst others was the learned Theodotus of Ancyra. He preached before an immense concourse in the Church of the Blessed Virgin. The importance of the occasion, the magnificence of the place, and the dignity of the assembly, inspired animation into his words; and after having shown that the humiliation of the Son of God, being chosen voluntarily, were a proof, not of weakness, but of clemency in God, and a manifestation rather than a contradiction of the Divine attributes, he confirmed what he had been saying by an appeal to what was passing before their very eyes. "That little child," he cried, "who by His secret and ineffable power drew then the Magi to His crib, is the same, who has gathered now this venerable assembly, and brought about this glad festivity, now not laid in the manger, but exposed for veneration on this altar. That crib indeed is the parent of this Holy Table. He was laid in that, that he might be distributed from this, as the life-giving food of the faithful. Yes! that crib was a prophecy of this magnificent altar; the virgin, who knelt there, has become the mother of the choirs of consecrated virgins who worship here; the squalor of the stable of Bethlehem has built this glorious Temple, and the swaddling clothes, which bound those infant limbs, have purchased for us the loosing of the bonds of sin today."

His words were received with applause; for, in those days, when the memory of the days of persecution was still fresh, and the conversion of the empire had but recently allowed the Church to develop the magnificence of external worship, Christians did not look on the new order of things as a contradiction, but as a compensation for the constraint and poverty of former years. They saw, in the change, that the mustard seed had grown into a tree; that the leaven was penetrating, and raising the whole mass of human institutions.

PARISH NOTES.

The parish retreat will be held this year on Ash Wednesday. Addresses at 10, 12 and 3.

The turkey supper was held on Thursday evening, January 8. About 140 were present.

The usual service of Intercession will be held daily during Lent at 4.45 P. M. in the Church.

Father Patterson sailed on the Celtic from New York on January 24. He will make an extended tour of the Mediterranean countries.

On Friday evening, January 2, Father Beede gave a lecture on the "Precepts and Commandments," illustrated by stereopticon. The slides were made in France.

The Girls' Club gave their first dance on Tuesday night, January 13, in the Parish Hall. About thirty couples were present. An orchestra of three pieces furnished the music, and refreshments were served at the close of the evening.

On Quinquagesima Sunday the offerings at all the Masses will be devoted to our Missionary Apportionment. We hope that this may be the last time that a special collection will be necessary. If the duplex envelope is introduced into the parish and each member of the congregation does his part, the amount asked of us ought to be raised without difficulty. The amount of our apportionment this year is $2,506, or $1,000 less than last year. Of this amount the parish has contributed up to the present writing about $300.

On January 14 the Men's Club held its monthly smoker. The feature of the evening was the presentation of Sheridan's comedy, "St. Patrick's Day," by some of our young men. The characters were as follows:

Lieutenant O'Connor, Mr. Nolan.
Dr. Rosy, Mr. Alfred Johnson.
Justice Credulous, Mr. Francis Casey.
Lauretta, Mr. Leon Kraft.
Mrs. Bridget Credulous, Mr. J. L. Covert.

The company was coached by Father Patterson. Preceding the play an acrobatic exhibition was given in the gymnasium.

We take this opportunity of referring to the Quarterly Intercessions for Missions. The leaflet is printed by the Order of the Holy Cross for the Church Prayer League. For one copy, 25 cents per year. For five or more copies sent to one address, at the rate of 10 cents a copy per year. The Junior Prayer Card (which we shall shortly give to the members of our Sunday school) is issued each quarter as a supplement to the leaflet. The leaflets are published in January, April, July and October, at Holy Cross, West Park, N. Y. The missionary districts covered by the April issue will be Hankow, South Dakota, Cuba, Western Colorado, Idaho and Honolulu.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

This parish is blessed with teachers who are almost never late nor absent. Any one who has done Sunday school work in other parishes will appreciate the value of this statement.

The children now go directly from 9.15 Mass to classes. Announcements are made through the teachers, and more time is thus given to the lessons.

Beginning on January 25, Miss Hutchinson resumed her young men's Bible class. Mr. Clinton Jenkins has gathered the grammar school boys into a class, numbering twenty-five. We need another man teacher for growing boys. Miss Catherine Boss is teaching a new class for primary boys.

We are praying for a larger attendance on Sunday at Mass and classes. We have plenty of children on the roll. The hard thing is to get them all out at times other than festival parties.

GUILD OF ST. NICHOLAS.

The younger boys held their winter indoor athletics on Tuesday night, February 3. Details of the carnival will need to be reserved until next month's issue.

Our home team is proud of its defeat of the Bellevue Athletic Club on January 6 by a score of 25 to 9. St. Clement's team was made up of Russell Copestick and Arthur Riley, forwards; Norman Ruark, center; and Lionel Bergen and Marshall Watts, Jr., guards. The B. A. A. players were A. Hafner, C. Ward, J. Henry, C. McIntyre and J. Dailey, all of whom are said to be adherents of another branch of the Church Universal.

The tables were turned on January 20, when G. S. N. was defeated by a discord of 26 to 18 in favor of an unofficial team of the Evening Home Club.

If any one cares to give specific donations for the gym and manual work, the managers will gladly make suggestions.

THE GUILD OF INTERCESSION.

Beginning with this number the monthly Parish Intercession sheet will be placed as an insert in each copy of ST. CLEMENT'S MAGAZINE. Readers of our little paper will be generous to help us with their prayers. Indeed the reading over once of the petitions by so many friends will assist us incalculably.

We should be glad to receive the names of persons who will agree to say the prayers every month. There are no dues nor formalities.

Intercessions should be written on separate slips of paper and addressed to the League of Intercession, the Clergy House.

We shall be happy to receive word of answers to prayers contained in our leaflet.

CHURCH BOY SCOUTS.

All church people will be interested to know of the admirable English manual of the Church Boy Scouts. There is a preface by the Archbishop of Canterbury. There is need, however, of an American edition.

Our Troop No. 5 is enlarging and improving. Mr. Firman Wilde, one of our acolytes, is to teach military tactics. When spring comes on there will be more hiking and out-of-door work.

Regular meetings every Thursday at 7.30 in the gym.

Basket ball continues to be in order every Saturday afternoon. Following are the scores to date:

LENT.

Once again the Christian year brings us to the Holy Fast. The Lenten season comes to us with a challenge and an exhortation. A challenge as to the reality of our Christian life and an exhortation that we strive to walk "worthy of the vocation wherewith we are called."

To the majority of us it is to be feared that Lent is an unprofitable season. Easter breaks upon us to find in our hearts a vague sense of disappointment and discontent. Our consciences accuse us of having failed to make the best use of our opportunities and little seems to have been accomplished toward the deepening of our spiritual life.

There are perhaps two causes for this: First, we have probably been too little in earnest in the making and keeping of our Lenten Rule; and, second, we have been unwilling to relinquish some form of worldly pleasure or to use any real self-discipline at all.

If the Lenten Fast is to bear fruit in our souls, it must be a time of strong purpose and fixed determination to share in the Passion of Jesus Christ. A sentimental and superficial attitude of mind will accomplish nothing.

We must be ready for work, and for hard work; and we must work gladly and cheerfully. The work should be a resolute battle against some special fault or sin. It is not difficult for us to find the faults or to discover the sin. Each one knows in his own heart just where the discipline is most sorely needed. The question is, will each one have enough love for Jesus Christ and sufficient earnestness of purpose to attempt the discipline.

We must be willing to give our whole time to the accomplishment of this purpose. Theatre going, including the bedizened company of those who frequent the tawdry boxes at the opera, dances and such like amusements must be resolutely put aside. The soul does not learn its lessons of penitence and contrition in the garish and godless light of modern society. Any Christian who is really in earnest will endeavor to learn these lessons in the quiet of the Church or in the restful environment of his own home.

In this connection there should be definite rule as to Church going. The attendance at the Masses should be increased and one or two of the extra services in the parish Church should be attended weekly. The Holy Spirit may be trusted to do the rest if, with an earnest and sincere intention, we enter upon our Lenten season.

It may be as well to say a word here as to attendance upon the noon-day services at the Garrick Theatre. These services are held primarily for the men and women who are employed in offices during the day and are unable to find time for the services in their parish Churches, or for those who have no real conception of the Christian life who may perhaps be touched by some word that may be spoken. They are most emphatically not intended for pious men and women who have every privilege given them in their own Churches. It is to be feared that the noon-day Lenten preaching is fast becoming a fad which it is the "proper thing" to "take up." The increasing number of automobiles before the door of the Garrick Theatre would seem to imply this, especially on days when some popular preacher, who has caught the sentimental fancy of the community, has been advertised to speak. Then what excited discussion there is, forsooth, as to whether Father P. is more spiritual than Brother K., and how "wonderful" the language of Dr. Q.

Last year several cases were brought to the writer's notice of tired and spiritually-hungry working men and women who were obliged, again and again, either to leave the service or to stand throughout, because persons who had plenty of time at their disposal had arrived at the very time of the opening of the doors in order to obtain the "highest seats." In consequence of this supreme but intensely "spiritual" selfishness, the auditorium was well filled before the noon hour struck, and there was little room for those who could not come "ahead of time."

The noon-day services are no place for those who have time and opportunity to go to their own Churches, and one shudders to think of the state, mentally and spiritually, of an habitual "sermon taster."

Let us, during the coming season, give ourselves more particularly to prayer. There should be an increased attendance of both men and women at the daily service of Intercession in the Church. This service has accomplished much for us in the past. It would accomplish yet more if our congregation would send to the clergy a larger number of subjects for intercession and be more regular in their attendance.

Let us strive, above all things during this Lent, to be more earnest, and more honest, in our purpose, our self-discipline, and our prayers.

MISSIONARY NOTES.

In the month of January two new missionary bishops were consecrated, each in the Church where he had served as rector for many years. Rev. J. Poyntz Tyler, at St. John's, Hagerstown, was made bishop of North Dakota. The Rev. Frederick B. Howden, in St. John's Church, Georgetown, D. C., was consecrated for New Mexico. Rather curiously, Bishop Howden has been in past years, and Bishop Tyler was at the time of his election, Archdeacon of the Cumberland.

In this day of new things in changing China, one is not surprised to hear of the organization of the first Chinese squad of Boy Scouts. They are sixty in number, and are the younger pupils of Boone University, Wuchang, our splendid educational institution in central China. The president of the University reports that they enter most heartily into the movement, and that there is already great promise of resulting good.

Point Hope, Alaska, is in continuous darkness for a considerable portion of the year. It lies far within the Arctic Circle, and is our northernmost mission, influencing and Christianizing not only the immediate dwellers of the locality, but many other bands of Eskimos within a large radius. Bishop Rowe has arranged to light up Point Hope. It is to have an electric plant, which is to be designed and built by Dr. Temple, of the Engineering Department of the University of Pennsylvania. Power will be obtained from windmills driven by the gales from Asia which blow almost continuously upon that bleak coast. Not only light, but a certain amount of electric power will be furnished.

What a contrast to the condition of these people twenty years ago, when Dr. Driggs landed among them, and when they were the helpless and degraded prey of the crews of passing whaling vessels!

Great distress is being experienced in Japan. The volcanic eruptions and earthquakes in the south have cost the lives of hundreds, and have rendered thousands homeless. This disaster was in the Anglican diocese of Kyu-shiu. In the north has appeared the still greater scourge of famine. This extends into a portion of our own district of Tokyo. There will undoubtedly be great suffering and the aid of sympathetic Christian people is greatly desired. Contributions for the sufferers will be received and forwarded by the treasurer of the Board of Missions, Mr. George Gordon King, 281 Fourth avenue, New York.

A little book, called "Information," published by the Educational Department of the Board of Missions, should be in the hands of every member of the Church. It tells the Why, How, What and Where of the Church's Missions. It may be obtained for five cents a copy by sending to the Educational Department, 281 Fourth avenue, New York.

At the meeting of the Executive Committee, held January 13, the treasurer of the Board was able to report that up to January last there had been an increase of $18,000 over the same date last year. At the same time, however, it had been found necessary to increase the appropriations in the sum of about $25,000.

With the coming of Lent the children of the Church enter upon the raising of their thirty-eighth annual missionary offering. The gift of the first year, thirty-seven years ago, was $7,000. Last year it was more than $175,000. During the last three years the offering has increased at the rate of about $10,000 each year. The fact that this sum is raised during the six weeks of Lent adds to its significance. So far as we know there is no other Christian body where a like achievement is made, year after year, in so brief a space of time.

In the mountains of Northern Luzon, Philippine Islands, at our mission in Sagada, the Church of St. Mary the Virgin, was consecrated on December 7, 8 and 9—at least the fiesta which celebrated the consecration lasted over these three days, and included not only the solemn services, but a program of sports and entertainment for these simple Igorot people, who only a few years ago were savage head-hunters.

On the 8th of January a cable was received at the Church Missions House announcing the death of the Rev. Nion Tuk Ng, of Tsingpoo, China. Mr. Ng was one of our younger clergy, having been graduated from St. John's College a few years ago. He was the second generation of his family in the priesthood of the Church, his father being stationed at Soochow.

On January 6 a telegram was received at the Church Missions House telling of the complete loss by fire, on January 3, of our mission buildings at Tanana, Alaska. Fortunately no lives were lost. The buildings consisted of a dwelling house and a hospital which, for some time, had been in charge of Miss Florence G. Langdon, who has given devoted service alone at this point for the last three years. Miss Langdon is now in the United States on furlough. The work which she has so bravely carried on is the only one of its kind for a good distance along the Yukon River, and the loss to the native people will be felt very keenly. We hope that means will be found to rebuild the hospital and mission dwelling promptly. The Church of Our Saviour at Tanana is one of the most attractive in Alaska.

Of your charity pray for the repose of the soul of

CAROLINE GERTRUDE THOMSON.

Grant unto her, O Lord, eternal rest, and let light perpetual shine upon her. Amen.

THE PURIFICATION.

Virgin wholly marvellous,
Who didst bear God's Son for us,
Worthless is my tongue and weak
Of thy purity to speak.

Who can praise thee as he ought?
Gifts, with every blessing fraught,
Gifts that bring the gifted life,
Thou didst grant us maiden-wife.

God became thy lowly Son,
Made Himself thy little One,
Raising men to tell thy worth
High in heaven as here on earth.

Heaven and earth and all that is,
Thrill to-day with ecstasies,
Chanting glory unto thee,
Singing praise with festal glee.

Cherubim with fourfold face
Are no peers of thine in grace,
And the six-winged Seraphim
Shine, amid thy splendor, dim.

Purer art thou than are all
Heavenly hosts angelical,
Who delight with pomp and state
On thy Beauteous Child to wait.

MEMBERS ONE OF ANOTHER.

It is the fact that we are members both of the Church and of our half-pagan nations which makes our Christianity and the Church's work so ineffective. We read with amazement Christ's praise of poverty and disparagement of wealth, because it seems to us that the best things in life—the society of refined people and even the affections of our intimate friends—are dependent upon at least a moderate supply of money. If a man loses all his money, he must, in our day, lose most of his friends as well; they will not deliberately leave him, but they will have to live where expenses can be avoided, and they will not follow him. If we had the true spirit of fellowship, such as ought to bind together the various members of Christ's Body this would not be so. The sting of poverty is often the worldliness of a man's friends; and poverty can only deserve the blessing which Christ pronounced upon it when the sense of fellowship is strong enough to overcome the worldliness of men.

How are we to acquire this sense of fellowship? It is the gift of the Holy Spirit. The best way to bridge class-divisions and the like is always to bring men together under the inspiration of a common ideal. And strongest of such bonds ought to be that which arises from a common devotion to the greatest of all causes—the growth of the Kingdom of God. But for most of us there is no link with other men to be found in our religion; we have no fellowship of (or in) the Holy Ghost, no sense that we belong to one another because we all belong to Him. If some stranger came up to me and claimed a somewhat intimate acquaintance on the ground that he worshiped in the same Church, I might regard it as an outrage. That is all wrong. We allow people to claim an acquaintance on the ground that they were at the same school or college; that is recognized as a real bond of union; but merely to be worshipers of the same God is not enough to draw us to one another—because our worship is something laid over our lives, not something bursting from their inmost depths. We go to Church in families, and sit in our own pews; we say our prayers and pay our respects to our own God; and then we come out again and go to our own homes and eat our own luncheons or our own suppers. We do not concern ourselves with the people in the next pew unless they sing out of tune, when we brace ourselves to the extreme measure of turning round to look at them. How can we hope to realize our fellowship with the whole company of believers in the Communion of Saints when this is our attitude to those who worship at our side. We know some little fragment of the Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ and of the Love of God; of the Fellowship of the Holy Ghost we know virtually nothing.

RENTALS OF PEWS OR SITTINGS
Persons desiring pews or sittings are requested to apply to the Accounting Warden after eleven o'clock Mass, on Sundays or communicate with him at his office in the Clergy House.

PARISH NOTES.

Father Underhill will come to us temporarily from March 15 until May 1. It will be a happiness to welcome him to the parish once more.

Bishop Garland visited the parish on Sunday night, February 1, and administered the Sacrament of Confirmation to a class of twenty-six candidates.

The fiscal year of the parish ends on March 24, on which date the Accounting Warden closes his books preparatory to getting up the annual report.

The Stations of the Cross will be said every Friday evening in Lent, preceded by a sermon. A service for children will be held every Friday afternoon in the Chapel.

The usual retreats will be held in the parish during Lent. St. Mary's Guild will have a day of Retreat on the Thursday in Passion Week, and there will be the usual Saint Day for women and girls on Mid-Lent Sunday.

On Wednesday evening, February 11, the Men's Club held its monthly smoker in the Parish Hall. A very interesting illustrated lecture was given on "Housing Problems in Philadelphia," by Mr. Shannon, of the Housing Commission, and music and refreshments came afterwards.

All persons using the weekly envelope system and who may be in arrears with their offerings are urged to cancel their indebtedness prior to the date above mentioned. This is of special importance this year when we are about changing to the duplex system, and will save considerable trouble in the way of carrying over uncompleted accounts.

A Quiet Day for the associates of the Girls' Friendly Society and other women, will be held on Wednesday, March 11, 1914, at the Church of St. Jude and the Nativity. The conductor will be the Rev. E. H. Schlueter, vicar of St. Luke's Chapel, New York city. Those desiring breakfast or lunch are asked to send their names to Miss E. F. Nelson, 125 South Twelfth street, before Monday, March 9.

ST. NICHOLAS GUILD.

It is with regret that we announce that owing to a lack of funds the paid instructors of the Guild must be dispensed with. The gymnasium will be open as usual, however, on Tuesday nights.

THE DUPLEX ENVELOPE SYSTEM.

The Vestry has authorized the introduction of the duplex envelope system in St. Clement's Parish, and we will begin the use of this system with the new parish year, March 25, 1914.

This provides for regular offerings to be made each week both for the support of the parish itself and for the support of the mission work of the Church at large.

Wherever it has been tried it has resulted in increased offerings both for parish support and for missions, but its success is dependent on the co-operation of each individual member of the parish to the extent of taking and regularly using the envelopes. Many members of the parish have already signified their intention of taking sets of the new envelopes and a canvass is being made by the Missionary Committee to arouse interest in the new system on the part of those who have not yet agreed to take the envelopes.

No definite pledges are being asked for, simply a promise to use the envelope regularly, but it is assumed that the amount given by each user of the envelopes on the first Sunday of the new year will be indicative of the amount he or she will give throughout the year.

Our annual expenses, covering salaries, music, fuel, light, repairs and incidentals, amount to $14,000.00. Our present receipts from pew rentals, cash and envelope offerings are far from sufficient to meet our expenses, especially during the summer months, this fact being largely due to a lack of systematic offerings being made by the majority of the parishioners, and this has resulted in the necessity of raising money by temporary loans during certain parts of the year.

It has been for the purpose of overcoming this difficulty in meeting expenses, and to create in the parish a far more general interest in the support not only of the parish work but of the general missionary work of the Church, that the new system has been adopted.

There seems to be a general impression throughout the parish that the funds from the Yarnall estate more than make up any deficit in meeting our current expenses.

This, however, is far from being the case, as there are only two portions or exactly one-half of the income from this estate available for parish purposes, viz., for repairs to the Church properties, and for parish maintenance. Under this last item, however, no portion can be used towards the payment of the salaries of the clergy, or for heating and lighting. One half portion of the income from the Yarnall estate is used, under the terms of the will, for purposes outside the parish, namely the education of boys and young men expecting to study for Holy Orders, and for the purchase of books for the Yarnall Library of Theology, now maintained at the Philadelphia Divinity School. We do not belittle the generosity of the late Mr. Yarnall's bequest, but think the facts should be impressed upon St. Clement's people.

We have 763 communicants in the parish and it can be seen from the following statement what income will be derived for parish support if the new envelope system is in general use.

There are only 195 persons regularly using the present envelopes, leaving 568 members of the parish who do not give regularly through this method, and it is the earnest hope of the Vestry that each person connected with the parish shall use the new system.

Two hundred subscriptions at 5c per week yield $520 per year.

Two hundred subscriptions at 10c per week yield $1,040 per year.

Fifty subscriptions at 25c per week yield $650 per year.

Fifty subscriptions at 50c per week yield $1,300 per year.

Twenty-five subscriptions at $1 per week yield $1,300 per year.

Twenty-five subscriptions at $2 per week yield $2,600 per year.

The above is only an example of what systematic giving on the part of the members of the parish will accomplish, and it can be readily seen what the result would be if each one will use the new system.

It is of course assumed that those using the present envelopes will take the new envelopes and continue their subscriptions in the same amounts as heretofore.

"Many follow Jesus unto the Breaking of Bread; but few to the drinking of the Cup of His Passion."
"Ye shall drink indeed of My Cup."

Lord, when we drink of Thy most Sacred Cup,
Grant us to know more clearly what we do;
We seek Thy Strength, Lord Jesus, and accept Thy Weakness too.

Thou art alone our Riches and our Wealth,
Yet, at Thine Altar, ask we only gain?
O make us both partakers of Thy Joy,
And of Thy Pain.

Jesu, our God, by Whom alone we live,
Who meekly on the Cross dost yield Thy Breath,
We come to Thee for Life, but grant us, too,
To share Thy Death.

E. W.—Cowley Evangelist.

The following sermon preached by the Rev. M. R. Newboldt, the principal of Dorchester Missionary College, in England, seems so excellent that we reprint a portion of it from the Cowley Evangelist.

Nothing, no energy, no zeal, no organization or elaborate equipment, can possibly take the place of the great duty of spreading the One Faith, once for all delivered to the saints, handing it on whole and undefiled, enshrined in the system and order of the One Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church.

We hear much of "overlapping" in the Mission Field. Christianity is being presented to the heathen world by many bodies of Christians from many points of view. The point of view of the Mission of our Church must surely be that of historic and Catholic Christianity quite definitely and faithfully presented. In China and Japan, for instance, two of the most strategic and fruitful points of the Mission Field are vast Roman Catholic Missions, and very large Protestant Missions; between the two are found our own, the smallest of the three. Of course, in so huge a field there is at present ample room for all, but it may not always be so. And if we ask what should be the special contribution of our Church, which shall justify the presence of the Church of England in the face of these competing bodies, our answer is that she has her appeal to historic Christianity, and Catholic faith and practice, both whole and undefiled, and that she has something to give which neither Rome nor non-episcopal bodies can offer. We should never be content to be merged in a general colorless Protestantism, nor agree to a division of the religions of China into non-Christian faiths, Romanism, and Protestant Christianity.

We have laid upon us the duty of preaching the Catholic Faith and practice, as handed down to us. But it is not a simple or an easy duty; nothing supremely worth doing ever is.

One of the great causes of difficulty is the constant drag exercised both at home and still more in the Mission Field, of a great body of non-episcopal missionary societies.

By their zeal, their devotion, their efficiency and equipment these great societies put us to shame. They are honestly anxious to draw us, the smaller body, into line with themselves. To refuse seems churlish, difficult, and un-Christian; yet to co-operate without serious compromise of principles is most difficult. One might quote as an instance of this tendency the recent proposal, now I believe happily withdrawn, for a Central Theological College in Australia, at which should be trained ministers of all Christian bodies, including our own, sharing as many common subjects as possible in one common life and atmosphere, yet each maintaining their distinctive doctrinal teaching. The most outstanding event of modern missionary history was the Edinburgh Conference of 1910. It was a sign of the presence of great zeal for missionary work, and was provocative of much activity. And the chief feature of that conference, in the eyes of most of us, was the attempt to co-operate, as far as possible, with non-episcopal missionary societies at home and abroad.

Anything that makes for unity, for peace and concord, is good; but side by side with what is good goes the need in any such attempt for increased vigilance lest we compromise what is not ours to alter, the one Catholic position.

And if one may do so without loss of charity, we should ask, how far can we consistently, with loyalty to our position, co-operate with that great body of non-episcopal Christianity which we may conveniently term Protestantism?

Do we differ from them only in minor points of system and order, and in externals, or does the line of cleavage run any deeper?

You will agree with me that this is a difficult question to answer. It is hard to answer because when you are dealing with Protestantism you are not dealing with a homogeneous body. Nor are you dealing with a body whose teaching and beliefs are free from liability to radical change. Among them are many, thank God! who hold fast to evangelical faith in Our Blessed Lord as their Saviour and their God, and teach the essentials as we should teach them, if they do not practice all that we practice. But there are others who do not.

We hear very much nowadays of a re-statement of Christianity, and sometimes when we examine the Faith as re-stated, we find it hard to recognize at all the Faith we have always known and loved.

Between ourselves and some forms of what is called "non-credal" Christianity, the line of cleavage does not lie in matters which have to do with Orders or Sacraments, it lies in their view of the nature of the Person of Our Blessed Lord Himself. It may be said to lie in a different conception of Theism. There is, or was, for instance, the "New Theology," a form of teaching decidedly pantheistic.

To them it was not hard to accept the saying that Jesus is Divine, for all are divine in their degree, the Deity resides in all men. There are other streams of thought with more affinity to the deistic standpoint, which find great difficulty in asserting any Incarnation, any belief in the miraculous, or in a Resurrection, or the Virgin Birth. Now these views do harm even in England, where there is so much to counteract them, and where people are so extremely uninterested in theology. But if they are transplanted to the East, where great nations are leaping into civilization at a bound, the harm they may do is incalculable. Japan, we are told, is intensely interested in religion, she is dissatisfied with her old faiths, and determined to remodel her religion upon that of the Western world. But whether her religion a hundred years hence will have much relation to historic Christianity is, we are told, problematic. Latitudinarian theology in the West may produce an embarrassing monster in the East, like that of Frankenstein. Let us at least be aware of the danger. For reasons of this kind alone it is vitally important that our missionaries should know what they believe, and hold fast and firm the whole undefiled Catholic Faith. It would be a serious danger to the Christendom of the future ages if there sprang up in the East some new semi-pantheistic religion labelled Christianity which is not the Gospel; but can we doubt that this is at least possible if a fluid, undogmatic, non-credal mass of Christian theories gets re-stated through the Indian or the Chinese mind?

And as regards questions of Catholic order, we cannot see without the gravest disquiet such attempts at re-union as that recently reported from Africa, where a Bishop of our own communion celebrated in a Presbyterian Church for a congregation consisting of Presbyterians, Baptists, Methodists and Friends. However ardently we may lament the breaches of Christendom, this is not the way to heal them. To take such action is to hurt your friends far more deeply than can be compensated for by any conciliation of those who differ from us. More than that is to jeopardize what is not ours to give away.

Even those of us who most distrusted the policy of the Edinburgh Conference did not look for such results, nor were they contemplated, they were expressly repudiated. Yet in certain quarters this most serious action is claimed as a fruit of the same movement. The fact is, it is comparatively easy to set a ball rolling; but however nicely its aim be adjusted, a ball of this sort set rolling in England and in Scotland may have seriously changed its direction by the time it gets to the other side of the world. Specially is this so when it is heavily biased in one side.

There is an often quoted saying of the great Bishop Selwyn to this effect: "When you are fighting on the frontier against the power of darkness, differences which loom so large at home among Christian soldiers are as nothing." Obviously the saying contains a rough truth. But how far is it all true? Surely when the foundations of a new Church are being laid, especially among nations of more subtle and active mind than, say, the Melanesians among whom the Bishop derived his experience, the least deviation from the straight affects the whole superstructure.

And again, when the Church "is fighting on the frontier against the powers of darkness," whether among the heathen or in our colonies, it must surely make a vital difference whether she puts in the forefront the Sacrament of Penance and the Sacrament of the Altar, or does not do so. If she goes into the warfare leaving one of them behind, and making but half-hearted use of the other, she is depriving herself of two of the most potent weapons against the powers of darkness which God has entrusted to her charge. The Church, to be a strong missionary force, must know what she is to teach, and what atmosphere she is to create for her children.

The heathen have not only to be taught the Faith, they have to unlearn quickly a vast body of inherited tradition of fearful moral evil. This can only be fought by dealing with individual souls one by one. Preaching is not enough, teaching is not sufficient: the regular use of Confession and the cleansing power of Absolution is the best and greatest of all weapons. We who know its value at home can realize how infinitely necessary it is in fighting on the frontier against the powers of evil.

The other weapon, a greater still, is the Holy Eucharist. It is both the backbone of all worship and one of the greatest safeguards of the doctrine of the Holy Incarnation. Here, more than anywhere else, the abstract teaching of the Church is translated into the practice of her worship and her life. We are told sometimes at Dorchester that in encouraging our men to value the privilege of being present daily if they wish at the celebration of the Holy Mysteries, we are training them to expect a luxury which the missionary priest can seldom obtain. We know all of us quite well that a missionary constantly traveling cannot often have this privilege.

But can anything be more deplorable than to acquiesce in the other extreme, to put it in the background, to treat it as an extra? "That the Church of England has largely failed in Australia in the past," says the author of a recent book, "is a fact as indisputable as it is deplorable." And why? Because she has clung to the things that do not matter, and let the things that matter go. She has kept the parochial system in the vast territories, she has multiplied Church dignitaries; while strongly resisting the use of the traditional vestments of the priests she has stoutly braved the embarrassment of introducing to the back blocks the traditional garb of an Archdeacon. There are whole districts where she is practically a Church of one sacrament—baptism. One has heard of churches where no service but Evensong has been held for fifteen years.

We are given to understand that sacramental forms of religion, sad as it is, do not appeal to our colonist. That he can seldom get beyond the prayer meeting, the lantern service, the compounding of simple gospel truths. We are told in the same breath that the form of religion everywhere in evidence is that of the Church of Rome.

The fact is, that when modern Anglicanism is transplanted beyond the shade of the Establishment, nothing but the devotion of its ministers and the grace of God saves it from dismal failure. It does not take root nor grow. One must adopt Catholic practice because it pays; if it were never attended by visible success it would nevertheless be our duty to abide by it. But it does pay, it does produce wonderful results. Where the teaching and discipline of the Church is given and held definitely and strongly, when her system, her sacraments, and her order take root, then she will live and grow no longer an English exotic, but indigenous to the soil. One of our former students has just been sent home by the Bishop of Corea to beg for reinforcement and help. He has returned, I hope and believe, reassured. And the help is needed because the Church in Corea simply cannot cope with the weight of converts. This is not due entirely to the fact that there the Catholic Faith is presented faithfully and clearly; there are other causes as well. But no one could hear of his account of that work without rejoicing.

Another has just sailed for his home in the Bahamas, whence the Bishop of Nassau sent him to us for training.

He told me once of his memory of the last time he saw Bishop Churton, before that saintly man lost his life at sea. It was on Long Island, an island of some eight or nine parishes, on the occasion of the Bishop's visit. He remembered the Bishop seated in the little church hearing confessions by the font, outside on a heap of stones his chaplain hearing others, and under the shade of the belfry a third priest similarly engaged. He described the groups of people kneeling in the shade of the trees waiting for their turn, all preparing to receive their communion at the Bishop's hands on the morrow. After the service, the Bishop held the concluding part of the Episcopal visitation service on the little quay, gave his blessing, and sailed away, to meet his death soon after.

Recently that island had, for lack of men, to be left unshepherded for four years. Yet when a priest did manage to make a hurried tour through it after that interval, to give the sacraments to the people, he found all the congregations kept going by the native catechists, who receive no pay for their services, and he took back with him £40 in church dues which they had been paying during the four years.

What we teach at home, what we believe at home, travels very far. The work that is done by the Church abroad reflects more than we are aware, our thoughts, our practice, the best of our prayers here in England. It is not enough merely to send out numerous missionaries. We must send out men trained first and foremost in the Catholic Faith, men who know what they believe, and believe what the Holy Spirit has taught the Holy Church; who believe the whole truth and keep it undefiled, and will bear witness to it faithfully wherever they may go.

PARISH NOTES.

About eighty women made the retreat on mid-Lent Sunday.

The collection on Easter Dav will be devoted to the current expenses of the parish.

The Paschal Candle will be blessed on Holy Saturday night after the first vespers of Easter.

Miss Edna Hagert has decorated the Paschal Candle. The design is very effective, in black, orange and gold.

Parishioners are reminded that they should make out their Easter communion cards that the parish list may be corrected.

The retreat for St. Mary's Guild was held on Thursday in Passion Week. Father Aitkins, of St. Mark's parish, was the conductor.

On March 19th the rector blessed an altar, with proper ornaments, at the Eastern Penitentiary. A Mass followed, at which there were about seventy communions.

The Rev. Father Richardson, rector of St. Mary's Church, West Philadelphia, gave an exceedingly helpful address on "Church Work" before the Girls' Club on Tuesday evening, March 24.

At the meeting of the Men's Club, on March 11th, Mr. Clarence Sears, of Glenloch, read an interesting paper on the "Rural Problem," in which he made clear the particular difficulties which must be met by a country parish.

After Easter the choir boys will commence rehearsing for a minstrel show, to be given for the benefit of the Choir Outing Fund. We will be unable to have a choir camp, but the boys will be taken somewhere for the day as heretofore.

Donations in money are asked for flowers in decorating the altar of the Blessed Sacrament on Maundy Thursday, in St. John's Chapel. Members of the C. B. I. are especially asked to contribute. Donations may be sent to Miss Arnold, 102 South Thirty-sixth street.

A silver pyx, formerly the property of the Rev. George M. Christian, D.D., has been given to the parish. It was given Dr. Christian many years ago by Elizabeth Cuthbert Smith. The inscription reads:

"To the Glory of God and in loving memory of Percy Cuthbert Smith, who entered into Everlasting Life, Feb. 23, 1872."

Needed at once, for the Sunday School, a man teacher for a new class of boys. It is impossible for any teacher to do justice to a class of which the usual attendance is sixteen and the total enrollment between twenty-five and thirty. The clergy find that much good teacher material is kept in the background because of modesty.

Any persons who desire books on religious subjects of interest to Anglicans, are referred to the catalogue of the Lending Library of the Sisters of the Holy Nativity, Fond du Lac, Wis. No expense is involved, except return postage on books. Even the large public libraries are lacking in Catholic literature, therefore an opportunity of this sort should be taken advantage of by many.

The basket-ball game on St. Patrick's night gave G. S. N. the victory by one point, the score being 15 to 14 for a team from St. John's parish. The line-up:

G. S. N.		St. John's.
Watts	Guard	J. Paterson

Bergen	Center	Groves

N. Ruark	Forward	McDonald

Grown persons will please save Monday night, April 28, for a visit to the class work exhibit and closing of the gym. for the season.

TEXTUAL CRITICISM.

(Extract from St. Mary's Messenger.)

For the comfort of certain devout souls who are troubled with a sub-conscious uneasiness in consequence of textual criticism and disputed authorship of Holy Writ, we feel impelled to make a brief statement. Two correspondents of widely differing mind and personality sent to the Messenger their individual reports of the Confirmation at the House of Mercy. Each account was quite complete in itself, and yet, when the editorial scissors had cut apart and pieced together, there were not half a dozen sentences duplicated, and we believe the two writers will themselves find "difficulties" in claiming each her own contribution. Strange to say, however, these two otherwise harmonious accounts began with an absolute discrepancy of date, as radical as any appearing in the synoptical accounts of our Lord's resurrection. So let our "rational method" of dealing with such matters be truly rational. The essentials of the story do not depend upon small variations in the details.

In this connection we may tell of another edited letter with whose fanciful fate we have beguiled some wakeful hours. The letter was written in the first years of this century by a school-girl in Japan to a Sister on Mount Saint Gabriel. It was a long letter, well written in every respect, and quite too good to be selfishly devoured in private. In fact, each of the magazines published on Mount Saint Gabriel desired it, and yet it was too long for either one. Finally, it was portioned out, cut apart and pieced together in new combinations, in such wise that Sub Alis Sto, the school paper, had a sprightly account of the writer's journeyings, with vivid pictures of Japanese home life; and Saint Mary's Messenger was enriched by an earnest setting forth of the missionary work and its possibilities, as seen by a fresh young mind, sure of the sympathy of her hearers.

The fanciful sequence of this division pictured a Japanese conquest of the States, in some remote century, and the discovery of the two printed accounts of life in Japan, followed by the unearthing of the original manuscript letter. How easy to suppose that there were two sources for the letter, instead of two derivations from it; two "He-lens," evidently, of different minds, as shown by the different styles of writing—one a gay young girl, the other a Christian missionary of the Japanese. Can you not see the wiseacres of that day rushing into print with their scholarly deductions? What a find it would be!

THE RESURRECTION.

By the death of Christ the power of sin was broken; the chains fell off humanity and men were free to rise. No doubt much remained to be done: the Atonement to be shared; a new life to be lived. But the whole situation was changed; things were no longer hopeless. Before, men could neither make nor share an Atonement, nor could they look forward to any certain joy or hope in the life beyond; now they could arise and recommence their upward pilgrimage to God with real courage and hope, because the pardon was purchased and the power of evil defeated. But let us beware of thinking that even the Atonement is the end. Not so; it is the first chapter of the book of Redemption; not the last. A mistake here will lead us into many pitfalls; into Antinomianism, for instance; the heresy that teaches that because Christ died we need not die to sin; or into disparagement of good works as part of a living faith; or into many estimates of Grace.

No. The Atonement has no doubt overthrown Giant Despair, and his late prisoners are free to go out, nor can he touch them unless they return of their own will; yet their redemption is by no means complete. The trembling prisoners must be brought into the light of day; some one must "wash their stripes" and chafe their stiff limbs; loving hands must minister to their needs; they must be moulded and educated and inspired until a new life and spirit is theirs, so they can do a man's work and play a man's part in the new life and atmosphere of Christian freedom and responsibility. This is the work of Grace: it has yet to be done.

Therefore it is that we do not rest our hopes upon a dead Lord who died once on the tree. Were His death the end we should despair, but death was not the end. Christianity as a religion is not the religion of a death, but of One who was dead, but is risen, and is alive forever more. And so this Lord who was clothed with our humanity in the days of His humiliation still wears our humanity in glory, and all the day long stretches forth His hands to those brethren of the human race whose nature He assumed and for whom He died. For He longs, with Divine desire, to endow them with that Grace which is His own communicated Life in order that, being in Him (as He in them), they may share His eternal and glorious Life forever.

A LETTER FROM CHINA.

China's Navigation Company's
S.S. "Shasi," en route for Hankow,
February 3.

My Dear Father: Capt. A. is a fine English Catholic, son of a former curate of St. Alban's, Holburn, and so interested and encouraging in regard to everything that our community is trying to do. He attends Mass whenever he can on Sundays, and has given us an altar, reredos, pulpit, etc., for the chapel, where we have English services in Ichang.

This is to thank you and the Sunday School for your special offering for St. Joseph's (School), an offering which is much appreciated.

In our refractory we have a picture of the chancel of St. Clement's, and the picture is always a joy, not only for its own sake, but because it recalls those delightful visits of last year. God bless you all. Love to everybody. We expect Father Souder for Palm Sunday.

Yours in Christ,
ROBERT E. WOOD.

FOR DUPLEX ENVELOPES.

Up to the present writing 348 persons have signified their intention of using the new envelopes. This is an encouraging increase. There are still a number who have not responded to the appeal, but it is our hope that in time each member of the parish will realize his responsibility.

THE LEAGUE OF INTERCESSION AT KUMAMOTO, JAPAN.

In the autumn of 1911, a church woman visiting at the Leper Hospital, in Kumamoto, was deeply impressed by the atmosphere of prayer and devotion among the inmates, and suggested the formation of a League of Intercessory Prayer. The suggestion was acted upon, and the association has proved a great blessing not only to the members but to the Church at large.

Miss Riddell writes: "The Guild is proving a link beyond expectation with the needs of the world, and also a great strengthening of their own spiritual life."

The great need of the little community is a church building; about $1,500 is yet lacking before this can be erected.

Any desiring the prayers of the League may write to Miss H. Riddell, 436, Furu-Shinyashiki, Kumamoto, Japan.

MISSIONARY NOTES.

The First Provincial Synod.

On January 22 the Province of the Southwest held its first synod. That the Church in the Southwest desires that its province should mean something real for the extension of the Kingdom, rather than a mere bit of ecclesiastical mechanism, seems to be evidenced by the following statement with which it prefaces its articles of organization:

"The purposes of this province and its synod are to organize the forces and develop the resources of the Church within the province in order that the congregations and the people of the province may more adequately further the Mission of the Church to the world: (1) by making our Lord known everywhere as the King and Saviour of men; (2) by endeavoring to unify and develop the educational work of the Church within the province; (3) by claiming for the Christian law the right to rule social practice."

A synod that deliberately defines its purpose as service to the nation and the world may go forward to greater victories for the Kingdom than have ever been won by the Church in the Southwest in the past.

Last December the Rev. F. L. H. Pott, D.D., celebrated his twenty-fifth anniversary as head of St. John's University, Shanghai. A large number of Chinese, as well as of President Pott's foreign friends, crowded the assembly hall to the doors. Dr. Wu Ting-fang, former Chinese minister to the United States, presided, and was accompanied on the platform by Bishop Graves, Admiral Sah and other notabilities. The alumni of the University had gathered a special Expansion Fund of $10,000, which was presented to Dr. Pott, together with a silver-inscribed model of the college crest. The gift will probably be used toward the erection of a library building. It is hoped that the Church in America will also want to recognize the service which Dr. Pott has rendered. Among the things which must be accomplished in the near future, if the University is to keep the place it now holds as the leading educational institution in the Orient, are an art building, a large library, a gymnasium, in addition to law, normal and engineering courses to the departments of the college.

The automobile is not always a luxury. It has been put to very practical use by a clergyman in a New England diocese who finds that by this means he has been able to make a house-to-house canvass of forty townships, with the result that nearly 400 church people, including over 100 children, have been discovered and enrolled. But the work of canvassing was only the initial step. By means of the automobile every family in the district has been visited at least twice a year, and many of them much oftener. To show how helpful this means of locomotion has been to the people, he tells us of a communicant of the Church who was dying in an isolated farmhouse, nearly twenty miles from a church. Under the old conditions a visit would have meant a full day's time by railroad and coach at an expense of about $4—now it requires less than an hour and the clergyman's record shows that he was enabled to visit the invalid twenty-five times during the past year. The expense of running the automobile in question was borne by the Woman's Auxiliary of the diocese.

Fourteen years ago Rr. Rudolf B. Teusler went to Japan to open a little hospital that had been closed for two years. It was absolutely without equipment except a few broken-down beds and some blankets which were sold for $25. Dr. Teusler says he has always felt sorry for the man who bought them! From this insignificant beginning has come our present St. Luke's Hospital, Tokyo, with its eighty beds, its corps of thirty trained nurses, its staff of ten Japanese physicians, four of them graduates of the Imperial University, and three foreign doctors, besides a dispensary caring for one hundred and fifty cases each morning. But this equipment is quite inadequate for the work which St. Luke's is asked to do. Prince Katsura, formerly Premier of Japan, and Baron Goto, have made a gift of $25,000 to develop St. Luke's into a great international hospital. It is proposed to erect an institution of one hundred and fifty beds, with professors of the Imperial University as its consulting physicians, with a staff of foreign and Japanese doctors. A hospital such as this will not only be effective in promoting international friendship, but it will directly aid in extending Christian influence in Japan.

In the March number of The Spirit of Missions, Archdeacon Stuck calls attention to the critical condition existing among the natives on the Yukon River. The intrusion of vicious white men in the native villages, where they resort for drunkenness and debauchery, is slowly but surely destroying the native population. Our medical missionary at Fort Yukon has made a gallant stand against these evils and has incurred the enmity of the liquor interests, which are trying to have him removed. Although Dr. Burke's furlough was due last winter, he chose to stay at his post and keep up his fight for decency and order. In this he has been ably seconded by his wife and by the government school teacher, Miss Hannah Breece, who has given him most loyal support and has not shrunk from her share of the dislike and unpopularity which has been a consequence of the stand they have taken for the right.

On the 31st of January the new St. Andrew's School for Boys was opened in the little village of Zapopan, a suburb of Guadalajara, Mexico. The buildings are as yet incomplete, but enough has been done to enable the work to be carried on effectively. The reception at the opening of the school was attended by the mayor of the city and representative people from all the foreign colonies, as well as by many native Mexicans. An interesting feature of the day was a visit from the entire commissions of Japanese naval officers from the Emperor's ship, Itsumo. The fact that these Japanese officers, as well as some of the most distinguished Mexicans of Guadalajara, made a special visit to a comparatively small and obscure American mission school seems fraught with significance of the good will existing toward us.

The number of pupils is daily increasing and the work seems to have a most promising future before it. One of the features of the school is farming. All the boys spend a part of the time in practical agriculture—the profits of which will go to defray the expenses of the school.

On February 14th a cable was sent to Bishop Graves authorizing the purchase of land for the new St. Mary's Hall, Shanghai. This message will bring almost equal happiness to the workers in the field and the helpers in the home-land, whose labors, pledges and gifts have made possible the advance. A large part of this money came from a Sunday offering in St. Bartholomew's Church, New York City, amounting to $9,750. This recalls a similar benefaction of St. Bartholomew's Church several years ago, when it gave the choir-school building in Hankow, known as St. Bartholomew's House.

The Rev. A. R. Hoare, our "farthest North" missionary at Point Hope, Alaska, writes of the terrible gales which have swept across from the Arctic Ocean, and the comfort which the new mission house has been. He says: "Our large dory, very heavy, was picked up by the wind, carried through the air and deposited on the top of the coal pile, six feet high. A canoe, thirty feet long, was carried away altogether; its owner has not seen it since, and a great deal of damage was done, but our house was not injured in the least."

Mr. Hoare has had a request from a government teacher on the Noatak River to visit his school and instruct the natives. He says he hopes to get there this winter, though it is only about 250 miles from his station! Then he expects to visit Icy Cape, 250 miles in the opposite direction also. In the interim he is training two intelligent native boys, whose parents have agreed to turn them over to the mission.

Bishop Biller of South Dakota recently visited the Indian mission at Crow Creek, where the Rev. H. Burt is at work. The bishop says that Mr. Burt should be put in the very front of living American missionaries, and hopes that he may long be spared to be the friend of the Indians and the helpful, loyal advisor of his bishop. He came to South Dakota two years before the present bishop was born and Bishop Hare found him hard at work when he (the bishop) first came to the Indians.

The story of "The Ascent of Denali" (Mt. McKinley) by Archdeacon Stuck should be in every churchman's library. It tells of a great task carefully prepared for, of hardships borne with abundant good nature, of dangers fearlessly, but never recklessly, faced, of constant resourcefulness and determination and of success modestly worn. It is told with the literary charm and power familiar to all who have read the accounts of his missionary journeys in the The Spirit of Missions from time to time. The numerous and beautiful illustrations add greatly to the interest and value of this absorbing book.

It is published by Scribner's Sons, New York. Price $1.75.

St. Luke's Hospital, Manila, is filled to over-flowing. It is the leading hospital in point of efficiency in the Philippines. Bishop Brent is convinced that if he could erect a new building he would in a short time have a sufficient return to meet all current expenses.

PARISH NOTES.

The collection on Ascension Day will be devoted to the Summer Outing fund.

The church will be open as usual on the Rogation days from 6 A. M. to 9 P. M.

The new chapel will be erected during the summer. A detailed account of the plans will be given later.

An iron fence is to be erected at the lower end of the garden, as a means of keeping out destructive quadrupeds and the ubiquitous small boy.

EASTER MEETING OF THE VESTRY

At the annual parish election the following named gentlemen were elected to serve as Vestrymen for three years, or until Eastertide, 1917:

Mr. William Weaver Lukens, Mr. Stevenson Hockley Walsh, Mr. Edward A. Casey, Mr. J. Lawrence Wetherill.

At the Easter meeting of the Vestry, held on Tuesday, April 14th, Mr. S. McKean Bayard was elected Accounting Warden, Mr. Francis D. Wetherill was appointed Rector's Warden, and Mr. L. F. Wright was elected Secretary of the Vestry. Messrs. Casey, Woodruff and Wright were elected delegates to the Diocesan Convention.

EASTERTIDE.

The services at St. Clement's during Holy Week and Easter were largely attended, and a goodly number made their communions on Easter-day.

The choir rendered Mozart's Seventh Mass at 11 o'clock, and did credit to themselves and to the unremitting labors of Mr. Fry.

The Accounting Warden reports that the present Easter finds the parish in a better condition, financially, than it has been for some years.

THE ANNUAL REPORT.

The Accounting Warden's annual report for the fiscal year ending March 24 is published in this issue of the Magazine, and should prove of much interest to all members of the parish.

It will be noticed that during the past year there was a decrease in receipts from cash offerings, envelope offerings and pew rents—the three chief sources of income for parish support—of $2,796.06. This, of course, is rather discouraging, but much of the decrease can be accounted for by the fact that in the year just closed there was no Easter Sunday with its customary generous offering, while the year covered by the last report included two Easters.

The falling off in receipts from the envelope offerings and from pew rentals was not so great, and can mainly be attributed to non-payment of amounts due by those using the envelopes, and to some overdue pew rentals.

With the beginning of the new fiscal year we have introduced the duplex envelope system, and so far 369 sets have been given out. Wherever this system has been tried it has resulted in largely increased offerings, both for parish support and for missions, and it is believed the adoption of the system will produce the same results at St. Clement's as has been the case elsewhere.

The underlying principle of this system is the regular and systematic giving by every member of the parish.

It is hoped that many more members of the parish will use these envelopes, and they may be obtained by applying to the Accounting Warden or to the clergy.

The report shows a very decided increase in the amount given during the past year for missions, and in this respect is most encouraging and reflects the greatly increased interest in missions on the part of the members of the parish. The amount raised for missions in the past year is believed to be the greatest in the history of the parish.

The loan of $775, shown as being still due the special account, was paid off prior to Easter Sunday, and at the Easter Tuesday meeting of the Vestry the Accounting Warden was able to report that no unpaid bills were being carried over.

The summary of the income and disbursements under the four accounts composing the Yarnall fund, shows clearly how the income from this trust fund has been used.

It will be noted that from the education account of the Yarnall fund, we are now paying for the maintenance and education of four students, two at Kent School and two at St. Stephen's College, and it is expected that the number of students supported by the parish will be increased next fall.

A detailed statement is given of the insurance carried on the church properties, and also of the amount standing to the credit of the Boudinot fund. The Lady Chapel, to be erected as the gift to the parish by the late Mrs. Boudinot, will be built during the coming summer.

During the year covered by this report the receipts from cash offerings, envelope offerings and Pew Rents show a total decrease as compared with the figures shown in the last annual report, of $2,796.06, the three items mentioned being the chief sources of income for parish support.

On the other hand the receipts for Missions show an increase as compared with last year of $2,636.41.

This showing, while very creditable so far as interest in Missions is concerned, yet can not but be a cause of anxiety to the members of the Finance Committee and the Accounting Warden. The offerings for the support of the work of the Parish must be materially increased, and it is earnestly hoped that the introduction of the duplex envelope system with the new year, may be productive of very good results, as has been the case elsewhere, in the way of regular, systematic and largely increased offerings.

TOTAL PARISH RECEIPTS.

(Including receipts from Yarnall Fund applicable to Parish purposes.)

1912-1913	$19 836.96
1913-1914	19,959.01

TOTAL PARISH EXPENDITURES.

1913-1914	20,128.77

On August 1, 1913, a note for $900.00 was discounted in order to provide funds to meet current expenses. When the note fell due, December 1, it was renewed for four months, but was paid off February 2, 1914, special offerings being made by a number of members of the Parish for the purpose.

As shown by the report, the sum of $775.00 is still due the Special Account for loans made the General Account during the year.

MISSIONARY NOTES.

In the death of Bishop Scarborough, of New Jersey, on March 13th, the Church lost one of her old-time missionary leaders. For twenty-four years he was an active member of the Board of Missions, and retired only when the burden of infirmities, due to increasing age, compelled his doing so. Bishop Scarborough was 83 and had been nearly forty years in the episcopate.

The new Bishops of North Dakota and New Mexico are in their fields and at work. Both report encouragement in the outlook and large opportunities ahead for the Church.

Earnest representations are being made to the Church concerning the extreme importance of each diocese and district meeting its apportionment for this year. Six months of the year have already passed and the showing is not quite as good as that of a year ago. If each would give the share indicated the work could go on effectively. Let every parish and mission take the matter to heart, determining to do its part, and so help the diocese to answer to the call of the Board. The case is urgent.

One of our missionaries in Northern Alaska recently made a journey of 200 miles to reach a village of Eskimos, which, through the Christian influence of a government teacher and his wife recently confirmed by Bishop Rowe, had sent an appeal for his visit. As a result seventy-five persons have been baptized, and there is an eager desire for a church and a missionary. This may perhaps be the beginning of a large movement toward Christianity among the surrounding tribes.

On February 2d Bishop Brent opened in Zamboanga a hospital which represents the beginning of our medical work among the Mohammedan Moros. It is the only hospital for natives among a population of 80,000. He says concerning it: "I maintain that the Church of Christ has here an opportunity that comes never more than once in a generation. Our work is being inaugurated at a psychological moment, to use the current phrase. Nor is the problem a local problem. We have before us the whole question of the Moslem world, a question that the Christian Church has trifled with and as a Church never really tackled. A few individuals have plunged into it with fiery zeal and usually have either been called fools or have received such half-hearted backing as left them without the sinews of war. Our fate may not be any better than that of our forefathers. It is for the Church to decide."

The British and American Bible Societies engaged in Bible distribution in China announce a great increase in the last annual report. There have been 220,000 more copies of the Scriptures distributed than in prevoius years. The growing demand has come from officials and the well-to-do classes as well as from the poorer Chinese.

Writing to The Spirit of Missions, a layman recounts an interesting incident of a visit paid to the Indian mission at White Earth. The missionary, himself an Indian, was most courteous to the visitor and showed him over the reservation. In the course of their inspection they met another Indian whom the missionary introduced as a Sioux, saying: "This man's people killed my father. Now he comes 200 miles to see me. He speaks no Chippewa; I speak no Sioux. We converse in English. See what the love of Christ can do."

A Brazilian woman living in Rio Janeiro, formerly a member of the Roman communion, but who had drifted away from that faith, was two years ago confirmed by Bishop Kinsolving. Fired with a supreme devotion to the Church, she has given her own home, valued at $10,000, and gone with her companiion to live in two rented rooms. It is intended to remodel the house that it may serve as a chapel until a better building can be erected. Donna Gonzaya sets a marvelous example of loving self-sacrifice.

The Baptist Christians of the United States are engaged in raising a Judson Memorial fund of $1,200,000 for the better equipment of their work abroad, in addition to a $1,000,000 for the extension of missionary work in the domestic field. What an example to us, who boast more wealth!

The enormous demand for education under Christian auspices is shown in a recent letter from one of our teachers in Hankow, China. She says: "My school is growing very rapidly so that it is almost impossible for one woman to manage it properly. The present temporary building will hardly hold 100, and we ought to plan to accommodate 300 to 400 day scholars in this school. Our school here has gained a great reputation, so that we are now getting girls from families whose parents are educated and whose brothers have studied in America or Germany. Some of the nicest and cleverest girls are coming into the Church in consequence. We had six confirmed at Christmas from this school alone, and many more admitted as catechumens or by baptism."

The reports concerning the famine in Japan are most disquieting. Following three years of shortage there has been a total failure of the rice crop. A large section in the north is in great distress. Thousands of people are already living upon the bark and roots of trees, and straw and chaff made into a sort of gruel. The babies are dying rapidly on account of the feeble condition of the mothers. The young men have left their homes for the double purpose of seeking work elsewhere and of making fewer mouths to feed. The Japanese Government and the people are helping as best they can. Only by foreign aid can the lives of thousands be saved. Our own missionaries in this vicinity report most distressing conditions and join in the united appeal of all Christian missionaries of Japan for the interest and aid of their friends at home. Contributions may be sent through the Treasurer of the Board of Missions.

RENTALS OF PEWS OR SITTINGS
Persons desiring pews or sittings are requested to apply to the Accounting Warden after eleven o'clock Mass, on Sundays or communicate with him at his office in the Clergy House.

PARISH NOTES.

St. Clement's Branch of the Women's Auxiliary contributed $102 toward the United Offering. The total amount sent from Pennsylvania was $77.55.

After Trinity Sunday the 8 o'clock Mass on Sunday will be omitted; also the 7.30 Mass on weekdays. The Litany at noon on Fridays has been discontinued.

The annual meeting of the Confraternity of the Blessed Sacrament, St. Saviour's Ward, will be held on Thursday, June 12, immediately after evensong.

Subscriptions are asked to our Summer Outing Fund. Last year forty-six women and children were provided for. It is hoped that the contributions this year may be generous.

THE GIRLS' CLUB.

Under the auspices of the Girls' Club a strawberry festival will be held in the Parish Hall on Thursday evening, June 4. Tickets, ten cents. The proceeds will be given for the support of a mountain boy in St. Andrew's School, Sewanee. A report of the work of the club for the past winter will appear in the July magazine.

CHURCH BOY SCOUTS.

The Boy Scouts have been meeting regularly on Thursday nights through the winter. Doctor Lockery has been giving instructions in "first aid" work, and the boys will be able at an early date and pass their second class tests. Through the kindness of a friend an opportunity will be given to the boys to go into camp for two weeks, probably in July. A tract of land has been generously put at their disposal in the vicinity of West Chester.

CHOIR OUTING BENEFIT.

On Wednesday and Thursday evenings, June 10 and 11, the choir boys will present a minstrel show in the Parish Hall. The proceeds will be given to the Choir Outing Fund. Tickets, 25 cents. The minstrels are being coached by Mr. Harry Coulthard, and Mr. Agnew is the pianist, but the whole is under the direction of Mr. Fry. Application for tickets may be made to Mr. Joseph W. Fry, the Clergy House.

GUILD OF INTERCESSION.

Monthly leaflets are now inserted in all copies of the magazine, and about sixty extra copies are mailed separately to persons who have handed in their names. But not enough people send requests for prayers. Such intercessions should be written each on a separate slip of paper, and mailed to the Guild of Intercession at the Clergy House. Thanksgivings also should not be forgotten. Donations toward the expense of printing will be gratefully received.

THE MEN'S CLUB.

At the closing smoker on Wednesday night, May 13, there were songs by our baritone soloist, Mr. Cornman, and the farce:

MILLIONS IN IT.

Characters as they appeared:

Mr. Weissenpimfel....Mr. Leon G. Kraft and
Mr. Olmstein.....Mr. Francis Casey
(Of the Firm of Architects)
Mr. Pingle, a Christian Scientist Plumber, Mr. Edward Nolan
Ben, a Colored Porter.Mr. Clinton Jenkins
Hon. John Brown, a Client, Mr. Alfred Johnson
Miss Helen Augusta Wind, Mr. Brown's Niece.....Mr. Richard Ashhurst, Jr.

The little play went off so well that it will be repeated at the Choir Outing benefit, in the Parish Hall, June 10 and 11. The next smoker will be held on the second Wednesday in October. The new series have been worth while. All that is needed is for every one concerned to go after "prospects" and bring them along bodily to the meetings. Thus, if ten men were each to be armed with a list of ten other possibilities, much might be done. There is no reason why St. Clement's M. C. should not become a solid organization, thoroughly in the hands of loyal church laymen, working in direct co-operation with the clergy, and allying with the religious and social life of the parish, not only the confirmed, but also those who have had no such Catholic privileges as we enjoy.

THE LENTEN SEWING.

The women of the parish met as usual this year, on Friday afternoons during Lent, in the Parish Hall. The following is a report of the work accomplished:

Besides donations of material and clothing, $71.50 was contributed by individuals.

G. S. N. FINALS.

The Guild of St. Nicholas is not a social settlement, but is intended to bring boys under sixteen into vital connection with the religious life of St. Clement's parish, and to keep them in that connection. Some of the boys have done sheet brass work, but the majority have gone in for indoor athletics. The statistics are as follows:

Number of meetings	28
Chaplain and Instructors	5
Choir Boys	40
Former Choir Boys	25
Non-Choir Boys of the Parish	33
Guests, "Chums," etc	56
Total	159
Average attendance	43

Thirty-five boys have attended the sheet metal class. Prizes for the best exhibit of manual work were awarded on April 28 to Charles Fortune (Chorister), Weir Darrah (recent Chorister), and Charles Rogers. The judges were Miss Eugenie M. Fryer, one of the founders and now treasurer of the G. S. N.; Miss Lea, another founder of the Guild; and Mr. F. C. Ferguson, the instructor of the class.

Judges for the athletic events were Mr. Thacher Souder, our Scoutmaster: Mr. Clinton Jenkins; and Rev. Father Beede, Chaplain. Three prizes were given for total points in all events: a first place bringing three points, a second place two points, and a third place one point. For the third consecutive carnival, Norman Ruark, age fourteen, recently in the choir, won the championship, by a score of 20 points. Howard McVeagh (Chorister) took second place with 15 points, and Arthur Riley (Chorister) had third place with 12 points. John Minton (Chorister) gained honorable mention with 10 points.

Now, the expense of materials and the pay of two teachers for the gym, and manual work, must be met entirely from voluntary subscriptions of friends. Several times this winter the Guild work has been on the point of shutting down because of a lack of funds. From the apparent prosperity of the organization it is perhaps natural that the difficulties of maintenance should not be appreciated except by the rector and managers.

In planning for next year's work, friends are asked to consider the possibility of introducing a class in miscellaneous woodwork. Wood can be procured at a special low rate, but there must be a small set of tools for each boy. Thus, from $75 to $100 would be needed for tools.

As for the gym, the managers will gladly name various needed games and apparatus.

THE NEW CHAPEL.

As noted in the last number of the magazine, the Lady Chapel, provided for by the legacy of Mrs. Boudinot, will be built this summer. The members of the parish may be interested in a description of the contemplated alterations.

The organ will be raised six feet on either side of the choir, and rebuilt with new electric action. The choir railing will be brought forward to make room for the "return stalls," which the clergy formerly occupied. The organ case and choir rail will be of brown stone, corresponding with that of the chancel arch.

The Lady Chapel will be constructed under the organ at the end of the south aisle. A small apse will be built to accommodate the altar at the east end, so that all the pews in the south aisle of the church will be available when Mass is being said. The chapel will be lined with red stone, like that in our present sanctuary, and a handsome pair of wrought iron gates will be placed at the entrance.

The completed work will add greatly to the beauty of the church interior.

The organ was taken down after Ascension Day, and a wooden screen has been placed across the nave. St. Katharine's Altar has been brought over to the centre aisle, and the church building will be in use all summer. It is expected that the work will be completed about October first.

A LETTER FROM ALASKA.

(Written by one of our Communicants.)

ST. LUKE'S MISSION,
SALCHAKET, ALASKA, March 9, 1914.

My Dear E——

Some time ago I received Xmas cards from you. It was very kind and lovely of you to send them. They came late for Xmas, but I shall find them useful next year.

We have had a great deal of sickness in the village among the children. Six of them have died since November. Little Martha was one of the six. She lived with me for two years before I went out, and when I returned she came back to me, very ill, and for two months I was unable to leave her. She had a stroke, and then went blind. After that she became hepless, just like an infant. She died three weeks ago with an abscess of the head. Jacob died on the same day; so I had a double funeral. The house has been fumigated, and I have made everything as tidy as I know how. If any germs escaped, it isn't my fault. I will take no more sick cases into my cabin. Lucy is very sick, but we have put up a tent for her. This is a far better plan.

The winter has been so long! Will spring never come? The ground has been covered with snow ever since last August, and it has been snowing again for the last three days. Yet the winter has been mild, with an even temperature running from about twelve below zero to twenty most of the time. During the dark days we had twenty to forty below zero, but never anything below forty.

The old people, children, and sick are home in the village. The other people are away, trapping for fur. This has been a poor fur season, and I am afraid that we shall have some hungry folk this spring, before the river opens so that we can get fish.

We had a very nice Xmas, even though our two children were sick in the cabin. There was a big log fire out of doors. All gathered about it and danced the old-time Indian dances. The dear people ran races, and played all sorts of delightful games in the moonlight. We had a very pretty Xmas tree. I invited all the white men who were on the trail. Some one sent me attractive neckties and handkerchiefs, which I gave to the white men. They were very pleased. Then we sang carols, and both children and grown-ups gave recitations. I told the story of the "Little Gray Lamb." Each guest received a gift. The little children sang something called the "Christmas Candles," and lighted the tree while they sang. My babies said a piece called the "Six Little Candles." Each child was supposed to be a candle, and the words sounded so cute and funny in the broken English. The oldest orator was four years old, and little Edith, just three years. We quite surprised the white men with our doings. One of them said that this was the first real Xmas he had had for twenty years. All stayed at the mission for supper.

I was rather tired when everything was over I forgot to say that we had had a service at six in the morning.

Mail goes through here to-night, and I am rushing to answer some of my letters. My mail has been sadly neglected, for the sick, the scholars, and the services must have my first attention.

People will all begin to return for Holy Week. A very happy Eastertide to you.

I am, believe me, sincerely yours,

MARGARET R. WIGHTMAN.

MISSIONARY NOTES.

The students of Oberlin College have pledged themselves to raise the amount necessary to take advantage of the offer made by officials of the Shansi Province in China, whereby the Congregational missionaries of the American Board are to take entire charge of the public school system, with full permission to teach Christianity. This offer is a strong example of a changed point of view on the part of the rulers of China.

On Mid-Lent Sunday St. Stephen's parish, McKeesport, Pa., presented an eagle lectern to St. John's parish, Tokyo, Japan. The lectern stood in a prominent place in the church throughout the services of the day and awakened a keen interest in the Sunday school and congregation. The loving gift was an excellent example of Christian sympathy and fellowship.

There was a glint of Indian humor in the telling figure of speech used by the Rev. P. J. Deloria during the discussion on the permanency of clerical service at the recent Ogilvie Conference in South Dakota. "I wish," he said, "that the missionaries who come to South Dakota would try to leave the track of their feet—a full man's track—not the track of their toes only."

The money for a new church in Wuchang, now known as St. Michael's Church, has been promised to the New China Fund as a memorial gift from an individual donor. This will make possible the development of a large work among the students, army and factory people in a busy part of the city where the mission has been for a long time desirous of establishing another radiating center for the Gospel. This new work will be in charge of the Rev. R. E. Wood and the clergy associated with him.

There still continues to be a decrease in the missionary offerings as compared with those of last year. While not large, it may be serious if it continues. There should be an earnest effort made this year to pay the full apportionment and so meet the urgent needs of the Church's missionary work. If every individual and parish, as well as diocese, would take the matter to heart, the difficulty would be instantly overcome.

The results of the modern methods of church finance are illustrated in the following experience of St. David's parish, Portland, Oregon: "The every-member canvass and weekly offering have changed a yearly anxiety into a monthly privilege; have perceptibly increased our ability to give; have in no wise hindered our parochial activities, but, on the contrary, have stimulated them. Since the introduction of the plan, we discount our city taxes, and the rector's salary has been increased by 25 per cent."

The Chicago Historical Society recently held an exhibition of objects illustrating the history and condition of the Republic of Liberia. Much favorable notice was given to our mission work there and the importance of Liberia was thus stated by the society: "Liberia is the only part of the Dark Continent which remains in possession of negroes. It is our first and only colony. It is the stage upon which Great Britain, France, Germany and the United States are playing at internationalism. The 'Black Republic' may prove the Hope of Africa."

The committee who are endeavoring to raise $100,000 for St. Luke's Hospital, Tokyo, to duplicate the $100,000 conditionally promised by the Japan government, report $62,000 in hand, and urge the Church to help them to success in their undertaking. The secretary of the committee is Mrs. Charles R. Pancoast, 408 Price street, West Germantown, Philadelphia, Pa.

In the course of a missionary story published by the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, an interesting dialogue occurs. A missionary at home on furlough has been enchanting three boys by his stories of adventure in Burmah. When he begins to talk about his work their interest flags. "I haven't any interest in missions," says one of them. To which the missionary replies: "I suppose not. Have you, by the way, any interest in the bank at Brighton? Did you get anything out of it when you were over there the other day?" "Of course not," replied the boy, "I haven't put any money in there. We bank at Northampton." "Just so," answered Mr. Collier, "if you have put nothing in there you get nothing out. It is exactly the same with missions."

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs has recently sent an interesting letter to all the employees of the Indian service, impressing upon them strongly their duty to save the American Indian from the curse of liquor. He says: "Apart from my personal convictions, there is nothing that could induce me, since I have taken the oath of office as Commissioner of Indian Affairs, to touch a single drop of any sort of intoxicating liquor, and this regardless of my attitude on the Prohibition question."

Commisisoner Sells undoubtedly preaches sound doctrine. It is to be hoped that those whom he addresses will take it seriously. Certainly, in approval of his effort, we shall all voice the words of Joseph H. Choate, who writes to the Commissioner: "You are absolutely right in your position that if we can save the American Indian from the curse of whiskey we can save him from pretty much all the other ills that threaten him."

CHINESE PUZZLES.

Many are the puzzles of a missionary in China! In America the first requisite for a Sunday school is to secure a large and regular attendance. In China this is only the first step in a series of puzzles. One of our missionaries writes an amusing account of some of his difficulties:

"We wanted to know who came every Sunday and who came only once in a while. Of course, you will say the obvious way to secure this information was to call the roll. We tried this just once—it almost broke up the Sunday School!

The children did not understand why we wanted their names. We might send their names to America, and America might send over and make slaves of them! We might send their names up to the God about whom we talked so much, and untold things might happen to them! We found a simple way out of the difficulty, we stamped their papers every Sunday.

"The next puzzle was to get a supply of teachers. Our catechists and the advanced pupils of our boarding school supplied teachers for the boys, but custom has decreed that girls must not be taught by the opposite sex. The only thing we could do was to ask the ladies of our congregation. Some of these ladies have 'home duties.' Not that they plead these as an excuse; they didn't. They were willing to come, and did come, bringing their 'home duty' with them in the shape of a restless, frolicsome baby of one or more years. The faithfulness and perseverance of these good ladies is most commendable, but you can imagine how much the children learn when the teacher is leaning over to shake 'Home Duty' in order to prevent music not on the program; or when she makes a desperate grab to rescue 'Home Duty' who is attempting to balance herself on the back of a bench. When we opened Sunday school we did not anticipate that lessons in child management would be a part of the course, but one must be prepared for anything in China."

PARISH NOTES.

Father Hutchinson said mass at the Eastern State Penitentiary on June 12th. About eighty made their communions.

Commencing the first Sunday in July Evensong will be read at 5 o'clock and the evening service will be discontinued for the summer.

The rector is endeavoring to procure photographs of all the rectors of St. Clement's Church. Portraits of Dr. Spackman and Father Sharpe are wanting. Is any parishioner able to supply the deficiency?

On June 1st the Rev. Sidney Atmore Caine came into residence and will be a permanent member of our church staff. Father Caine has been for some years curate at St. Luke's Church, Trinity parish, New York City.

Father Quin is now on his holiday. He will return the middle of July and have an additional outing in September. Father Reede and Father Caine will be away during the latter part of July and the month of August. Father Hutchinson leaves for his vacation on June 29th.

The Mothers' Meeting held its closing session on May 29th with an exhibition of the sewing accomplished during the winter. There were 124 garments, mostly for children, besides two dozen worsted caps and scarfs and two patchwork quilts. The box will be sent to Mrs. Wetmore for the mountain work at Arden, N. C.

THE GIRLS' CLUB.

The Girls' Club held its last meeting for the season on Tuesday evening, June 9th. This meeting completed the first year of the Club's existence.

When the Club was organized last November it was planned that it should be a self-governing and self-supporting organization. By this time we feel that it has established itself on these principles. There are forty-seven members and six associate members enrolled. It is hoped that the membership list will be increased next year and that all the young women and girls of the parish will take an active interest in the Club's welfare.

During the winter the first Tuesday of the month was reserved for a business meeting, the second for a lecture. On the third Tuesday, Dr. Esther Weyl, of this city, gave interesting "First Aid and General Hygiene" talks. These lectures were, as a rule, well attended and popular. The fourth Tuesday was considered the social evening. It was generally spent in dancing or playing games. Preceding the regular meetings of the Club the cooking class met at 6 o'clock and prepared supper under the direction of Mrs. Joseph Paul.

On Thursday evening, June 4th, the Club gave a Strawberry Festival. Over six hundred tickets were sold, and, notwithstanding the rainy weather, the Parish Hall was well filled. There were cake, flower and lemonade tables. The gymnasium was used for dancing. We are glad to state that $100 was cleared after all the expenses were paid. This money will be given for the support of a boy at St. Andrew's School, Sewanee, Tenn.

CHOIR OUTING FUND.

The choir boys sold about four hundred tickets and have received about one hundred dollars to date. As the expenses were about sixty dollars, contributions are desired at this time if the boys are to have their one day's outing at Atlantic City. Checks may be made payable to Mr. Joseph W. Fry, St. Clement's Clergy House.

It may be fairly said that the boys and their grown-up friends gave an unusually good musical evening. The hall was filled on both nights, June 10 and 11. There were almost fifty choristers and candidates in the minstrel show, the success of which is due to the skilful and untiring coaching of Mr. Harry Coulthard, and the assistance at the piano of one of our acolytes, Mr. G. Smyser Agnew.

The interlocutor was Master Lloyd Engle, our recent solo boy. The end men were the Masters Lionel Bergen, Thomas Behrle, John Coulthard and Benjamin Baker. A prologue, "Blackbird Talk from Our Own Cherry and Apple Trees," was recited by Master Thomas McCollom, who also furnished a song during the program. In addition to songs by all of the end men, Master Leland Myers sang "Thy Mouth Is a Rose."

After the program had been printed word came that the Children's Orchestra of the Northwest School could not give their four scheduled numbers. In order that the audience might not feel robbed, a professional strong man, a native of Tunis, was procured. Mr. Aristides Prokos, a Greek violinist, gave extra numbers on both nights. Cunningham and Young, professional German comedians, scored a decided hit.

Our baritone soloist, Mr. J. Willard Cornman, was accompanied by our choirmaster and organist, Mr. Henry S. Fry. A one-act farce, "Millions In It," played at the Men's Smoker last month, was repeated by our acolytes. There was one change in the cast, Mr. Herbert Daniels playing "Ben, a colored porter," in place of Mr. Clinton Jenkins. The other characters were acted by Messrs. Leon Kraft, Francis Casey, Edward Nolan, Alfred Johnson and Richard Ashhurst, Jr.

The choirmaster is very grateful to Mr. Albert Hoff for the arrangement of the minstrel libretto, score and program; to Mr. Joseph Lodge, for final coaching; to Miss Elizabeth Martin, Mr. Joseph Coulthard, Mr. David McClintock and Master Norman Ruark, for assistance in copying and advertising, and to Andrew J. Bair & Son, for the generous loan of performers' chairs.

THE DUPLEX ENVELOPE SYSTEM.

The first quarter of our fiscal year ended June 30, and it is a pleasure to be able to report a material increase in offerings as a result of the adoption of the duplex envelope system.

The summer is upon us, when our congregations naturally are very small, but when expenses run on as at other seasons of the year. Those using the envelopes are urged to make their offerings regularly, and when going away on their vacations to send in their envelopes with offerings for the Sundays on which they will be absent. If this is done by every one, as has already been done by a number of our people, the Accounting Warden will be in a position to meet payments as they fall due.

Some few of the holders of the envelopes have not yet begun to use them, while still other members of the parish have not yet obtained them. The former are strongly urged to pay up their arrears, while others who desire the envelopes will have them furnished promptly on application to the Accounting Warden.

COWLEY IN INDIA.

The work of the Cowley Fathers is always of interest to St. Clement's people. We reprint from the Messenger the following:

Father Tovey writes in a recent letter:

"My lambs have had their commencement and gone home. They have taken about a week to disappear, as some of them have no homes in particular to disappear into, and others live in Bagdad and Busorah, which are too far off. But I warned them all that the school was to be closed for May (to stop expenses, and give me a holiday from looking after them). They have been hanging on to see if my hard heart would melt, but to-morrow it is to be all locked up and the servants sent off for a holiday. So I guess the lambs will go, too. I think all the Poona boys are at Karli, and our (native) boys will go there also, as smallpox has been rather prevalent, and cholera is about, too. I had a visit from another American this week—sort of 'last rose of summer,' for Bombay is decidedly hot now, and it is the season to get out of India."

And here is a description of the Playgrounds, which follows the letter which he sent us before:

"In going around our compound, after the school-room comes the girls' and infants' playground. The compound is on the side of a hill, and in order to play cricket and football the middle part of the playground has been leveled, and this is the boys' playground, but the school-room stands on the high ground, and beside it under the wall there is some more high ground, on which grow three mango trees, a date palm and a Bohenia. The Bohenia tree is a beautiful fine straight tree, with new thick foliage; there are several in the compound, only it has one disadvantage. At this time of the year it drops all its leaves, and flowers most abundantly. The flowers are pretty, something like a pink hyacinth, and they grow in bunches. Just now our garden is covered with the fallen petals. But this scent!—well, it is abject flattery to call it scent, only, I suppose, some insects like it, and we will adopt their point of view. F. Maxwell was wondering where the bad smell came from, and tradition says that F. Page, in the early days of the Mission, complained to the municipality about the state of the drains, and had an inspector come down to overhaul things. But, as F. Biscoe said, when he planted a few more of them on the compound, the smell only lasts a few weeks and the shade is beautiful nearly all the year around. So these trees make a nice shady place for the lambs to play, and we have planted a giant's stride and a swing to help them amuse themselves. The pity is that it seems likely all these things will have to go. The Government is pressing us to build a laboratory for the school, and, as they offer to pay for it, it seems impolite to say no, especially as they may refuse our money grant, which we get annually, if we were to refuse. So the plan is to lengthen the present school room by adding the laboratory at the end. Of course it is very nice for the lambs to have a laboratory to work in, and to learn Chemistry and Physics, but they have a good lot of lessons already, and the Government has not made it plain which of the old lessons they are to give up to make room in their heads for the new ones. It will be more subjects for the teachers to teach, too. Just before and after school and in the dinner hour the giant's stride and swing are thronged, but soon the girls and infants go away home, and the whole playground is in the possession of the boys. Later in the evening some ayahs often come, bringing babes and sucklings with them, for they have found a nice quiet place in the yard at the west end of the Church, in the corner of the playground. This is shady, because of the Bohenia trees, and quiet, and is a high terrace overlooking the playground, so that they can watch the boys playing; sometimes they go down to the baby-swing on the veranda. It is nice for them to have a quiet place in dusty, busy Mazapan. The babes generally have mothers or sisters in the school, and are prospective scholars. Their elder sisters sometimes come with them and introduce me to the special babe, and point out its particular merits and beauties. They are always very proud of their little brother or sister, and think there never was such a baby—which is very dear of them—and, of course, there never was. They stay till it gets dark, and then the ayahs take them away."

THE REVELATION OF GOD THE HOLY SPIRIT.

The dispensation of the Holy Spirit differs from all previous dispensations in this—that it involved no fresh disclosures of the Mind of God. The whole substance of the Truth had been already presented to man in the person of Christ. He was Himself "the Way, the Truth and the Life." "Grace and Truth came by Jesus Christ." Nothing could be added to what had thus already passed before the minds of men. "Show us the Father, and it suffices us," was the cry of the Apostles. "Hast thou not seen Me, Philip?" was the reply. "He that hath seen Me, hath seen the Father." They were looking as Philip spake, on the "Fulness of the Godhead bodily," revealed to their eyes.

What was wanted was not fresh Truth, but the kindling of the light in which they could see the Truth, the clear opening to their enkindled and illuminated understandings of all that was involved in the manifestation and work of Christ. Men needed the Light of God to be shed on the boundless prospect of what hitherto "eye had not seen, nor ear heard, neither had entered into the heart of man to conceive of what God had prepared for them that love Him," but which is now "revealed unto us by His Spirit." And there was needed also the power to live in the truth, which it is the special work of the Holy Ghost according to the law and order of life in the ever-blessed Trinity, to impart to the members of Christ. The thanksgiving of the soul under the Revelation of God the Holy Ghost is "Blessed art Thou, O God, who hast in Thy light enabled us to see light." The one is the vision of the blind looking on the noonday sun; the other is the vision of those that see, walking in rapture in the perfect day.

Beyond this illumination the yet further result involved in the Revelation of the Holy Spirit, is the enabling us "leaving the first principles" of life "to go on unto perfection." What was impossible to man before, except by anticipative grace and in partial instances, became possible now, and this as an abiding state, because the in-dwelling Presence of the Holy Spirit is an abiding Gift.

This perfecting of humanity is the special attribute of the Holy Ghost, even as the Fulness of the Divine Godhead was through Him. As His Procession involved the completeness of Divine Personalities, the full extension of the Divine Essence, so in the renewed life of man it is His work to impart the fulness of the predestinating grace of God. This great truth had been imaged before in the material creation. After the substance of the earth had been prepared for its present state, it remained "without form and void," till the Holy Spirit began His work.

It was when "the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters" that the earth was clothed with life and beauty. According to the same law, humanity waited for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit before its materials could be fashioned into the perfect form, and filled with the crowning glory, intended for it. There had been in this, as in all the dealings of God, anticipations of what was to come; lights going before as heralds in the vast procession of the Saints of God; chosen individuals living above their age to foreshow in their partial gifts the future enlightenment of the multitudes who in their several degrees of grace would fill up the measure of the stature of Christ in the latter days. But the full and the abiding gift of grace was not yet. It was only by a prerogative peculiarly her own that it was shown what grace could do in Mary, the Mother of God, enshrining within the pure creature's form all possible virtues pleasing to God, and showing how individual souls might embrace and be embraced by the life-giving spirit, "as He divideth to every one severally as He will." Her's was a special creation of Divine love, and the Saints of Israel were exceptions to the ordinary course of the economy of redemption. The perfecting of the life of renewed humanity followed the order of life in the Godhead. For as the Fulness of the Divine Life was through the Procession of the Holy Ghost, so the completeness of the work of God in man could not be till His coming.

The manifestation of the Spirit must follow the manifestation of the Son of God, as His procession followed the Generation of the Son of God. "The Holy Ghost" was not yet given, because Jesus was not yet glorified." He could visit chosen individuals for special ends. He could not impart Himself in His Fulness to humanity at large, nor take up His above to form a permanent creation through the free development of His power in those whom God might call according to His purpose.

He needed previously the groundwork of a renewed nature as the sphere of His operations as the starting point, so to speak, of His activity, and He waited till this need was supplied in the Person of Christ. The pure and perfect Humanity of our Lord was intended basis of His operations. On Him first, as the new and more perfect Adam, the Head of a new Creation, was "the oil of gladness poured forth." According to the prophecy of Isaiah, "the spirit rested upon Him" in the sevenfold plentitude of grace. And then as a consequence of His Fulness, from and through our Lord, the Spirit diffused Himself throughout His members. The Spirit first incorporates us into the body of Christ, and then He sheds forth on each of us the fulness which is in Christ. Blessed Spirit! Having first been the Bond and Perfectness of the Godhead He overpasses the bounds of Divine Nature, and then, by an exuberance of Divine Love and glorious life, He spreads forth beyond into created life, and fills it as it is capable of bearing the weight of Deity and sharing its Beatitude. By imparting fresh powers He exalts natural gifts, and super-adds new elements of continual advancement in the spiritual order, leading on the whole man in each separate individual, expanding and perfecting the higher ingredient in man, "the spirit," now only in an incipient and rudimental state of development, but hereafter to become the predominant, constituent part of our threefold nature, till the very beauty and the whole life of Christ is represented in His mystical Body, reflecting through its several members its perfect Lord.

All that has been felt from the first springing of our regenate life, the kindlings of hope, the vision, the resolve, the sense of power, the openings of heaven, the intimations of the will of God, growing with our growth and strengthening themselves in meditative hours, in sweet communion with God,—all that has formed itself into the substantial realities of our higher life, and become the stay, the rest, the delight of our being in its outward mysterious course, the groundwork of steadfast habits and faithful endeavors, and of ever growing prospects of advancing grace, as we gain a firmer hold of the unseen world. These are all results of the Dispensation of the Blessed Spirit. They are going forth of the everlasting in His design to perfect the new Creation to be His "first fruits" in the "new Heavens and the new earth." All that we have known of good, all that we shall ever know hereafter, is the developing of the spirit-life within us, as it is informed, quickened and indwelt by the Christ-revealing Spirit of God.

Rev. T. T. Carter

MISSIONARY NOTES.

At its meeting on May 13th the Board of Missions voted the appropriations for the coming year. Notwithstanding the earnest appeals made from all points in the mission field, it was not thought wise, in view of the financial conditions prevailing in the country, to materially increase the appropriations. They were, therefore, kept within the present amount. The gross apportionment on the Church was also retained at the same figure as last year. Sufficient reductions were made in central expenses so that the full amount voted was slightly less than the schedule at present in force.

At the request of the Board of Missions, a commission, consisting of the Rev. F. J. Clark, Recording Secretary, and Dr. J. H. Dillard, will sail at the end of the summer to visit our missionary district of Liberia.

Mrs. Rowe, wife of the Bishop of Alaska, died in Seattle, Wash., on April 22d, after a long illness. For some weeks the bishop had been with her, having cancelled all his engagements for the fall, in view of the state of her health. The whole Church will feel the deepest sympathy for him in his bereavement.

MOVIES AND MISSIONS.

The stereopticon and the "movies" have reached the far corners of the world, and are a great help in educational mission work. Our missionary at Point Hope, Alaska, the Rev. A. R. Hoare, tells how the Eskimo, in the long Arctic night, delight in what is to them indeed a "magic" lantern. He says: "By the bye, can't you persuade someone to send us some good comic slides, or at least something secular? All our slides, with the exception of two or three photos of New England Bible Classes, are Biblical. A little entertainment is good for man and beast. I wish you could see the people while the pictures are being shown. They are soul-struck. It would warm the cockles of the giver's heart if she could see them."

In the Far East the Rev. J. Armistead Welbourne, one of our mission staff in Tokyo, says that when "Quo Vadis" was given in moving pictures at the Tokyo Imperial Theater, he and his associates were impressed with its value as a missionary agency. "The explanations in Japanese were most sympathetically given, and the whole thing was not so much a 'show' as a reverent dramatic illustration of what Christianity truly is. I recognized in the crowded theater members of noble families, rich merchants, people of the court, none of whom under any consideration could be brought to go to church."

OUR WORKERS IN MEXICO.

All our American missionaries have left Mexico with the exception of the Rev. Messrs. Burleson, Mellen and Watson, who are in Mexico City, and the Rev. H. M. Green, who is at Puebla. Such reports as are received, chiefly by the hands of refugees, say that everything is quiet and as yet there has been no serious damage to life or property. Indeed, it would seem that a better spirit toward Americans is on the increase. One of our missionaries, in a private letter, says: "I stopped in a pulque saloon a little while ago to get out of a sudden shower. The proprietor gave me a chair, insisted on giving me a cigar, and he and the customers were as smiling and friendly as possible; shook hands when I left and invited me to come again. In fact, all the lower class seem to go out of their way to be friendly to an American. It was not so two weeks ago. And I hear, on all sides, that the peons will make no attempt at opposition as the Americans come in. What the government might do is another matter."

Bishop Brent, of the Philippines, has declined the call which was extended to him by the diocese of New Jersey to become its diocesan. He feels bound to remain in the work which he has undertaken in the Philippine Islands. We have reason to be thankful for such leadership as that shown by our missionary episcopate. Decisions like this of Bishop Brent are a high testimony, not only to the individual qualities of the man who makes them, but to the importance of the work in which he is occupied.

In estimating the cost of administration of our missionary work, the ratio has always been based upon the gross amount passing through the treasury. The correctness of this practice having being called in question, the Treasurer, after careful investigation, finds that it is practically the universal custom of all the larger business enterprises, such as Life and Fire Insurance, and Bond and Mortgage Companies; also of the larger mission boards. Experts, to whom the question was submitted, declare that the ratio of central expenses, based upon gross receipts, was correct. Figured in this manner the total central expense of last year, including administration and publicity, was 8 7-10 per cent. The average rate of eight other mission boards conducting work like our own was 9 8-10 per cent.

The Church's greatest asset in her work in China is the splendid band of Chinese clergy which has been raised up by means of the educational institutions and methods consistently promoted through many years. The loss of one of these men is a loss indeed. It was, therefore, with profound regret that the Board of Missions received a cable message announcing the death of the Rev. Wang Li Tang, who has been described by one who knows him as "perhaps the ablest, most devoted and most widely-loved of our Chinese clergy" Mr. Wang died at Shasi, in the district of Hankow. Born in heathenism and poverty he became one of the foremost leaders of the Chinese Church, living his Christianity with the fullness of faith and spiritual strength which was the admiration of all his associates.

THE SCOUT CAMP.

Seventeen boys of the parish, enrolled as Troop No. 5 of the Boy Scouts of America, were enabled by the generosity of one of the parishioners to go into camp near Kirkland, Pennsylvania.

On Monday, June 29, the boys arrived and pitched camp. The troop was fortunate in procuring an attractive situation, near the headwaters of Chester Creek. Food supply was six miles away, but the kindliness of the neighboring farmers, both in sending into town for what things we wanted, and also in giving fresh dairy products, aided considerably toward making the commissary department a success.

The boys enjoyed swimming, hiking and baseball for recreation, but considerable time was devoted to scout work and camp chores. Owing to the fact that it was our first camp, there were many tests which the boys had their first opportunity to pass. The daily routine was preserved as nearly as possible, with reveille at 6 A. M. Camp inspection followed breakfast. The morning was usually passed in becoming more proficient in scout craft. In the afternoon the boys enjoyed a swim or a game of baseball. After supper we had the camp fire contest, and taps at 9 P. M.

On the Fourth of July we upset the regularity of our usual camp day and sacrificed everything for a good time. We had a swim in the morning, and after dinner a ball game and field events. In the evening the following prizes were given: First prize, to Lionel Bergen, as the best all-around scout; second prize, Albert Craft. A prize for the boy showing the most improvement during camp, Russell Copestick. Arthur Riley built the camp fire in the shortest time.

The only drawbacks I can mention are: First, the absence of the Scout Master until Friday, July 3; and, second, two severe rainstorms.

We broke camp on Sunday, July 6, and every one returned with a feeling of regret. I think, and more important still, there was not one of the seventeen boys who failed to develop rapidly as a scout during camp. I wish to commend the cheerfulness and obedience with which the boys undertook the tedious tasks of camping. I sincerely hope we can arrange another week very soon, and that it may be as satisfactory as the troop's first camp.

MISSIONARY NOTES.

Offerings toward the mission work of the Church are increased slightly in volume over those of last year, the treasury on the first day of June showing a total of over $15,000. However, since expenditures have necessarily been increased to a much larger proportion, there is still need of earnest effort and generous giving.

The death of the Bishop of Oregon, which occurred May 26, was a shock and surprise to Church people. He was in the prime of life and in vigorous health. Under his energetic leadership the work in Oregon was going forward in a healthy and aggressive way.

Not the least of Bishop Scadding's gifts was that of a ready pen. He was a well-known lecturer on Church matters and used lantern slides with good effect. He also wrote several effective pamphlets containing Church instruction, and was a leader in the work of Sunday Schools.

His episcopate of eight years was most profitable, both to his diocese and to the general Church, and his loss will be deeply felt.

The Diocese of Virginia on May 20, on the first ballot, unanimously elected as its Coadjutor the Rev. Dr. W. C. Brown. This is Dr. Brown's third call to the episcopate. His entire ministry has been spent in the mission field of Brazil. This and other recent elections at least prove that the man in the mission field is not submerged nor forgotten. He is seen and known of the Church, and if his work be effective, that fact is recognized.

St. Paul's College, Tokyo, Japan, at its recent commencement, graduated twenty men. Out of fourteen graduates in the arts course, thirteen are to enter the Theological School. Is there anywhere such a record in our Church colleges in this country? The Middle or Preparatory School at the same time graduated eighty-seven students.

In the death of the Rev. Samuel H. Bishop, Secretary of the American Church Institute for Negroes, the domestic mission work has suffered a great loss. He served with marked efficiency and devotion, and was instrumental in making the institute a strong helper of our schools for Negroes.

St. Paul's Normal and Industrial School, Lawrenceville, Va., on May 21, closed a fruitful year of service to the Negro race. Forty-one were graduated, after a thorough course, not only in scholastic but in industrial education.

On Easter Eve six young men from the college department of St. John's University, Shanghai, were baptized. One was a graduate who had completed his education at Cornell; one was from the Senior class, a young man who is captain of the athletic team; one was from the Sophomore class; one from the Freshman; the other two from the Preparatory department. The service was in English, by the request of the young men. The parents of all gave their consent and, as they come from influential families, this was noteworthy.

In view of the fact that the next meeting of the General Convention, which will be held in St. Louis, will mark the fiftieth anniversary of Bishop Tuttle's election to the episcopate, it has been suggested that a thank offering be raised and presented at that time. North Dakota, at its recent convocation, passed a resolution endorsing this idea and pledging $1,000 toward its achievement; also suggesting that the thank offering be for the endowment of such part of the general missionary work or of the general clergy relief as Bishop Tuttle may elect.

The General Synod of the Nippon Sei-Ko-Kwai—which is the Japanese way of saying the Holy Catholic Church in Japan—was recently held. This legislative assembly is the equivalent of our General Convention. Bishop Tucker, of Kyoto, in speaking of the work of the Synod, says: "On the whole the Synod made one realize that the Sei-Ko-Kwai is rapidly developing those qualities which, when joined to financial self-support, will fit it for its career as an independent national Church and make it a power for good in the land—a worthy branch of the Holy Catholic Church."

The third meeting of the Synod of the district of Hankow, China, took place in February. This district, like all those in the foreign field, is struggling not only toward self-support, but is also making a beginning in doing missionary work outside its own borders. It is conducting a special mission at Shihnan Fu in the province of Hupeh. During one of the afternoon sessions of the Synod announcement was made that $748 was still needed to pay for the land. Within about twenty minutes the entire sum was pledged by delegates present, either individually or on behalf of their congregations. This, to the Chinese of Hankow, was what a foreign missionary field would be to a council in our own land. We wonder whether we could count upon a like response here.

An interesting incident occurred during the recent convocation in Eastern Oklahoma. The question of arrearages in payments toward the several diocesan funds was being considered. It was moved to remit the assessment upon a little place called Texanna, in view of the fact that it contained but one communicant, and she a woman. As the vote was on the point of being taken, the clergyman in whose large field Texanna is located, rose and held up a $5 bill, saying: "Mrs. Rogers, of Texanna, sends this by me. Two dollars of it is to go for general missions, two for diocesan missions, and the remainder for convocation expenses. Mrs. Rogers also desires that she be regularly assessed in a like amount, and begs that she may continue to have the privilege of representing the Church in Texanna."

All honor to Mrs. Rogers! It is upon such loyal Churchmanship as this, manifested by some of our scattered Church folk in remote communities, that the parishes and missions of the future are founded.

PARISH NOTES.

The eight o'clock Mass on Sundays and the 7.30 Mass on weekdays, will be resumed after October 1.

The Sunday School will open the first Sunday in October. Parents are urged to send the children to the first session. Father Caine will be in charge this winter.

The work on the Lady Chapel is progressing. The organ builders expect to commence the installation of the remodeled instrument at once, and the whole plan will reach completion in the early fall.

It is a pleasure to announce that the parish has paid its missionary apportionment in full. The new year commences September 1st. It is earnestly hoped that all who have the duplex envelopes will make use of both sides during the coming year. If this is done, the parish ought to have no difficulty in meeting its apportionment.

Father Caine returns from his holiday on September 1. Father Hutchinson expects to be in residence by the second Sunday in September, and Father Quin will then take an additional two weeks' rest. During the summer Father Dyer, formerly curate of the Church of the Ascension, has been assisting in the parish. Father Beede is at present in charge of St. Luke's camp for boys at Bellport, L. I. He will not return to St. Clement's, but expects to take up some work in the mission field. He will be much missed by the boys and girls, to whose interests he has devoted himself.

"AS THE FATHER LOVED ME, I ALSO LOVED YOU: ABIDE IN MY LOVE."

(St. John xv: 9.)

The Lord again varies the terms of His appeal to His disciples to abide in Him: "Abide ye in my love." He had loved them with a love which bore some analogy to the Divine Love of the Father for the Son. The Father loved the Son before the foundation of the world; the Son loved His own which were in the world and loved them unto the end. There is no uncertainty, no variableness in either love. But the disciples' answer to the love of the Son was liable to change. One of the twelve had forsaken Him already; would the eleven "also go away?" There is eager, almost passionate, entreaty in the appeal, "Abide ye in my love." It is more than "Abide in me"; the earlier injunction calls for the life of faith by which men remain in living union with the Lord; the later adds to this a demand for a love answering to Christ's love for themselves. "The love that is mine" is the precise form of the phrase, and it suggests that our response to the love of Christ should be akin to His, to that love with which He Himself responds to the love of the Father and goes forth towards His own. "Not only in me, as I live in you," the Lord would say, "but love me as I loved you: lose not the great gift of my love by neglecting to answer it."

This brings us back to what had been said before as to the sayings of Christ abiding in us. "If ye keep my Commandments, ye shall abide in my love; as I have kept the Father's Commandments and abide in His love."

To abide in Christ's love may appear too high and mystical an aim to be realized in common life, and it may be asked with reason what such words mean when translated into terms of ordinary human conduct. The Lord answers this question: to abide in His love means to keep His Commandments. This answer may seem to lower the standard set up in a previous verse, and even to recede from a fundamental principle of the kingdom of heaven. It surely cannot be that our Lord here represents Himself as a mere enacter of external rules, or that He regards the performance of particular actions as equivalent to the interior disposition of love. The disposition of love He teaches is manifested by the steady effort to fulfill His known will, even when the disciple cannot say with St. Peter: "Thou knowest that I love thee." Since love alone produces a true obedience, obedience is evidence of love. It is more; it has the promise of the continuance of the Master's love toward the obedient "Ye shall abide in my love." To turn Christ's command into a promise, the disciple has but to persevere in the effort to do as He bids. To know whether he loves the Lord, and is loved by Him, the plain Christian needs only to ask his conscience whether he makes it his daily aim to walk as Christ walked.

Again, the Lord points out the correspondence between the Father's relation to Himself, and His own relation to believers. The whole of this reciprocation of obedience and love finds its analogy in His own experience: "As I have kept my Father's Commandments and abide in His Love." As the love of the Father and the Son is the prototype of the Incarnate Son's love for those whom the Father has given Him, so the obedience of the Son to His Father's will is the model of the obedience which the Son calls us to render to Himself. At the end of His earthly life the Incarnate can say: "I have kept my Father's Commandments;" and He holds up His perfect obedience as the pattern of that which we owe to Him. To the eleven, who had been eye witnesses of His life, the appeal was incomparably strong. It was as if the Lord had said: "You have seen me this day fulfilling the Father's will; with the same persistence, the same whole-heartedness I would have you now go forth into the world to fulfil mine. It was my meat and drink to do His will and finish His work. And now it is done and my obedience is complete, except for the final act of death, and I leave my example as the model and inspiration of your love. But with this difference: my obedience was rendered directly to the Father, who sent me: yours is to be rendered to me, who am your way to the Father. It is my will that you must obey, my love in which you must abide: that obeying me and abiding in me you may, through me, attain to God."

This was a hard saying, a call to imitate the inimitable; the mere attempt to fulfil it would involve constant labor and sacrifice. But it would also bring them joy, such as that which the Lord's life of obedience had brought to Himself. "These things have I spoken unto you, that my joy may be in you and your joy may be made full."

The purpose of our Lord's now completed teaching had been, not to impose new burdens on His disciples, but to bring them joy; to fill up the measure of their joy by imparting to them that which was peculiarly His own. Had He, then, a secret spring of joy with which no stranger intermeddled? Only once in the Gospels He is said to have "rejoiced in spirit;" yet underneath the gravity of a face marred more than any man's by the sorrows of life, there was a deep well of the truest joy, the joy of perfect obedience and whole-hearted sacrifice, together with the prospect of still greater "joy set before Him" in the fruits of His Passion. This joy He desired to impart to His disciples; it would be theirs in proportion as they followed His example, until they were filled with it according to their measure. If Christ's joy is beyond our attainment, our joy may nevertheless, through faith in His words, be filled to the extent of our capacity. Our nature is satisfied if it is as full of the purest joy as it can hold. This is what the Lord desires and will to give to those who respond to His call. It is His own joy He gives so far as they can receive it. He does not exclude other joys—the joy of health, of physical and intellectual power, of knowledge, of human love, for which He Himself has made our nature yearn. But to these He adds the joy of service and of sacrifice, as that without which all other joys are incomplete; and He speaks from personal knowledge, for that supreme source of joy was peculiarly His own.

MISSIONARY NOTES.

The reports from the treasury of the Board of Missions are still encouraging. On July 1 the receipts were $35,000 ahead of the record of last year. It must be remembered, however, that July and August are usually very "lean" months, as far as contributions to the missionary treasury are concerned, and the appropriations for the year are $72,000 greater than for the previous year. Therefore last year's record must be maintained and nearly $40,000 added thereto. Nevertheless it is possible for the Church to do this thing—or anything she really determines upon. Will not every one who reads this lend a hand in some way toward the achievement of this end?

In recognition of their services in connection with the organization of the Red Cross during the revolution, the Chinese government has bestowed the order of the "Felicitious Grain" upon eleven workers. Three of those so honored, Dr. MacWillis, Dr. Glenton and Miss Higgins (a trained nurse), are members of our mission in the district of Hankow.

A missionary bishop's life is never dull. The convocation of Western Colorado met in the mountain town of Ouray in June. When the time came for the opening service in the evening the bishop was missing. Just at the hour when he should have been delivering his annual address in the cosy and well-lighted church, he was wielding an axe in a vain attempt to extricate his automobile from a "chuck hole" in a lonely part of the road on the Dallis divide, and tramping four miles in the dark over the same lonely road to find a ranch house and a telephone to inform his clergy of his plight!

On Trinity Sunday Bishop Graves confirmed twenty girls and twenty-two boys in St. John's Pro-Cathedral, Shanghai. This brings the number for the year's confirmations up to 204, which is much larger than any previous year.

In the recent death of Bishop Tucker the Church of England has lost a great missionary statesman. The work accomplished under his leadership in Uganda is one of the miracles of missions. Like our own Bishop Ingle, Bishop Tucker bent his energies to the training of a body of native clergy and teachers, and his wisdom is borne out by the result. The native Christians in Uganda support their own clergy and catechists, pay for their own elementary education and build their own schools and churches!

At its meeting the newly-organized national Church in China proposed a missionary canon which declares that "This Church accepts the last command of our Lord to 'preach the Gospel to every creature' as placing the responsibility for missionary work upon every member of the Church. . . . In order more effectively to discharge this responsibility there shall be a Board of Missions of the Chung Hua Kung Hui." It is proposed to have a general secretary who shall be a Chinese clergyman; the nationality of the other officers of the Board is not specified.

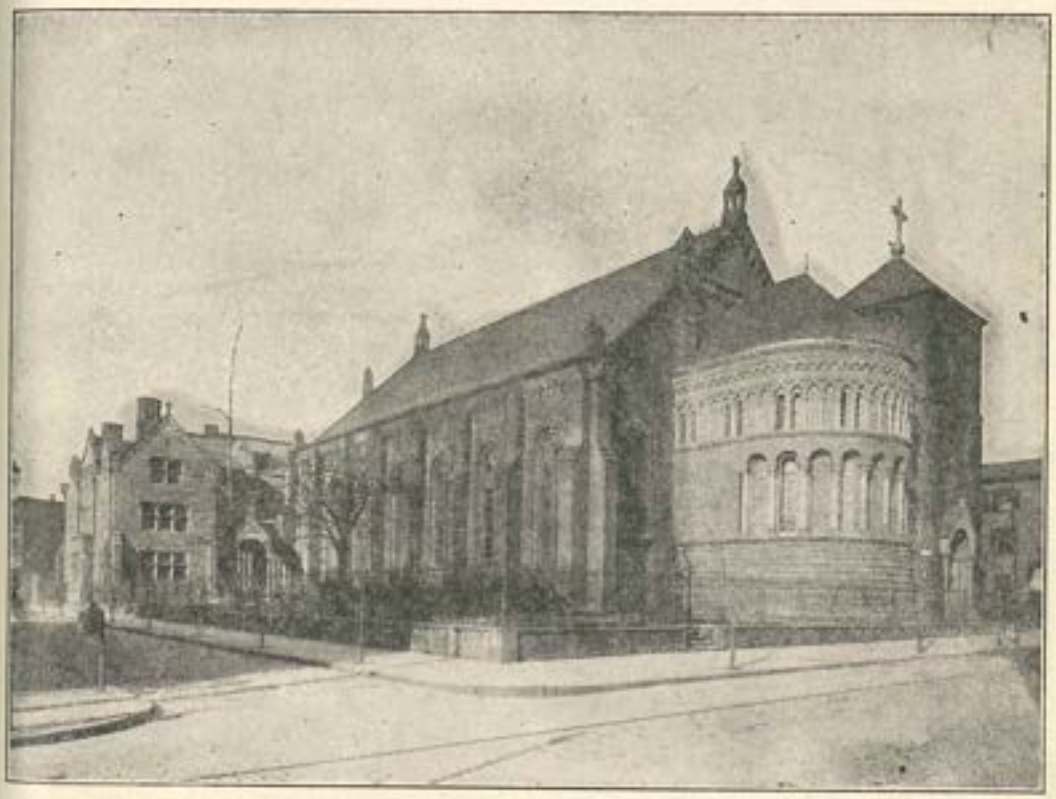
On the 24th of June a tornado swept through the Oneida reservation in Wisconsin. The entire rear of the hospital was carried away, chimneys blown down and windows blown out. The windmill was completely destroyed, depriving the hospital of its water supply. Our missionary among the Oneidas, the Rev. W. B. Thorn, says the repairs will cost between $350 and $400, surely a very conservative estimate, but unfortunately he has no funds with which to meet this emergency.

At a recent meeting of the Indian Presbytery in Oklahoma, an Indian preacher asked if he "might waste a few moments of their time." Permission being given, he informed them that he had set apart four acres of average land on his place for the Lord, and that after paying all expenses it yielded $13 per acre, and the land cultivated for himself averaged $9.75 per acre. He argued that as God's acres gained each $3.25 over his own, it proved that God's blessing rested upon his plan, and he exhorted his brethren to "try the Lord" in the same way. This waked up the elders and there was such a torrent of eloquence that it was difficult at midnight to get in a motion to adjourn. As a result twelve covenanted together to try the "four-acre plan." Does any one conclude that the Indian who started the movement "wasted the time of the Presbytery"?

The first of May saw the end of the opium traffic in the city of Foochow, China. All the drug—more than $100,000 worth—stored in the customs was burned, and no more will be allowed to come in. There was great jubilation at the headquarters of the Anti-Opium Association, in which all the boys from the American and English schools took part.



In an article which appeared not long ago in some of our Church papers, the author declared: "For the administration of the Church in these home districts our Church has unfortunately adopted the designation 'missionary,' which is repugnant to self-respecting American citizens." We venture to believe that David Livingston had as much self-respect as the average citizen. Listen to what he says on the same subject: "It is something to be a missionary. The morning stars sang together and all the sons of God shouted for joy when they saw the field which the first missionary was to fill. . . . It is something to be a follower, however feeble, in the wake of the Great Teacher and only Model Missionary that ever appeared among men. . . . I never cease to rejoice that God has appointed me to such an office."

A Philadelphia Churchwoman who has been traveling in the East, tells of the international character of the work done in St. Luke's Hospital, Tokyo, Japan. In addition to the large number of Japanese in-patients, there were Chinese, Indian, Hindoo, a Russian, a Frenchman, two Germans, several English and several American patients. The different strata of our social system were represented by a Japanese baroness, members of the embassies and legations, patients in private life, boatmen from the nearby river, and coolies out of the street of Tokyo. Truly this is an international hospital, with a great mission of usefulness to the people, both native and foreign, throughout the East.

The rector of an Eastern church who spent part of his vacation with Bishop Biller in South Dakota, was struck with the transformation that had taken place. To one who remembers the Custer massacre and the early days of the mining camp, it seemed that a miracle had been wrought upon the red man and white man alike by the potent, leavening influence of the Christian Church. On the spot where, less than forty years before, occurred those scenes of violence which resulted in driving the Indian from his beloved hills, an eloquent Presbyter of the Dakota race expounded the wonderful story of the Prodigal Son to a congregation made up of both white and Indian church people. Deadwood, notorious for the disorder and wanton disregard for law which characterized its early history as a frontier settlement and a mining camp, has emerged into a self-respecting city, whose life is distinguished by the industry, decency, and law-abiding spirit which alone can make city life tolerable. The work in South Dakota will be an everlasting tribute to those men of devotion who planted the broad foundations upon which has been reared the fabric of a strong religious life and a permanent civilization.

PARISH NOTES.

The Mothers' Meeting will begin Thursday, October 1.

Notices of the first meeting of the Girls' Club will be sent out later.

The Guild of St. Mary will hold its first meeting Monday evening, October 5th.

The Men's Club will hold its first meeting for the Winter on Wednesday, October 21st.

The Rector's Bible Class for women will commence Tuesday, November 3d. It will be held immediately after the 9.30 mass.

The intention at the 7 o'clock mass on Wednesday will be for restoration of peace in Europe.

Beginning with the first of the month, the 7.30 A. M. mass on week days and the 8 A. M. mass on Sundays will be resumed

The first meeting of the Boy Scouts was held on Thursday evening, September 17. Throughout the winter they will meet each Thursday evening.

Notice of change of address, in writing, should be given to be sent to the Clergy House or given to one of the clergy. At times it is rather difficult to find parishioners who have moved.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

The first session of the Sunday School will be held Sunday, October 4th, when the regular class work will be resumed for 1914-1915. Notices have been sent to the parents of the children who were enrolled last year. It is hoped that there will be a full attendance from the first day. Attendance will be taken at the 9.15 mass. Children who are not present at the mass will be held responsible for reporting their attendance at the 11 o'clock mass, or at one of the earlier masses. Failure to report will be counted as an absence from Sunday School.

The very great importance of religious education has been recognized at all times by the Church. Our own General Convention has created a Board of Religious Education to study the whole question. The change that has come about as to methods of teaching has made this necessary. For merly children were taught at home the fundamentals of their faith, and were brought to church to be catechized and further instructed by their parish priest. This is as it used to be. Now the Sunday School has taken the place of the home teaching, and has further supplemented the work of the parish priest in his instructions of those children who are preparing for Confirmation.

The Sunday School must not be a makeshift. Its work must be thorough and effective. Nothing can be of more importance than the training of the children in those things "which a Christian ought to know and believe to his soul's health." As a rule there is very little time which can be given to religious instruction on Sundays; three-quarters of an hour to an hour at the most. Compared with the time given to the work of the day school, this seems very small indeed. This, then, is one other reason why the work should be done well, and it can only be done well when the people of the Church realize the importance of the work and take a vital interest in it.

To make this more definite, the work of the Sunday School at St. Clement's is important. Moreover, the Sunday School is the parish's school, not the clergy's school, nor the school of those whose children attend. Every member of the parish, therefore, should take a real interest in the work of the school and its success. Not all can take a class, nor help by actual service, but all can pray. The third Sunday in October has for many years been observed by the Church in England and in the United States as a day of intercession for Sunday Schools. It would be a great thing if every parishioner would offer his prayers or his Communion on that day for the work of the school. Such a beginning would lead to more interest in the school, more prayer for the work, and more real work done.

ST. KATHARINE'S ALTAR.

The question has come up several times lately as to St. Katharine's altar. It is very interesting to read the history of the altar in the files of the magazine. The simplest way to recount this history is to quote the magazine itself. The altar was given by Miss Julia Dunlap.

ST. CLEMENT'S MAGAZINE:

April, 1897.

"The heating of the church by steam will permit all services to be held there; a side altar in the south side will assist this very much."

August, 1897.

"It is impossible to proceed with any preparations for the crypt chapel or side altar until the work of the steam heating plant is completed. The font will have to be removed to the west end of the church."

October, 1897.

"Mr. Henry Vaughan, of Boston, who designed the altar and choir screen, has been asked to prepare sketches for an altar at the head of the south side; he expects to submit a drawing shortly."

November, 1897.

"Mr. Vaughan has submitted a sketch for the side altar, such as he thinks will be in harmony with the other parts of the church. We hope that estimates may bring this within the amount of money at our disposal."

December, 1897.

(Sketch of the altar published in this number of the magazine.)

"The side altar is being made in Boston, under the supervision of the architect, Mr. Henry Vaughan. It will be under the dedication of St. Katharine."

January, 1898.

(Photograph of St. Katharine's altar in supplement.)

"It seems fitting that we should follow the example of the older St. Clement's and place our side altar under the dedication of St. Katharine, Virgin and Martyr. The altar, which is the offering of a member of the parish, was designed, together with the ornaments, by Mr. Henry Vaughan, of Boston, who also designed the high altar some years ago. It arrived just before Christmas, and was blessed and the first mass at it said on Christmas Eve. The ornaments not being ready, the crucifix and candlesticks belonging to the Seashore Home were used."

May, 1905.

"Julia Dunlap Memorial.

"The plan which the late Rector had in mind for a memorial to Miss Dunlap was to erect a reredos for St. Katharine's altar. She gave the altar, and so it seemed fitting that a memorial should be connected with it."

The whole amount of money required to erect the reredos was never subscribed. The funds on hand, together with later subscriptions, were used for the credence table in the sanctuary. The credence table is a memorial to Miss Julia Dunlap.

The lights and crucifix on St. Katharine's altar are all memorials.

A DAY OF INTERCESSION.

In accordance with the proclamation of the President, Sunday, October 4th, will be observed as a day of prayer and supplication. All the masses on that day will be said with special intention for the restoration of the peace of the world.

PRAYERS DURING WAR.

The Bishop Suffragan has authorized the following prayers for use during the present war in Europe:

For Those in Perils of War.

O God, the Father of Our Lord Jesus Christ, our only Saviour, the Prince of Peace, give to those charged with the government of nations the grace seriously to lay to heart the dangers of their unhappy divisions, and a realization of the dreadful sacrifice of human life in time of war. Look down with infinite mercy upon all engaged in battle; bless those who minister to the wounded and the dying; have compassion upon the widows and the orphans, and hasten the day when all war shall cease and universal peace shall reign: through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

For Our Countrymen.

Almighty and Everlasting God, we commit to Thy Fatherly care and protection the Bishop of this Diocese and all our countrymen who on land or sea are in danger or distress; conduct them in safety through all their perils, and bring them again to their homes in peace, with a grateful sense of Thy mercies, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The following prayer is reprinted from The Messenger:

O Almighty God, Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named, look down with pity, we beseech Thee, upon those members of Thy family who are now at war. Restrain them from hatred, pride and hardness of heart. Sustain in them the love of justice and mercy. Keep, O Lord, under Thy protection those who are in peril by land or sea. Remember the prisoners, relieve the sick and wounded, support the dying, give rest to the faithful departed. Give strength to those who minister in hospital and camp, and hope to those who are in anxiety or sorrow. Hasten the day when all nations shall dwell together in peace: through Jesus Christ our Saviour. Amen.

Continue, we pray Thee, O God, to this our beloved country the blessings of peace, and so lead us in the path of righteousness and truth that we may keep our place among the nations of the earth and do our part towards preparing the way for Thy Kingdom. All this we ask in the name of Him who is the King of Peace, Thy Son Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

THE WOMEN'S AUXILIARY

The Annual Meeting of St. Clement's Branch of the Women's Auxiliary will be held on Friday, 16th October, at 3 p. m. There will be a service in the Chapel, with an address by the Rector. The business meeting will be in the Parish Hall. LETTER FROM MISS RIDDELL.

Kiushiu, S. Japan, August 15, 1914.

My Dear Mr. Hutchinson: There are two things about which I have been wishing to write to you: One is to tell you that the Rev. A. S. Hewlett, Vicar of Tranmere, is giving up his work in England in order to come here to assist in the work of the Leper Hospital. I expect him to arrive at the end of September.

As you already know, there are among our sixty-six in-patients, three adult English-speaking lepers and one child, and for these his spiritual services will be most acceptable, for our arrangements are necessarily entirely Japanese. But he also comes with the idea of helping in secretarial work, or in any way in which he can be of use to the hospital.

For the last few years, while the administrative duties of the hospital have been greatly increasing because of the increase of patients and because of the addition of land (which was bestowed by Marquis Hosogawa), I have unfortunately been here alone; again I have been embarrassed, first by an accident, and then by a long illness, and it has been quite impossible, in addition to the spiritual, physical and economical administration of the hospital, to adequately maintain its most important correspondence. Necessarily all accounts have been kept quite carefully here, but many letters, with the best of intentions in that direction, have had, regretfully, to remain unanswered. The need of at least one English-speaking person has been quite keen, and now that it has come in this unexpected fashion (for I have not any previous personal acquaintance with Mr. Hewlett), it is a matter of great thankfulness, and I greatly anticipate in the future being without a single unacknowledged letter on hand. Reports, accounts and printed information in connection with the hospital will, I hope, be sent out with regularity.

Please let me thank you for all your kind patience and for your unfailing interest.

The second thing about which I wish to write to you is at the suggestion of the Dean of St. David's, who is kindly interested in the hospital. We greatly need a little church within the hospital precincts. The ground for it has been consecrated, but we have not yet sufficient money in hand to make us feel happy in beginning to build it. Although I cannot hope to build a really beautiful church, I do want it to be one that will not be continually requiring repairs. The Dean suggested that if I wrote to each member of the "Daily Bread" League, it was quite possible that some response might come to that end, either from those already belonging to the league, or from friends to whom they might mention it. I hope it will not seem like trespassing upon your generosity to ask if you might find it possible to further this object in any way which might occur to you? The chancel has been promised by an American lady ("In Memoriam"), and also the font from friends in Canada, but in addition to the building and these promises, there are many other things which will be required before the church is fully equipped, e. g., an organ, pulpit, furniture and, if possible, a bell and a striking clock. The latter is much hoped for by the patients and the staff; the former often say that to hear a clock strike during the long watches of the night would be a great comfort, and for the latter, it is a very desirable addition.

I am enclosing a leaflet which I hope may interest you, and with kindest regards, believe me,

Ever yours sincerely,

H. RIDDELL.

P. S.—This terrible war will, I fear, greatly distress us as to funds. Already remittances have failed to reach me via Siberia, and I would ask your prayers and sympathy.

August 27.

LETTER FROM ALASKA.

St. Matthew's, Fairbanks, Alaska,
August 7, 1914.

My Dear Father Hutchinson: Miss Wightman has asked me to write to tell you that she is coming out from Alaska this summer. For some time she has not been very well, and while she could stay on at her work a year longer, perhaps, the chances are that she would have a serious breakdown before that time. By leaving at this time she can the more easily regain her accustomed good health, and there is no reason, I think, why she cannot serve the Church in a milder climate for many years to come. Miss Wightman came down from Salchaket yesterday to confer with me on the matter, and the result of our conference and the advice which she has received, is that she is leaving on the next boat. She was anxious to have you of her home parish know first. Please assure her friends that Miss Wightman is simply taking the "ounce of prevention" in order that she may not suffer a serious illness, which seems the inevitable result of another winter in Alaska. Needless to say, we all of us regret exceedingly her going.

Faithfully yours,

CHARLES EUGENE BETTICHER, JR.

MISSIONARY NOTES.

A hundred years ago there were no medical missionaries. To-day there are many hundreds, treating annually over 3,000,000 patients.

The September issue of The Spirit of Missions is devoted to the medical missionary work, presenting articles and items concerning our world-wide ministry through physician, nurse and hospital. It is full of real interest and helpful suggestion.

Our foreign mission work is not directly affected by the war, none of our fields being within the radius of serious conflict. It is, however, retarded by interrupted communication, rise on the exchange and other indirect effects from which the whole world suffers. The Board of Missions is taking energetic measures to send the new workers to their posts, believing that at this time more than ever the presence of devoted Christian men and women is needed in the lands abroad.

By way of illustrating the wide scope of medical work in China, and in how many ways it ministers both to the body and soul, it is worthy of note that in the little chapel of the Church General Hospital, Wuchang, five of the native nurses, two women and three men, were recently baptized and three of the male nurses confirmed. Three boys and three girls were entered as catechumens. There are fifteen boys and seven girls in training.

There are such things as "missionary trees." A Roxborough, Mass., farmer has a golden pippin apple tree whose product goes to the support of Christian work in China; an orange tree in Florida is helping to uplift the cannibals in New Guinea, and a California nut farmer devotes a walnut tree to the spread of Christianity in Zanzibar.

Arrangements have been concluded whereby the Christian Medical Association of the University of Pennsylvania will cooperate with St. John's University and St. Luke's Hospital, Shanghai, in the maintenance of a medical school of the first class. The Christian Association will erect a building at the cost of $30,000, and will support one or two professors in the school. The entire control and direction is to rest with the faculty of St. John's University. While many members of the association are churchmen, the larger number belong to other denominations. This seems to be an instance where Christian co-operation may be heartily entered into with more satisfactory results.

At Kansas City, Texas, a town of 1,200 people, where we have fifteen communicants, two laymen of the Church interested themselves last Good Friday to visit all the merchants in the town with the request that they close their places of business on the great Day of Atonement of the Christian Church. It is interesting to note that they were successful and Kansas City was a closed town on Good Friday.

Official Japan has endorsed the work of our St. Luke's Hospital, Tokyo. Early in July the Premier, Count Okuma, had at luncheon at his official residence some forty men prominent in government, professional and business circles. He laid before them the large service which St. Luke's was rendering to the Japanese people, and urged that practical steps be taken to co-operate in its work. The gentlemen present formed themselves into a council of which the Premier was president, and Barons Goto, Skatani and Shibusawa, vice-presidents. The Council includes a large number of distinguished men, and it is their purpose to secure a site for the new hospital as a gift to St. Luke's, or in lieu of this to raise $100,000 with which a proper site may be purchased. This splendid co-operation on the part of such representative Japanese should spur the Church in America to do its share in assuring the future of this most important institution.

From the Cathedral in Hankow, China, comes the following: That the Chinese are not slow in giving, as is borne out by the fact that the Sunday offerings in the Cathedral during the last three months amounted to the sum of $628, excluding everything in the way of school fees. Last year the offerings from Chinese alone amounted to two and a half times the running expenses of the Cathedral, a large sum being given to extend the work in other centers, and as contributions to missions in China and abroad.

A noble gift of $10,000 has been offered to the Fund to meet all the needs of the Station of Zangzok, in the Shanghai district. This important country town is the center of a district containing a half million of people, and from it the Gospel is preached in a circle of twenty-five villages. The work is in charge of the Rev. Mr. Wilson, and has, since its inception, been carried on in poor Chinese buildings. It has long been the hope of Bishop Graves and Mr. Wilson to have a suitable church building at the central station and a small hospital, and a good school building.

The duplex envelope has reached China. On the recommendation of the Rev. H. S. Littell, the vestry of the cathedral in Hankow, who are representative Chinese business men, have undertaken the introduction of this system found so successful in the United States. The results reported are altogether like those at home, which goes to prove that the duplex envelope and the system for which it stands are effective the world over.

[Reprinted from the Boston News Bureau August 1, 1914.]

IF!

Suppose 'twere done!
The lanyard pulled on every shotted gun;
Into the wheeling death-clutch sent
Each millioned armament,
To grapple there
On land, on sea and under, and in air!
Suppose at last 'twere come—
Now, while each bourse and shop and mill is dumb
And arsenals and dockyards hum,—
Now all complete, supreme,
That vast, Satanic dream!—
Each field were trampled, soaked,
Each stream dyed, choked,
Each leagured city and blockaded port
Made famine's sport;
The empty wave
Made reeling dreadnaught's grave;
Cathedral, castle, gallery, smoking fell
'Neath bomb and shell;
In deathlike trance
Lay industry, finance;
Two thousand years'
Bequest, achievement, saving, disappears
In blood and tears,
In widowed woe
That slum and palace equal know,
In civilization's suicide,—
What served thereby, what satisfied?
For justice, freedom, right, what wrought?
Naught!—

Save, after the great cataclysm, perhaps
On the world's shaken map
New lines, more near or far,
Binding to king or czar
In festering hate
Some newly vassaled state;
And passion, lust and pride made satiate;
And just a trace
Of lingering smile on Satan's face!

NOVENA—NOVEMBER 14-23.

Memorial for the parish (to be said daily):

Ant.—I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground; I will pour my Spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thine offspring.

V.—O Lord, look down from heaven.

R.—Behold, and visit this vine.

Let us pray:

Almighty and everlasting God, who dost govern all things in heaven and earth, mercifully hear our supplications, and grant unto this parish all things that are needful for its spiritual welfare; schools in which to train the young in Thy faith and fear; ministers to labor in this portion of Thy vineyard; a church restored to the beauty of holiness. Strengthen and confirm the faithful; visit and relieve the sick; turn and soften the wicked; rouse the careless; recover the fallen; restore the penitent; remove all hindrances to the advancement of Thy truth; bring all to be of one heart and one mind within the fold of Thy Holy Church; to the honor and glory of Thy Holy Name; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

LEAGUE OF INTERCESSORY PRAYER.

One year ago the League of intercession was formed. At present there are fifty-nine members. Although this is a good beginning, the membership ought to be larger. The fact that the intercession leaflet is sent with the magazine each month does not make the subscriber to the magazine a member of the League, as there is no obligation to use the intercessions. It is hoped, however, that all who receive the leaflet, whether members of the League or not, use it. No work for God can be carried on without prayer.

It is to be regretted that so very few intercessions are sent in, and those which are sent come too late to be sent to the printer, and so have to be held over a month. Intercessions which are received by the fifteenth of the month will be published in leaflet for the following month. Any person desiring prayers for any particular object is asked to send the request to the "League of Intercession," St. Clement's Clergy House. Since there are no dues in connection with the League, any contributions towards defraying the expense of printing and postage will be gladly received.

A LEPER'S HOME-GOING.

(The leper-woman written of here will be known by name to some of Miss Riddell's friends and subscribers as a patient who has been at the Hospital from its beginning, and therefore the account of her death may specially interest them.)

"Sawai San is dead."

"May GOD be praised"—we answer.

A leper since she was twenty, for twenty-seven more long years of agony Sawai San's brave spirit had endured.

Lately the disease had developed into such a terrible form that she was never seen. In the farthest corner of the Women's Wards she lived dimly, behind thick curtains of net. There the heroic doctor, and the loving devotion of the little nurse, succored her—and there the brave priest had carried the Holy Sacrament to her at Easter.

Though her outward man was thus dreadfully perishing, yet the fire of her soul burnt clear, her "inner man" was being quickened day by day. From her bed she could hear the hymns being sung at the Sunday and weekday services—strange to say, the one she liked best was "Onward, Christian Soldiers." Miss Riddell, whose responsible and tender charge all these poor physical off-scourings of the world are, said to her: "Sawai San, you are of higher rank than a soldier—we think of you as one of our Generals in the great 'Army of Martyrs'—in the victorious triumph over pain."

Sawai San was made very glad by this thought. With never a murmur she endured to the end—and then, with how much rejoicing, cast off the burden of the flesh, and entered new Life. There the pure clearness of her soul will have a fair Habitation to match, having worked out its exceeding glory through the tenement of humilitation it had for its proving here.

Sawai San died just when the Gardens of the Hospital were resplendent with tall iris, purple and white, and with exquisite Madonna lilies. The lilies covered the wooden ark in which her poor body was placed, as it rested before the Sanctuary in the Church Room. Here the Burial Service was held, and the other lepers all gathered to praise and pray.

Then the coffin, still clothed in its wonderful array of purest white lilies, was borne away that the poor remains might be cremated. All the community of lepers gathered at the big gates of the Garden to watch the little procession—a strange collection of physically marred and visibly dying humanity—robbed of its horror by the pervading expression of hope—hope, not simply that they, too, would soon end endurance, and in their turn be carried to have the poor unclean body turned to ashes, but the spiritual Hope of Joy and fulness of Life without stain.

This miracle has the power of the CHRIST worked in the hearts of these lepers of to-day.

So the chapter ended of Sawai San's fight here, with all such reverence and honor as can be given in a Christian burial. The only thing lacking was a GOD'S acre, guarded by the presence of a Church, where the earthly remains might lie in consecrated ground. May that sacred need soon be supplied in His Name, who of our poor Humanity loves the saddest the most.

MARY MARTINDALE.

MISSIONARY NOTES.

Bishop Roots, of Hankow, writes that rather than see the splendid work of English or European missionaries closed because of the scarcity of funds from their home boards, some of our missionaries have offered from ten to fifteen per cent. of their salaries to their brethren from these afflicted nations.

The Rev. Dr. W. J. Godden, our faithful missionary among the Seminoles in the heart of the Everglades, was recently found dead in his bed. As a physician and a perpetual deacon he has for many years maintained the Church's outpost among these Indians, ministering to them physically and spiritually with the occasional help of a priest.

Bishop Aves has returned to his home in Guadalajara, Mexico, and is actively occupied in readjusting matters connected with the mission. The news from Mexico City, where Archdeacon Mellen, the Rev. Allan L. Burleson and Miss Whitaker still remain, is only moderately reassuring. It has not been judged that matters were in a sufficient settled state to justify the reopening of the Hooker School.

The Foreign Mission Boards of the United States, some eighteen in number, because of the difficulty in transmitting funds to parts of the world involved in the present war, have arranged a plan by which this can be done through one agent, and the assistant treasurer of our Board of Missions, Mr. E. Walter Roberts, because of his long experience and well-known ability, was unanimously chosen as that agent.

The Roman Catholic Bishop of Utah, Bishop Scanlon, in speaking concerning the late Bishop Spalding, is reported to have said: "The death of Bishop Spalding is not only a great loss to his Church, but a loss to the community at large. He was dominated in his relations with men of other religious sects by the most beautiful spirit of true Christian gentleness and noble firmness; attending strictly to the affairs of his own Church and never conducting a personal antagonism against other churches. His was a broad and beautiful charity, a charity that encompassed all things, a charity of thought as well as of action. His life was devoted to intelligent and true service to his fellow man and to his Church."

The Rev. Dr. Watson, of the American Church in Paris, who, through the Board of Missions, made an appeal at the beginning of the war to American Churchman, in acknowledging a remittance, says: "All Americans who desired work or assistance have been helped. The student quarter is almost deserted. This is as it should be, as far as girls are concerned, for every young woman who is here now without sufficient income is a source of anxiety to those in positions of responsibility. Every doctor and every nurse is taxed to the utmost; the cost of living will be greatly increased, and the need amongst the French poor will increase as the cold weather comes on and the roll of the dead becomes known. You will readily understand that this Church will do all in its power to minister to those in need, of whatsoever sort the need may be, but its resources will be severely taxed. We are largely dependent on transients, and for many months there will be no travelers. Paris is perfectly serene, but inexpressibly sad. Our own brave colors float from Church and rectory, and they mean, to all who see them, sympathy and help."

An interesting and somewhat unique service was held on the evening of St. Luke's Day, Sunday, October 18, in Calvary Church, New York. Special invitations were issued by the rector, wardens and vestry to the physicians and nurses of the city, and they formed a large proportion of the thousand who were present. After a brief service, largely consisting of familiar hymns, Dr. Howard A. Kelly, of Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, spoke upon "The Christian Physician." He was followed by Dr. William H. Jeffreys, who emphasized the motives which underlie medical mission work, illustrating them from his own experiences in St. Luke's Hospital, Shanghai, China. The service proved a great success and was an inspiration and incentive to more consecrated service to all those who attended. The offering was given for the out-patient department of St. Luke's, Shanghai.

LETTER FROM ST. ANDREW'S.

OCTOBER 16, 1914.

My Dear Father Hutchinson:

Your Accounting Warden, Mr. Bayard, sent us $5.00, covering the offering you took for St. Andrew's. I thank you so much for the contribution. We are feeling somewhat of a strain as to our current expenses. * * *

Everything else is prospering. We have an enrollment of fifty, with others coming. New dormitory space and school-rooms, and full faculty of seven are all signs of progress. We have established our first trade school in old St. Andrew's Chapel, using the sacristy for a drying-room for the furniture made in the ex-chapel, for it has reverted to its primeval type. It was once a shop, and is serving us again for our classes in carpentering, cabinet-making and house building under "Uncle Henry," who you know is the cleverest and most skilful of Swiss master workmen.

We have eight cases of adenoids in the hospital; I am going, in a few minutes, to visit them; all have been operated on. Next Sunday or the Sunday after we shall have an oculist to go over the boys, for there certainly are several cases of defective sight. We shall have to bring him from Nashville, if we can do so without going into bankruptcy.

Your very kind and generous parish makes it possible for us to do these rather expensive offices for the boys. They come to us marked all over with signs of the fall in body, mind and soul. It is only Christ and His faithful friends who make it possible for us to lift them up.

Believe me,

Yours faithfully,

MCVEIGH HARRISON, O.H.C.

OF INFLUENCE.

We influence others in silent ways, they are influenced by what we are rather than by what we say or do. This is very important, for it is given to all to effect something for God in this way. It is the evidence of reality, of truth; all the greater because it is given unconsciously. We are "to preach the Gospel by living it," and attract others to holiness by our own carefulness in the way of sanctification. We are set in the world as lights; we cannot be the members of Christ and not be illuminated by His indwelling; we cannot be Catholics and remain unknown and unobserved. The attention of the world is compelled by the unearthly character and supernatural claims of Catholic religion. We cannot remain ignorant of this fact, and if at first it alarms us, we must not waver in our practice, but be only the more faithful, for God has called us to stand in our place before men. The influence of our lives, the example which we set, is of the first importance; and it is what we are that matters, rather than what we seem to be. The world is harsh, we say; but is there not, all through the hard condemnations and criticisms, the evidence of an unerring perception of insincerity and hatred of shams? But we know that even "the world" is ready to own the merit of a truly disinterested Christian. The world is not slow to perceive what is of God, even when it does not glorify Him for it. There is another characteristic of holy lives—and it is a very beautiful one. The influence of a saintly life is beneficent and healthful, it is a healing influence. The holier the life the more there is of God in it, and the less of self, and so the influence is that of His grace and love which seem to flow forth as from a vessel set in readiness for the suffering, the sorrowful, the weary, and the afflicted, that they find refreshment and comfort. There is more than natural human sympathy in this. Healing and relief are found in the very presence of certain souls. Like the great Apostle whose shadow, as it rested upon the sufferers of Judea, conveyed healing and comfort, these souls move along the pathways of the world bearing the sweet influences of the Holy Spirit. They bear upon their souls the holy anointing of God, and the virtues thereof flow forth; and others are cheered, healed, encouraged, and inspired.

* * * * * *

Such has been the power of the Saints, and the need of it in the world to-day should appeal to all in whom the love of God is active. The history of the Church is rich through the lives of the Saints. There have been great deeds wrought and great works accomplished, which have made their names famous, but greatest of all has been the evidence of their lives, lived often away from the noise of social and national struggles. The history of the Church is not a mere record of persecutions and controversies, of councils and heresies; it is the sum of life as the Saints have lived it. It is this that we feel through all the changes and experiences of the centuries. It is a power to-day, and a power which must increase, and is increased by every holy life. If we recognize the evils of our own age, let us not be ignorant of the cure. It is by holiness of life in the individual that the power of the Church will be maintained and the world won for Christ. No Christian can say of any public evil, "It is no concern of mine." The members of the Body of Christ cannot be indifferent to that which brought about His Death. It is our concern because it is His. * * * God has called us, being Christians, to the dignity of fellow-workers with Himself for the triumph of eternal righteousness. If men are ennobled by the greatness of the cause to which they are pledged, then the nobility of the perfect Christian is incomparable. The Saints, as the true nobility, maintain the cause of the King. Theirs has ever been the passion of loyalty. And can we ask for our own age anything better than the diffusion of the passion of loyalty throughout the Church and that it spread until every Christian be found emulating the heroism of the Saints? How quickly then would the kingdoms of this world "become the Kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ!"

But such influence will depend upon the interior life of the individual. And so we trace it to the soul's innermost relation to, and communion with God. The splendid achievements which are possible to the soul that is impelled by a great love are inspired by the realization of the ways of God in secret communion. The attractive grace and charm of sainthood must be the manifestation of the indwelling of God. Nothing of all this is denied to us, for have we not been called to it? "Called to be saints," we are called to a dignity which is not to be known on earth as it will be hereafter in heaven; but something of its nature is even now apparent in the world, where the effects of holy spiritual influence may be seen in the turning of souls to God, in the fervor of devotion which is evoked, and the simple purity of love whereby God is served and His Kingdom increased.—From Life's Power, by the Rev. Jesse Brett.

THE VETERAN OF HEAVEN.

O Captain of the wars, whence won Ye so great scars?
In what fight did Ye smite, and what manner was the foe?
Was it on a day of rout they compassed Thee about,
Or gat Ye these adornings when Ye wrought their overthrow?

'Twas on a day of rout they girded Me about.
They wounded all My brow, and smote Me through the side;
My hand held no sword when I met their armed horde,
And the conquerors fell down, and the Conquered bruised his pride.

What is this, unheard before, that the Unarmed make war,
And the Slain hath the gain, and the Victor hath the rout?
What wars, then, are these, and what the enemies,
Strange Chief, with the scars of Thy conquest trenched about?

The Prince I drave forth held the Mount of the North,
Girt with the guards of flame that roll round the pole.
I drave him with My wars from all his fortress-stars,
And the sea of death divided that My march might strike its goal.

In the keep of Northern Guard, many a great daemonian sword
Burns as it turns the Mount occult, apart;
There is given him power and place still for some certain days,
And his name would turn the Sun's blood back upon its heart.

What is Thy Name? Oh, show!—My name ye may not know:
'Tis a going forth with banners, and a baring of much swords:
But My titles that are high, are they not upon My thigh?
"King of Kings!" are the words, "Lord of Lords!"
It is written "King of Kings, Lord of Lords."

ST. CLEMENT'S TIDE.

Our parish festival this year proved a particularly happy one, as we were able to bless and use the organ at the Solemn Mass. The Bishop of Salina said the prayers, setting apart the instrument for the Service of God, and the Mass followed immediately. Although the choir has been working under most trying conditions since last June, and had been able to rehearse only once with the new organ, they rendered, under Mr. Fry's direction, Silas' Mass in C. This Mass was written for the great International Competition of Sacred Music, held in Belgium in 1866, and obtained, amongst seventy-six competitors of twelve different nations, the first prize. It has been effectively rendered at Trinity Church, New York, on Ascension Day.

The new organ, built by the Austin Organ Company, is a wonderful addition to the church. (A more detailed account will be printed later.) The tone is exquisite and the volume far beyond that of the old instrument. All of the pipes in the former organ have been retained and many new ones added.

The choir has been rebuilt. The general scheme of the old choir has been reproduced in Connecticut brown stone and new clergy stalls, beautifully executed in carved oak, have been placed against the choir parapet, as in the old days. A new sacristy is to be fitted up under the organ on the north side of the church. The Lady Chapel, not yet completed, will occupy the space beneath the organ, on the south side. We hope to print later a detailed description of the work.

Altogether, the church has been greatly beautified. The entire work is included in the memorial gift of Elizabeth Coleman Boudinot.

The Bishop of Salina, our guest for two days, preached on Sunday morning and on the feast day, and was present at the parish tea in the evening.

The offering amounted to about $500.

ST. KATHARINE'S ALTAR.

By resolution of the vestry, St. Katharine's altar has been presented to the parish of the Annunciation, Philadelphia, to replace the side altar heretofore in use. Accompanying the resolution is a proviso that in the event of its disuse the disposal of the altar shall lie with St. Clement's parish.

It will be remembered that the altar is in no sense a memorial. It was presented anonymously by Miss Julia Dunlap, two years before her death, and it was not until after the death of Father Moffett that the identity of the donor was made known.

The altar will be used for the daily Masses in the parish of the Annunciation, and the Blessed Sacrament will be continually reserved in the Tabernacle.

THE SPECIAL REPAIR FUND.

It is the desire of the vestry to wall up the sacristy window on Cherry street, so that it will correspond with the window of the Lady Chapel. The organ on the north side of the church is protected only by a thin lath and plaster partition, which seems quite inadequate, as the window frame is much decayed and a continual draught of cold air is discernible. In the event of a severe storm there would be danger of injury to the organ. We have now one of the finest instruments in the city, and it would seem only right to take every precaution to protect it. The cost of the alteration will approximate $450.

The church cellar is being receiled with wire lathing and cement. The old ceiling was in a shocking condition and there was great danger of fire. We have now a practically fireproof surface and the basement of the church is in thoroughly good order. These repairs, both necessary, involve considerable expenditure. Offerings for these objects should be marked "Special Repair Fund." It is hoped that the parish will assume the responsibility of protecting its valuable property.

THE MEN'S CLUB.

A very successful meeting of the Men's Club was held on Wednesday evening, November 11th, in the parish hall. Robert J. McKenty, the Warden of the Eastern Penitentiary, gave a most interesting address on prison conditions. About forty members were present. The next meeting will be held on December 9th, at which time officers will be elected for the ensuing year.

THE CHURCH PERIODICAL CLUB, DIOCESE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

The United-Effort Library will be sent this year to the Church of the Advent, Farmington, Minn.

Each librarian is asked to collect as many books as possible (all kinds) and send them to the Church of the Incarnation, Broad and Jefferson streets, before December 15th.

Packages should be marked Church Periodical Club, and have on them the name of the Parish from which they come.

Librarians are asked to bring this to the notice of the whole Parish.

Articles for the Christmas Box are to be sent to the Epiphany Chapel, Seventeenth and Summer streets, before December 1st. The Christmas Box will go to the same place as the Library.

THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY.

The Rev. H. Cresson McHenry, of the City Mission, will be the speaker at the meeting of St. Clement's branch of the Woman's Auxiliary on Friday, December 4th. It is hoped that many will come to this meeting and hear about relief work in our own city. It is to be feared that this year, when the popular sentiment is for the war sufferers in Europe, our own people will suffer.

THE GIRLS' CLUB.

On Tuesday evening, November 3d, the Girls' Club held its annual election of officers. The following girls were elected:

President—Jessie Forrester.
Vice-President—Mrs. Rebecca Taylor.
Treasurer—Marion Craig.
Secretary—Evelyn Foering.

The Hospitality and Entertainment Committees were also appointed.

The evening of November 10th was spent in sewing. At this meeting a collection was taken for the Belgian Relief Fund. Three dollars were collected for this purpose.

Tuesday evening, November 17th, was one of much pleasure and enjoyment. A candy-pull was planned, as a surprise, by the Entertainment Committee, and all who were present had a good time.

A CHRISTMAS HYMN.

The Maker of the sun and moon,
The Maker of our earth,
Lo! late in time, a fairer boon,
Himself is brought to birth!

How blest was all creation then,
When God so gave increase;
And Christ, to heal the hearts of men,
Brought righteousness and peace!

No star in all the heights of heaven
But burned to see Him go;
Yet unto earth alone was given
His human form to know.

His human form, by man denied,
Took death for human sin;
His endless love, through faith descried,
Still lives the world to win.

O perfect Love, outpassing sight,
O Light beyond our ken,
Come down through all the world to-night
And heal the hearts of men!

THE NATIVITY.

The Feast of the Nativity sounds a strange note in the midst of the warring of the nations. The stable at Bethlehem, with its Divine Guest, seems remote indeed from this present world of tumult and bloodshed. And yet it may be that this very contrast may impress upon our hearts the more deeply the Christmas message.

To Catholic Christians this Holy Season brings a rejoicing that no earthly conflict can diminish. God was made man! God assumed human nature and still wears it—glorified—upon His throne. Peace and good will have been made possible on earth because of the incarnation of the Eternal Word. Man is united to God.

Peace and good will are not merely gentle and tender sentiments, but forces set in operation by the Word of God dwelling in human flesh. They are the manifestations of the presence of the indwelling Christ in human souls.

Christ, who was born in Bethlehem, still tabernacles with men. The marvelous outflowing of sympathy and charity that we have seen in our great cities during these last few weeks is the spirit of Christ moving within men's hearts. It is a manifestation of God's presence in our midst.

As we come to the altar on Christmas Day we should recognize this: That He who was born in Bethlehem of Judea is coming to each one of us to bring us the power of His spirit, so that we may be centers of Divine energy; instruments wherewith Jesus Christ may reach out and touch the members of the human race. Each one of us should see to it that the heavenly gift does not come to us in vain. Christ is love, Christ is peace, Christ is good will toward man. In proportion as these virtues dwell in our hearts we may be assured that the gift of Bethlehem is ours.

MISSIONARY NOTES.

THE WAR AND THE EXTENSION OF THE KINGDOM.

Fortunately none of the missions of our own Church are in the actual field of hostilities, yet we must suffer, in common with others, from the blighting effects of the conflict. The cost of transportation, supplies, freight and insurance are all increased. Thus far the faith of the Board of Missions that the Church will rise to the opportunity of meeting this increased need has been justified. A noble example has been set by our China missionaries in the district of Hankow, who have pledged a considerable percentage of their salaries to relieve the crying needs of their brothers in the missions of the French and German Churches. Because of this condition, voices have been raised in the Church advocating a splendid adventure in love and sacrifice, proposing that American churchmen, as their share of the war burden, shall "tax themselves" and double their gifts to missions. Thus our own work could be maintained and our Board could minister substantially to the needs of others.

Some parishes are already acting on this suggestion. It is a "big thing" which is proposed, but it is therefore worth the doing. The Church has never before had such a chance to show herself Christian, and may never have again. Shall we deserve to be blest in our future missionary undertakings if we fail our brethren in this time of need? But if, on the other hand, we take the generous and the self-forgetting course, may it not be that we shall "find ourselves" as we never have done before, and will reap—in fuller consecration, wider vision and deeper spiritual life—an abundant and abiding reward?

The American Church in Paris, under the leadership of its rector, the Reverend Doctor Watson, has been rendering splendid help in the hour of need. At the end of August the demands became so pressing that it was almost impossible to supply them. People reached Paris without luggage, without funds, many of them sick and many of them unable to care easily for themselves, since they spoke only English.

Work has also been done among the French poor. The great shops are all closed, the shopgirls are without work, and unmarried women over sixteen have no government assistance. There are twenty of these girls working every day from 9 to 4.30 in the parish house of the Church of the Holy Trinity. They have made, since the Cuvroir was started, over 3,000 articles, all of which have been given to hospitals and soldiers. They are paid 1 franc, 50 centimes, a day, and given a good luncheon at a nearby restaurant. There are twenty five other women on the weekly payroll who take home work, and then there are the regular mission workers who come on Tuesday morning, receiving two francs a week and some food.

The American Colony in Paris has almost vanished, and Holy Trinity Church is confronted with grave problems. It is without endowment, and with the withdrawal of the Sunday offerings finds itself almost immediately in need. All expenses have been reduced to a minimum, but the large tax on the Church and insurance must be paid, and the rector wishes to keep the small reserve now in the bank as an emergency fund to protect the church property.

Dr. Annie S. Daniel, of New York, the chairman of the Tenement House Committee of the Church Association for the Advancement of the Interest of Labor—commonly known as C. A. I. L.—has had for her special work the abolition of manufacturing in tenement houses, which has been a fruitful cause of suffering to women and children. Dr. Daniel tells of children from three to five years of age employed in pulling basting threads and sewing on buttons. Women and children sometimes work eighteen hours a day. There was no limit, and the work went on Sundays and holidays just the same. One child of seven called every morning at five o'clock was whipped by its mother for not doing enough work. Dr. Daniel and the association of which she is a member have been successful in lessening this evil, but not in eradicating it. Much remains to be done. Such conditions will always continue until all manufacturing is forbidden in tenements.

Fourteen laymen, one from each of fourteen parishes in the Diocese of Pennsylvania, met during last Lent as a Mission Study Class on China under the leadership of Dr. W. H. Jefferys, of St. Luke's Hospital, Shanghai. As an outcome of these meetings they have addressed an open letter to "all Christians in the Diocese of Pennsylvania," from which we quote the following: "After many years, during which the manhood of Christendom has deliberately shirked its spiritual privileges and allowed itself to be fairly dragged into God's presence by the humbler and more perfect faith of womanhood, there are advancing signs from many sources and from far and wide that there is soon to be a sincere, and, we trust, an utterly humbled spiritual awakening among men, when every man shall face the fact that service by proxy is not good enough, that Jesus despises lukewarm things, and that each living man must answer for himself Pilate's tragic question, 'What shall I do then with Jesus, which is called Christ?' Shall I crucify Him? Shall I wash my hands of Him? Or shall I stand with Him?"

Under the title "Things As They Are in China," the Rev. Dr. Jackson, president of Boone University, in a recent issue of The Spirit of Missions, makes some profoundly interesting comments on the present political conditions in that country, saying: "To many men of experience the great changes upon which perfervid orators have spent so much breath, and newspaper writers so much ink, were known to be bubbles from the first, which in time were bound to burst, and that, too, with considerable noise and consequent disappointment and consternation. No friends of true progress need, however, lose heart. The existence of bubbles shows that there is disturbance below the surface.

"Great and solid progress is, we believe, being made, and it is to be regretted that this real progress is being retarded by men, some of whom have good intentions, but who fail to see that a great mass of people cannot be moved at the mere will of a few enthusiasts, but that the regeneration of the hundreds of millions of the Chinese must in truth be a very slow process. A true democrat has got to learn that even a good thing must not be forced upon an unwilling people. The masses of the people must first be trained to see that the things which are being offered to them are really for their benefit.

"Amid all conflicting views and opinions one thing emerges. More thorough and widespread education is the crying need of the country, and among such a multitude of people, scattered over such an immense territory, the task is herculean, and the patience of Job is required."

October 16 the venerable Presiding Bishop entered the office of the treasurer of the Board of Missions and laid upon his desk a check for $100,000, the gift of a friend, who thereby establishes the "Bishop Tuttle Memorial Fund." This fund is to be held in trust and invested, the income to be used for domestic missions. Of that sum $3,300 will be devoted to the salary and traveling expenses of the Missionary Bishop of Utah, so long as it may remain a missionary district, and any additional income will be available for any regular appropriation in the domestic field.

Our mission schools in Liberia are feeling the effects of the war in a scarcity of rice, which is their chief staple. Bishop Ferguson says that "at Cape Mount an arrangement has been made to purchase cassava for the pupils in order to reduce the consumption of rice fifty per cent. At the Girls' Training Institute, Bromley, we are benefited by the result of the farm work which I wrote to you about. Potatoes, eddoes and cassavas, planted four months ago, are now maturing, and the girls are using them with half the quantity of rice formerly consumed. It was fortunate that the arrangement for the farm work was made, otherwise we might have had to close the school."

The Board of Missions is sustaining a serious loss in the resignation of Bishop Lawrence, of Massachusetts, who was the representative of the Province of New England. The enormous pressure of other business, particularly in the matter of clergy pensions, has compelled the bishop to take this step. There is no member whose withdrawal from the Board could be more keenly felt. Bishop Lawrence was a prominent member of the Executive Committee, where his long experience, wide knowledge and clear judgment were of the greatest value.

Archdeacon Mellen, of Mexico City, tells in a recent number of The Spirit of Missions of a missionary journey taken by himself and one of our women workers there. They went from village to village on horseback, making a considerable tour through the mountains which surround the City of Mexico. Their experience was interesting as showing that although conditions are still unsettled in some degree, missionary work may still be carried on.

Bishop Thomas, of Wyoming, recently confirmed seven adult Arapahoes and seventeen Shoshone girls. This is the second class the Bishop has confirmed on the reservation this year, making a total of about fifty.

During the recent visit of Mr. Sherwood Eddy to Changsha as many as 4,000 students turned out to hear him on a single day. Over 1,500 men and women signed cards to enter Bible classes. All but 240 of these were men. The church at Changsha, which is a memorial to Robert Treat Paine, of Boston, has recently received a gift of $1,000.

PARISH NOTES.

The Bishop has changed the date of his visitation from the 17th to the 24th of January.

Mr. Fry resumed playing the Vesper Organ Recitals 7.30 o'clock Sunday, December 27, 1914.

The January meeting of St. Clement's branch of the Woman's Auxiliary will be held on Friday, the 8th, at 3 P. M., instead of on New Year's Day.

A series of recitals will be given in the Church as follows: 1915—January 6, Henry S. Fry; January 13, Rollo F. Maitland; January 20, S. Wesley Sears; January 27, Harry C. Banks, Jr.

The Guild of St. Nicholas meets this year on Tuesday evenings in the gymnasium. The class is open to boys between the ages of eleven and sixteen, and is again under the direction of Dr. Richard Allison.

On the evening of December 16th a goodly number of persons were present to listen to the first recital on the new organ, played by Mr. Fry. Several organists present expressed their appreciation of the new instrument.

The Christmas supper will be held on the evening of January 7th, in the Parish Hall. St. Mary's Guild will have its Christmas party on January 11th. The Girls' Club will give a play as part of the evening's entertainment.

During this season of special distress among working people, the Rector will be very grateful to any who may desire any sort of work done, if they will inform him of the fact, as he may be able to recommend some reliable man or woman who is in need of employment.

On Tuesday evening, February 2d, 8 o'clock, the combined choirs of St. Mary's Church and St. Clement's Church will give a service under the auspices of the American Guild of Organists, when A. Herbert Brewer's cantata, "O Sing Unto the Lord a New Song," will be sung. Mr. H. Alex. Matthews will play the predule at this service.

A beautiful black burse and veil were blessed and used for the first time on All Souls' Day. The veil is exquisitely embroidered. The design represents the Resurrection. The figure of our Lord is seen emerging from the sepulchre between kneeling angel figures. The background shows a landscape lit by the rays of the rising sun. The burse is ornamented with a cross and butterflies. The latter a symbol of the soul released from earthly bonds. The embroidery is beautifully executed, and is the work and gift of a member of the parish.

REPAIR FUND.

Again the Rector urges upon the congregation the desirability of contributions toward the "special repairs" mentioned in the December number of this magazine, i. e., the walling up of the window on Cherry street as a protection to the organ, and the receiling of the cellar, as a precaution against fire. We believe that at present writing only fifteen dollars has been received toward the defraying of these necessary expenses. This would seem to imply an extraordinary lack of appreciation on the part of the congregation, both as to the beauty and value of what it possesses and the desirability of properly protecting the property. As it is often difficult to interest persons in things not continually before their eyes, the Rector suggests a journey to the basement and an inspection of the window, on the part of the congregation.

RENOVATION OF THE ALTAR.

Just before Christmas, Mr. Frederick Wilson, the artist who executed our altar piece, spent ten days at the clergy house and retouched the painting, which had lost something of its original beauty of colour. During Mr. Wilson's stay Mr. Sellers took the opportunity of completing the scheme of decoration which, although originally intended was not carried out when the altar was completed, owing to lack of funds. The result of the renovation is very fine. The painting itself possesses now a carrying power and virility that was lacking before, and the addition of colour to the doors and base of the reredos, together with the skillful use of gold leaf, has brought out the beauty of the work hitherto quite lost, and has given the whole a unity which it needed.

The light in the sanctuary has been subdued by painting the windows, and it is now possible to see the picture from the Church without the aid of artificial light, which has not been possible hitherto.

CHRISTMAS SERVICES.

Although the church is decorated much more simply this year, yet it is no less beautiful. The work which Mr. Wilson has done on the reredos has brought out the beauty of the altar piece. And the tall evergreens on either side of the altar, with the bright red of the flowers on the retable, form a very lovely Christmas picture.

The early Masses were well attended and there was a very good congregation at the 11 o'clock Mass, when Foster's Mass in E♭ was sung.

On Sunday the Christmas music was repeated in the morning, and there was solemn evensong, procession and Te Deum at night. This is the first time that the Te Deum has been sung with the new organ. The trumpet effects were particularly fine.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL FESTIVAL.

The Christmas Festival of the Sunday-school was held this year on the evening of Holy Innocent's Day, December 28, in the Parish Hall. Most of the children of the Sunday-school were present and a number of the parents and friends came also, so that by 8 o'clock a good-sized audience had gathered.

As last year, a Mystery Play of the Nativity was given. All the parts were taken by members of the Sunday-school. The familiar carols and hymns, with a few new ones, were sung between the different tableaux and at the manger scene, with which the play closed.

The synopsis of the play and the list of characters in the order of their appearance are as follows:

THE NEW ORGAN.

The organ recently erected in the Church by the Austin Organ Company, of Hartford, Conn., is one of the finest instruments installed in any church in Philadelphia. While there are three or four instruments containing a larger number of speaking stops, it is doubtful if they are as effective as this one, with its rich diapasons, its smooth reeds, its liquid mellow flutes, its luscious strings, and ponderous pedal department.

The organ is constructed on the Austin Universal Air-Chest System, and contains four manuals (great, swell, choir and solo) and pedals, fifty-five speaking stops, thirty couplers, forty adjustable composition pistons, eleven adjustable composition pedals, three reversible coupler pedals, three swell pedals, crescendo pedal, reversible Sfarzando pedal and five cancellers, one for each set of manual stops and couplers, and one for pedal stops and couplers. The beauties of tone are apparent to the listener, but there are features in the console that are appreciated more thoroughly by the player, i. e., the method of control, and in this direction the facilities for registration appear to be almost the "last word" in point of convenience for the player. The console is the latest Austin electric type, no wind being required in its manipulation. Speaking stops, couplers and unisons are controlled by stop-keys.

The composition pistons and pedals are adjusted by simply setting the registers, while the piston is held in or the pedal held down. On release of piston or pedal the adjustment is completed and the piston or pedal ready for use.

The cancellers enable the player to change from any combination to a single stop by simply touching the canceller over the stop desired and then with the same stroke of the finger adding the stop, thus securing an effect possible with "dead" combinations, and without the disadvantages of that system. Another feature of this console is the excellent "touch" secured by causing it to be lighter at the bottom of the dip than at the top.

The pedal board is concave and radiating. The swell boxes are three and one-half inches thick with horizontal beveled shades. Power is supplied by a seven and one-half horsepower Kinetic Blower.

Probably more large organs have been built by the Austin Organ Company than any other firm in the country—among them the instruments in City Auditorium, Portland, Maine; Auditorium Armory, Atlanta, Ga.; Hotel Astor, New York; Temple Auditorium, Los Angeles, Cal.; Smith College, Northampton, Mass., and many others in churches. The immense organ for the Panama Exposition is also being built by this company.

An expression of appreciation is due to Mr. Herbert Brown, representative of the Austin Organ Company; to Mr. Albert E. Toney, the erector, and his assistants, for the great interest displayed by them in trying to make the instrument as fine as possible, and for their never-failing courtesy and patience during the installation of the instrument under most trying conditions.

BESIDE THE MANGER.

There in the narrow manger, cold and bleak,
My Lord, Thou art;
And there within those Hands, so soft and weak,
I lay my heart.

Beneath those tiny Feet I bow my head,
O Blessed Child,
And kiss the straw that forms Thy chilly bed
In winter wild.

Show me thy wondrous Babe, O Mother-Maid,
Foretold of yore;
The treasure on thy Virgin-bosom laid
Let me adore.

That small Hand place upon my prostrate brow,
O Mother dear;
For crouching in His infant-presence now,
I quake with fear.

Mother of God, commend me to thy Son
As here I bend;
And, oh, commend me when my task is done,
And life shall end.

S. J.

EPIPHANY.

They leave the land of gems and gold,
The shining portals of the East;
For Him "the Woman's Seed" foretold,
They leave the revel and the feast.

To earth their sceptres they have cast,
And crowns by Kings ancestral worn;
They track the lonely Syrian waste;
They kneel before the Babe new-born.

O happy eyes that saw Him first!
O happy lips that kissed His feet!
Earth slakes at last her ancient thirst;
With Eden's joy her pulses beat.

True Kings are those who thus forsake
Their kingdoms for the Eternal King—
Serpent! her foot is on thy neck!
Herod! thou writh'st, but canst not sting!

He, He is King, and He alone,
Who lifts that Infant hand to bless;
Who makes His Mother's knee His throne,
Yet rules the starry wilderness.

AUBREY DE VERE.

MISSIONARY NOTES.

For the first time in the history of Japan, the Emperor has made a personal contribution to the work of a Christian institution. His gift of $25,000 to our St. Luke's Hospital is of the greatest importance, for it means that his subjects will be moved to follow his example. Already an additional $50,000 has been promised. The total asked is $300,000, and it is expected that America will co-operate in obtaining it.

St. John's Church, Jersey City Heights, was burned on Saturday, October 24. The following morning the Rector, the Rev. George D. Hadley, announced a canvass of the parish to obtain immediate funds. In this canvass the missionary appeal was put first, the parish needs second, and the gifts for the new church last. The results were pledges for $33,000, the gifts for missions and current expenses being in each instance much larger than those of the preceding year.

Another of our Chinese congregations, that of St. Peter's Church, Sinza, has become self-supporting. On the fifteenth anniversary of its founding they were able to elect an English-speaking Chinese clergyman to provide for all the needs of the parish.

On December 16, in St. Mark's Cathedral, Salt Lake City, Utah, the Rev. George Coolidge Hunting, D.D., was consecrated as Missionary Bishop of Nevada, and the Rev. Paul Jones, D.D., as Missionary Bishop of Utah, in succession to the late Bishop Spalding.

Word has been received from Bishop Graves that the land for the new St. Mary's Hall, Shanghai, China, has at last been purchased. When St. John's University and St. Mary's Hall were established, the provision for the two on the same ground seemed ample, but the marvelous growth of both institutions, and the great demand for education produced by the recent revolution, has made a separation imperative. The money is now in hand for the purchase of the ground, and a small beginning towards the necessary buildings. St. Mary's offers at this time perhaps the greatest opportunity for investment in educational missionary work which can be found in China.

The death of Rear Admiral Alfred T. Mahan, removed not only the greatest living authority on naval strategy, but also a devoted and faithful Churchman, who has long given his best efforts to promote both the spiritual interests of the Church at home and her missionary activities abroad. As an active officer in the navy, Admiral Mahan had unusual opportunities for examining and estimating missionary work, and as a result he was a firm believer in and promoter of it.

Bishop Blyth, for twenty-five years the Anglican Bishop of Jerusalem, retired a few months ago, and has since died. He is to be succeeded by Canon MacInnes, who has done for fifteen years excellent work in the Far East.

In his last address to an English audience, Wilmot Brooke, a man who gave his life for Africa, said: "You ask me to tell you some of the things I saw in Africa and which led me to become a missionary. You don't want to hear them. It is not that you want. I told you all that some years ago; I understand that since then your contributions have not increased, and no one from this town has gone out to the mission field. What you really want is to get into sympathy with Christ."

A STATEMENT TO THE CHURCH.

The Board of Missions at its December meeting put forth the following statement to the Church:

The Board rejoices to know that in certain parts of the Church—following the suggestion contained in its Message and in the Pastoral of the House of Bishops sent out from Minneapolis—there is developing an earnest desire to come to the aid of world missions in a serious crisis. It has already been suggested, and many are acting upon the suggestion, that we tax ourselves more generously for another's need, and try, if it is possible, to double our gifts to missions.

In some cases a specific object has been named; that is, the aiding of the English Missionary Societies. The Board is glad to report to the Church that up to the present time English Churchmen have nobly responded to the needs, and that the receipts of those societies have not as yet fallen off. Those of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel are somewhat in excess of last year. Nevertheless, in the larger view, Christian missions are bound to be crippled and Christian missionaries should have our aid.

It is a splendid adventure of love and sacrifice which is proposed. The Board believes that the American Church can do whatever it determines to do, and that the stimulus of an heroic call will be a great one. It would therefore say to the Church that we are rigidly limiting our own expenditures and it asks congregations to consider whether we may not find a blessing this year—while not neglecting our own needs—in fixing our eyes upon the larger horizon. Will congregations and dioceses set before them, not simply the needs of our own work but a larger standard of Christian generosity and thus enable the Board to relieve distress and avert disaster to missionaries in need.

It is a large ideal, but the opportunity to serve is unique. We may, of course, sit in our sheltered corner and thank God that we are out of the storm, but shall we not rather make a thank offering for the peace which is ours. And shall we deserve to be blest in our future missionary undertakings if we fail our brethren in their time of need? But if, on the other hand, we take the generous and self-forgetting course, may it not be that we shall "find ourselves" as we never have done before, and will reap, in fuller consecration, wider vision and deeper spiritual life, an abundant and abiding reward?

PARISH NOTES.

The turkey supper was held on the 7th of January and was well attended.

A very beautiful set of green vestments for use at solemn Masses has been presented to the parish.

St. Vincent's Guild will have its annual dinner at the Clergy House on Wednesday evening, January 3d.

The Girls' Club held a dinner on Tuesday evening, January 19th, which was a great success. The tables were attractively arranged in the Parish Hall, and the clergy were guests of the club.

Ashes will be blessed as usual before the 6 o'clock Mass on Ash Wednesday, and imposed before and after each Mass. The parish retreat will also be held on this day. Addresses at 10, 12 and 3 o'clock.

Through the courtesy of Mr. W. H. Swain, the Men's Club was able to procure the services for the January meeting of Mr. David J. Cleary, who delivered an illustrated lecture on "The Telephone in Its Construction and Operation." Almost fifty members attended and the meeting was considered the most enjoyable of the winter.

A LENT OF PRAYER.

It is our desire to make this coming Lenten season a time of special prayer and intercession. There will be the usual service at 4.45 each weekday afternoon, but we shall attempt a new plan in addition to this established custom. We shall try to arrange for continual intercession each day from 10 to 12.30 and from 2 to 4.30. The church will be open until 9 o'clock each evening for the accommodation of those who find it impossible to come during the day. Parishioners are asked to become responsible for a half hour each week, and those who are willing to undertake this really practical Lenten work should hand their names to the Rector and arrange as to the day and hour. Special intercessions will be provided which will be changed weekly and persons may send in names or objects for which they may desire special prayers offered.

If we try faithfully to carry out this plan, who can doubt as to the result?

LENTEN SERVICES.

During Lent, the Bible Class will continue on Tuesday mornings after the 9.30 Mass. There will be an address on Thursdays after Evensong, service for the children at 4 o'clock on Friday afternoons, and the Stations of the Cross and sermon on Friday nights at 8 o'clock.

REPORT OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL,

OCTOBER, 1914, TO FEBRUARY, 1915.

There has been a steady increase in the number of scholars since the opening of the school in October. The present record shows 68 scholars in the larger school regularly attending, and 29 in the primary class. The Women's Bible Class has an enrollment of 24.

The teaching staff at present numbers 12.

For several Sundays there has been "choir practice," so that the children's Mass at Easter and during Eastertide may be sung. It would help the children considerably in making the responses at the 9.15 Mass if some of the older people who attend would sit nearer the front of the church.

The following are the honor rolls for the first term:

Attendance at Mass and Sunday School—present every Sunday: Jessie Smith, Isabel Beddis, Ruth Smith, Ontamenia Kline, William Smith, Gilbert Bunn, Florence Erhardt, Alice Erhardt.

The following have been absent only once:

Charlotte Stokes, Marion Fullerton, Elsie Edwards, John Remington, Alfred Brown, Stanley Coulthard.

The following have obtained a grade of 90 per cent. in their lessons:

Stokely Morrison, Edward Ritter, Gilbert Bunn, Ontamenia Kline, Ruth Smith, Elsie Edwards, Mabel Rothwell, John Remington, Stanley Coulthard, Lillian Miller, Marion Fullerton, Janet Rothwell, Elias Borden, William Smith, John Phips.

CHRISTMAS PARTY OF ST. MARY'S GUILD.

St. Mary's Guild had their Christmas party on the evening of January 11th. After the Guild service in St. John's Chapel the Girls' Club entertained the Guild in the Parish Hall. First there was an amusing farce, entitled "Murder Will Out." This was followed by a fantastic quadrille, which was very well done.

Those taking part in the play were: Miss Jessie Forrester, Mrs. Charles Patterson, Mrs. John Dailey, Miss Olive Daniels, Miss Marion Craig, and Miss Edna Decker.

The following members of the Girls' Club danced the quadrille: Miss Lucy Decker, Miss Elsie Forrester, Miss Dorothea Wilde, Miss Sadie McElroy, Miss Edith Mowatt, Miss Rhoda Cody, Miss Evelyn Foering, Miss Margaret McElroy.

Refreshments were served after the play and drill. The long tables, in the form of an U, looked very attractive with the rows of lighted candles and the Christmas boxes of candy.

THE BISHOP'S VISITATION.

The Bishop of the Diocese made his visitation to the parish on the eve of the Conversion of St. Paul. After Evensong, he preached a very helpful and forceful sermon on "The Power of the Cross." He asked those who were to be confirmed to take the text as their motto "God forbid that I should glory save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ." Eleven persons received the Sacrament of Confirmation.

THE LADY CHAPEL.

The Bishop of the Diocese blessed the Lady Chapel on the Feast of the Purification at 8 o'clock in the morning. Now that the Chapel is dedicated, a detailed account of the new work may prove of interest to the members of the parish.

The choir rail and the structure supporting the organ are of Connecticut brown stone, while the organ case is of carved oak. The carving is beautifully executed and was done under the direction of Mr. Maene, who made the high altar and reredos. On each carved boss we find an appropriate symbol in the center of a knot of foliage. On the gospel side are the Anchor of St. Clement, the Wheel of St. Katharine, and the Harp of St. Cecilia (this last over the organ console). On either side of the main entrance to the Lady Chapel we see the Gate of Heaven and the Star of the Sea, while the Sun and Moon appear beside the door from the Chapel to the Choir. All these are symbols of the Blessed Virgin.

The monogram of St. Clement has been placed above the choir on the north side and that of the Blessed Virgin in a corresponding position on the south. The organ case is adorned by a carved vine, and the woodwork, including the trumpeting angels that support the pipes above the choir, has been touched with gold.

A lectern, carved from a single block of stone, has been built into the choir rail; an eagle holding a shield upon which appears the sacred monogram.

The "return stalls," which stood in the choir before the present sanctuary was built, have been replaced by "miserere" seats in carved oak, and the entire choir has been paved with Tennessee marble.

On the back of the lectern the following inscription has been placed: "A. M. D. G.

This organ, choir and sacristy, together with the Lady Chapel, are erected in loving memory of Elias Louis Boudinot, by his wife, Elizabeth Coleman Boudinot, Anno Domini MCMXIV."

The interior of the Chapel is lined with English red stone. It has a beautiful grained ceiling, the ribs carved with lilies and roses in conventionalised forms, and the central boss showing a "quaint Nativity."

The altar and reredos are of red stone. Upon the altar front are three shallow niches containing angel figures. That in the center holds the chalice and host, glorified, and those on either side carry smoking censers. The reredos is formed of three canopied niches containing statues. The central figure is that of the Blessed Virgin and Holy Child, while on either side are St. Joseph and St. Elizabeth, with the boy John Baptist. The tabernacle door is of wrought iron and copper.

Here, as on the exterior, we find various symbols of St. Mary. The Tower of David, the Ark of the Covenant and others.

The window designed and executed by Alfred Godwin, after a painting by Gozzoli, is most satisfactory. Our Lady is represented enthroned holding the Divine Infant; on either side St. Clement and St. Elizabeth, St. Katharine and St. John Baptist, kneel, adoring the Infant Christ, while angel figures hover overhead and a jewelled crown seems descending upon the head of the Blessed Virgin. The inscription is a quotation from Isaiah, lxii:3, and is one of the antiphons from an office of the Blessed Virgin. Eris corona gloriæ in manu Domini et diadema regni in manu Dei tui: "thou shalt be a crown of glory in the hand of the Lord and a royal diadem in the hand of thy God."

The coloring of the window is exceedingly beautiful, and one feels that Mr. Godwin has given us of his very best.

The memorial inscription is cut upon a panel on the right of the entrance and reads: "To the Glory of God, in honor of Blessed Mary, Ever Virgin, and in loving memory of Elias Louis Boudinot, sometime Vestryman of this parish, this Chapel is erected by his wife, R. I. P."

The iron work is one of the most beautiful features of the whole plan. Wrought iron gates have been placed at the entrance to the chapel and also at the entrance to the choir and between the chapel and the choir. The work has been done by Samuel Yellin, of Philadelphia, who has done the iron work for St. Thomas' Church, New York, and also the New York Cathedral. Mr. Sellers' designs are exquisite and the execution of them beyond praise.

The Chapel will be used for the reservation of the Blessed Sacrament, and it is probable that Mass will be said very frequently at this altar.

The altar ornaments and the chairs are not yet completed, but we hope to have them for use on the Feast of the Annunciation.

On the north side of the church handsome oak doors, with hinges of wrought iron, give entrance to a new sacristy under the organ. Cupboards have been provided for the banners, and for music, and a tiled window sill has been provided for the altar vases. A new and convenient staircase gives access to the crypt chapel.

It is gratifying to know that all the work has been done in Philadelphia. We believe that no better talent can be found in this country.

FATHER BENSON.

We reprint from the Church Times an appreciative editorial on Father Benson, who died at Cowley on January 14:

"In the year 1850 an English priest made a tour in Western France, and came back to write a book, of which the title, we believe, was 'A Peep Behind the Grilles.' He had been graciously received in several convents, and he returned in a state of acute irritation, lamenting the lack of such strongholds in the English Church. Arriving at Oxford he found his sense of discomfort increased by the thought of the failure of the Tractarian Movement. He wandered over Magdalen Bridge as far as Cowley, and there found a ray of hope. The young vicar deeply impressed him. There was something almost prophetic in his recognition of qualities, for the young vicar was Mr. Richard Meux Benson, of Christ Church.

Nearly sixty-five years have elapsed, and that young man of promise has long been known as chief among those who have been raised up by God to supply in the Church of England that sore lack which his chance acquaintance was then lamenting. Quietly, and with a complete absence of advertisement, the Vicar of Cowley began to lead the religious life, and to gather a small company of kindred souls. It made for the strength of his foundation that he grafted it upon existing institutions, and did not begin, so to say, in the air. He let it grow out of the parochial system, the one vigorous plant of Catholic culture that survived in England. Even when he moved into the new suburb of Oxford that was growing up at the farther end of his parish he secured a parochial status, the House of the Fathers was a "mission house," and the poor little sanctuary of corrugated iron was the temporary church of a "Peel District." Not until the year 1886 did the community outgrow this cradle, when Fr. Benson resigned his parochial charge and obtained episcopal sanction for the Society of St. John the Evangelist on a purely independent basis.

Yet from the first there was nothing parochially narrow or insular about the Society. It was Fr. Benson's joy that Americans were among his first companions. He secured as soon as possible a foothold on American soil, and from very early days he gave of his best to India. Inclined to pessimism in respect to European civilization, he looked for a new Christendom which should link together the ancient order of the East and the nascent energies of the West, bringing their wealth and honor into the City of God. In this great work he prayed that his Society might have part. If things are not shaping themselves exactly according to his expectation, he will not have complained of the ways of God, and he has taught his brethren to be ready for every course which the wind of the Spirit should indicate. The Society has the gift of adaptability. A strong shoot has grown from what seemed to be dry ground and a barren stock.

For a time Fr. Benson was more than founder, chief and director of the Society. It seemed to be identified with his personality. Here was a danger, the peril which always besets such foundations, the danger of bearing too deeply the impress of a single mind. That is to make men imitators of a man. The supreme moment came for which his long preparation of silence and humility had made him ready. He resigned into other hands, without reserve, and we can believe without regret the headship of the Society. It was not because of failing powers, for he still had before him some years of active work, which were devoted partly to India and America. He lived and worked as a loyal member of the community which he had founded under superiors whom he had trained. That was the supreme test, and he passed it splendidly. In his 90th year he has gone to his crown, leaving behind him the odor of a life entirely sanctified, and his works do follow him. For us another link with the past is severed. He remembered Newman at Oxford. What a passage from then till now! It has pleased God to show him not only the work to which he was called, but also some measure of the resultant glory.

MARY AND MARY'S SON.

Mary the Dawn, but Christ the perfect Day;
Mary the Gate, but Christ the heavenly Way.

Mary the Root, but Christ the mystic Vine;
Mary the Grape, but Christ the sacred Wine.

Mary the Corn-sheaf, Christ the living Bread;
Mary the Rose-tree, Christ the Rose blood-red.

Mary the Fount, but Christ the cleansing Flood;
Mary the Chalice, Christ the saving Blood.

Mary the Temple, Christ the temple's Lord:
Mary the Shrine, but Christ its God adored.

Mary the Beacon, Christ the Haven's Rest;
Mary the Mirror, Christ the Vision Blest.

MISSIONARY NOTES.

On January 12th, in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York, Archdeacon Hiram R. Hulse was consecrated as Bishop of Cuba, in succession to the Right Rev. Dr. Knight, resigned. The consecrators were the Bishops of New York, Newark, and Bishop Knight. The great Cathedral was well filled with friends and well-wishers of the Archdeacon. Bishop Hulse is a comparatively young man of much experience and ability. He will shortly sail for Havana to take up his work.

The Rev. J. B. Johnson, until recently private secretary to the Bishop of Vermont, died December 20th in the Isle of Pines, Cuba. For two years he has been rendering missionary service there without compensation. He was stricken in the night and found dead in his bed. By his courteous and self-denying labors he endeared himself to all who knew him and his death will be severely felt.

A little Igorot boy who ten years ago was a cheerful, smiling, brown-skinned savage, is now a young Christian man with a knowledge of affairs and the manners of a gentleman, studying in Manila to fit himself to becoming a physician among his own people. Such are the changes wrought by missions!

Almost at the same moment that President Wilson was calling this nation to pray for peace, President Yuan Shih-kai, of China, made a like proclamation. Bishop Graves, of Hankow, commenting upon it, speaks as follows:

"The similarities and the contrasts in the nearly simultaneous action of President Yuan Shih-kai and President Wilson are most striking. China and America are the two greatest republics, and while both are neutral in the present war, both are vitally affected by the dislocation of trade, and bound to be still more affected by the issue of the strife. The American President acts in accordance with well-established precedents, and from deepest personal conviction addresses his countrymen, who are conscious of security and power, are keenly alive to the issues involved, and wholeheartedly recognize the leadership of their chief executive. The Chinese President is hewing out a new path, unknown to his ancestors; both he and his people are conscious of national danger and weakness, and it is for the most part only the numerically small Christian community who have any idea of how to respond to the government's call. Yet the most striking thing is the fundamental parallel of two great nations, whose convictions and ideals are those of peace and popular government, both turning in prayer, at the call of their chosen rulers, to the Power above nations Who alone can order the unruly wills and affections of mankind."

The Lenten Offering number of The Spirit of Missions, usually known as the Children's Number, has appeared and is one of the most attractive and interesting which has been put forth during all the fourteen years that this special edition has been published. It should have a large sale. The children of the Sunday Schools are allowed to keep half of the proceeds of the sales on all new subscriptions which they take to go toward the Lenten Offering.

The report of the treasurer up to January 1st proves the determination of the Church to stand back of the work which she has undertaken. There is, from all sources, a slight increase over the giving of last year. The amount (some $1,500) is, of course, negligible, but the fact that there is an increase, however slight, is important.

Beyond doubt there are deep searchings of heart among Christian people to-day. Never has there been a more honest desire to see the right and to do it, and a greater willingness to make sacrifices for what is right. With relief and thanksgiving the mission boards of this country and of Great Britain are acknowledging the faithful backing which they are receiving from their several constituencies. There is hope that it will continue, and increase as it must certainly do if the interests of the Kingdom are not to suffer amid the clash of arms.

For many months negotiations have been under way to secure a proper site for St. Mary's School, Shanghai, and to remove it from the grounds on which St. John's University is located. This has at last been done and an attractive site, containing ten acres, has been obtained for $26,000, which is only a little over half what it was thought would be needed to expend, and those interested in the undertaking are greatly cheered. The next effort must be toward the erection of proper buildings. In this connection one of the teachers in St. Mary's writes:

"Living in awakened China, and realizing the unique opportunity the Church has here to-day, we could not have the heart and courage to go on with our work had we not faith that the Church at home would make possible the expansion demanded by the times. All around us are heathen schools, started by the government or by private enterprises. These schools are constantly improving in their standards. Unless the Christian institutions can keep pace with such schools in the character and quality of courses offered, the coming Chinese student will prefer the heathen school for its superior advantages. Shall our girls be driven to accept the Western scholarship without Christianity — the empty shell without the kernel, which is the raison d'etre for our work in China? It rests with the Church at home to enable us to meet this wonderful opportunity and to teach the students to know and serve our Teacher and Master, Jesus Christ."

Persons desiring pews or sittings are requested to apply to the Accounting Warden after eleven o'clock Mass, on Sundays or communicate with him at his office in the Clergy House.

PARISH NOTES.

St. Mary's Guild will hold its annual retreat on the Feast of the Annunciation.

The kneeling desk placed in the Lady Chapel is intended for the use of any who may wish for a retired place for prayer.

A retreat for women will be held on mid-Lent Sunday, as usual. Addresses will be given in St. John's Chapel. Those desiring to attend may send their names to the Sister in charge, 2016 Race street.

At the early masses on Sunday those who kneel at the epistle side of the chancel should leave the choir by way of the Lady Chapel, and those on the gospel side by way of the sacristy, as formerly. This will greatly facilitate the administration of the Communion, and will avoid confusion on great festivals.

The fiscal year of the parish ends as the 24th of March, on which date the Accounting Warden closes his books preparatory to making up the annual report. All persons using the weekly envelopes and who may be in arrears with their offerings are urged to cancel their indebtedness prior to the date above mentioned.

THE LENTEN INTERCESSIONS.

A goodly number of the parishioners have responded to the appeal printed in the last number of the magazine. All the half-hour periods have been assigned and many who were unable to give a specified time have come to the Church frequently and joined in the work of intercession. We are confident that if perseverance is shown a real spiritual benefit will be manifested both in individuals and in the parish as a whole. The topics provided are intended only as helps and suggestions, and those who come are free to pray for any object that may be near their hearts. We hope that with many persons the habit may be formed of coming to God's House frequently to lay before Him all our needs—a habit that will not be given up at Easter, but that may become a permanent factor in our daily life.

THE SPIRIT OF MISSIONS.

The Missionary Magazine of the Church records the greatest enterprise in the world—the advance of Christ's Kingdom among nations. Every Church family should subscribe for it. Issued monthly. $1.00 a year.

Published by the Board of Missions, 281 Fourth avenue, New York City.

MISSIONARY MEETING.

An illustrated lecture on Japan will be given by Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Pancoast, in St. Clement's Parish Hall, on Monday, March 15th, at 8 P. M.

Offering for St. Luke's Hospital, Tokyo.

FATHER BENSON.

We are reprinting from the "Messenger" the paper issued by the Cowley Fathers, in Boston, the following excerpts concerning Father Benson. We cannot learn too much of his saintly life and character:

On the day I received the Habit.

AUGUST 5, 1908.

My silence was broken only by the Father Superior coming to my cell to wish me Godspeed, and to give me a blessing. He told me I might go to the Father Founder for a blessing. I found the Saint sitting in the cloister garth, bathed in bright sunshine from a cloudless blue sky. And there on the turf I knelt down beside him, and he blessed me. Then he leaned over, put his arms around me and kissed me. How I loved him! I cannot picture any one else in the house doing that. I wonder what they think St. Paul meant when he wrote, "Greet the brethren with an holy kiss?" I wonder if they think he was French. Well, when any one lives as near the Sacred Heart as Fr. Benson does, national limitations cease to exist, he becomes apostolic. Or I wonder if it is his French blood asserting itself. I always rejoice that he is Richard Meux Benson.

From his lips, or rather from his whole being, poured forth words of the love of God as radiant and mellowing as the noonday sunshine.

JANUARY 15, 1909.

Two days ago, Fr. Benson slipped out to visit an invalid. He fell, was picked up, came home, and said nothing of his accident. At Evensong we saw he was in pain. Coming out of the choir, he did not use his stick, and almost fell. Then, for the first time, he could not take off his surplice, and let me take it off. How did he get it on? On the way back to the house, and especially in going up the steps, I saw from his face that the pain was excruciating. He held on to me tightly as never before. I merely thought his rheumatism was worse. After Compline he let Fr. Congreve, who was "in charge," help him from Chapel to his cell, and was persuaded to have a physician. His shoulder was dislocated! That old war horse had had his shoulder out for eight hours, without letting it disturb his devotions. Some say, How foolish of him not to tell! I only wish there were more heroic foolishness. The doctor says he must be in great pain; but the rest of us are in peace, knowing that he cannot get out of bed. But each morning I expect him to give us "the slip," and be at Mass. Secretly I hope he will.

JANUARY 19, 1909.

Fr. Benson is up and around the house again. He looks aged by the pain. He said the final word in reply to Fr. Gerald's inquiry if he had not realized that he was badly hurt. "Oh! yes," he said, "I thought something was broken, but I knew the doctor would be around in the morning."

In heavenly love abiding,
No change my heart shall fear;
And safe in such confiding,
For nothing changes here.
The storm may roar without me,
My heart may low be laid,
But God is round about me,
And can I be dismayed?

Wherever He may guide me,
No want shall turn me back:
My Shepherd is beside me,
And nothing can I lack.
His wisdom ever waketh,
His sight is never dim,
He knows the way He taketh,
And I will walk with Him.

Green pastures are before me,
Which yet I have not seen,
Bright skies will soon be o'er me,
Where darkest clouds have been,
My hope I cannot measure,
My path to life is free,
My Saviour hath my treasure,
And He will walk with me.

MISSIONARY NOTES.

Bishop Roots, of Hankow, on November 14th celebrated the tenth anniversary of his consecration. The occasion showed the splendid loyalty and remarkable unity of the Chinese and foreign members of the mission staff in the district, and gave them an opportunity to express their loyal respect and sincere admiration for their beloved leader. Christians of all names in Hankow joined in the demonstration, and the special services held were largely attended. The fruitful labors and able leadership of the Bishop endeared him to all the Christians of Central China.

The Board of Missions is asking each member of the Church to join in raising an Emergency Fund of $400,000 to meet the anticipated needs of the present year and to place our missionary work upon a safe footing. This is to be in addition to all missionary offerings. It is hoped that many personal gifts of considerable size may be made. To these each member is asked to give one day's income during Lent, if possible, certainly not later than the 1st of June. Already everywhere the suggestion has come it is meeting with a cordial response, and the probabilities of its success are excellent.

Specific instances of generosity among the very poor are often seen in our distant mission work. Bishop Biller, of South Dakota, recently received a letter from the Indian women of one of his missions enclosing $21.45 for the sufferers from war in Europe, and Archdeacon Stuck, from Chandalar village upon the Yuokon, sends $26, "the value of an offering, mainly in weasel skins, taken at the celebration of the Holy Communion in Chandalar village."

It is frequently asserted that the present opportunity for preaching the gospel in China is unique. As proof of this is seen in the result of an Advent Mission conducted in St. Mark's, Wuchang. Every night for two weeks the Church was crowded to the utmost, and the second week overflow meetings had to be held. These were not sight-seers, but persons really interested in "the doctrine." A large number of inquiries resulted and the missionary staff of this Church found themselves fully occupied in giving interviews and instructions. Among others a number of soldiers presented themselves to the missionary and asked to be entered into a Bible Class.

The new Bishop of Utah, in the March number of the Spirit of Missions, gives an account of a recent trip among the Ute Indians. The late Bishop Spalding frequently visited these people, and some have been baptized and confirmed. The new Bishop feels that the conditions are hopeful for more aggressive work among them.

The newly ordained Bishop of Cuba, the Rt. Rev. Hiram R. Hulse, began his work in the Islands on Sexagesima Sunday, receiving a most cordial greeting from people of all Christian communions. There is every indication that the effective work of Bishop Knight will be carried forward and extended under his aggressive leadership.

In spite of the war, contributions for the work of the English Church Missionary Societies have been maintained, and those of the S. P. G. have actually increased in every department. This is a splendid demonstration of the way in which the sorrows and misfortunes of the war are deepening the earnestness and devotion of all nations.

Canton has forbidden slavery, and any slave-girl who applies to the police is received and educated. Those who can see are sent to the "Government School for Rescued Slave Girls," and, at the urgent request of the former chief of police, Mr. Chang King Wah, the blind girls of the singing class were committed to the care of missionaries. A temporary mat shed was provided by the government for their shelter until a new permanent building was recently completed. This is known as the "Ching Sam" School and was built with money contributed by a wealthy Chinese gentleman.

"ONE-DAY'S INCOME!"

To Each Member of the Church:

It is necessary to raise $400,000. This is to be in addition to the usual offerings for missions. It is made necessary because the gifts of the Church through your Board of Missions have been insufficient to meet the present needs.

How has this critical situation come about?

(1) Because of increased obligations in part ordered by the General Convention.

(2) Because the very success of our missionaries has created new obligations which the Board has been compelled to accept.

(3) Because the Board can never know in any one year exactly what the receipts will be, and, as a matter of fact, only once in the last seven years has the income equalled the expenditure.

In view of the facts, your Board of Missions at its last meeting appointed a committee to secure the help of every member of the Church in giving an Emergency Fund of $400,000.

We are encouraged to ask this by the fact that the laity of the Church have already suggested some such action. One of them writes:

"I am deeply distressed by the failure of the Church to give the apportionment. In view of present world conditions, it is enough for the Board of Missions to say: 'There ought to be no retreat!' Should it not rather declare, 'There must be an immediate and determined advance!' Does the Board ask enough of us Churchmen? Are we not able to provide all that is needed?"

This layman offers not simply to give one day's income, but the income of one day for each of twelve months in addition to his usual missionary offerings.

Will you enlist in this campaign? If so,

1. Will you join us in prayer, that we may have vision and faith and may learn the joy and blessing of sacrifice? Deeper far than the need of money is the need for devout prayer in the Name of Our Lord.

2. Will you, in addition to your usual missionary offerings, give during Lent, if possible, or not later than June 1, 1915, at least one day's income?

3. If this is impracticable, will you make an equivalent self-denial offering?

Of course, many can do much more than this.

(1) The members and officers of the Board are taking the lead in contributing, and have already given over $10,000.

(2) The employees at the Church Mission House have pledged one day's income.

(3) The missionaries on furlough are planning to do the same.

(4) Wherever the idea has been suggested it has met with a unanimous and cordial response.

Will you not join in this?

All gifts sent to your Board of Missions for the Emergency Fund will count upon the apportionment of your parish and diocese, unless you request otherwise.

For all your loyal help in the past by prayers and gifts your Board of Missions thanks you most heartily. We are facing a new world of opportunity, of danger and of duty. Upon your Board of Missions has been placed the responsibility of leading the Church forward.

Will YOU follow?

DANIEL S. TUTTLE,
Presiding Bishop.
ARTHUR S. LLOYD,
President Board of Missions.
EDWIN S. LINES,
Chairman Emergency Committee.

RENTALS OF PEWS OR SITTINGS

Persons desiring pews or sittings are requested to apply to the Accounting Warden after eleven o'clock Mass, on Sundays or communicate with him at his office in the Clergy House.

PARISH NOTES.

Sixty-seven persons made the retreat on mid-Lent Sunday.

Members of the congregation are reminded that each communicant is expected to fill out a communion card at Easter.

The Paschal Candle will be blessed on Holy Saturday night after the first Vespers of Easter. The candle has been decorated this year by Miss Anna Prichett.

On April 12th, at 8 o'clock P. M., in the parish hall, Dr. Jefferys, of the China Mission, will deliver a lecture under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary.

Donations are asked for flowers for the Altar of the Sacrament on Maundy Thursday. Members of the C. B. S. are asked to contribute to this fund. Contributions may be sent to Miss Arnold, 102 South Thirty-sixth street.

The Men's Club held a smoker in the gymnasium on Wednesday evening, March 17th. Prof. F. H. Greene, of the West Chester Normal School, delivered a lecture on the "Nature and Worth of Wit and Humor." The next smoker will be held after Easter.

The office of the Confraternity of the Blessed Sacrament will be sung hereafter in the Lady Chapel. Those who attend the vespers are asked to sit as far forward as possible, and to leave the ends of the pews free for those who may come in later. The psalms and hymn should be sung more rapidly than at present.

MRS. PANCOAST'S LECTURE.

About a hundred people had the pleasure of listening to Mrs. Charles R. Pancoast on Monday evening, March 15th, in the Parish Hall. Very few of us have the opportunity to visit the far East and see with our own eyes the actual work that the Church is doing in that part of the mission field. The next best thing to seeing the work oneself, is to hear about the work from one who has seen it. Mrs. Pancoast presented in a very interesting and vivid manner the Church's work in China and Japan. The lecture was illustrated by stereopticon pictures from photographs taken by Mr. and Mrs. Pancoast.

An offering was taken up which amounted to $58.37. This is to be devoted to the work of St. Luke's International Hospital, Tokyo.

PARISH FINANCES.

One year ago the duplex envelope system was introduced in St. Clement's Parish, and the results have been very encouraging. But the success of this system depends on its general adoption by all members of the parish, and while about 360 persons have used the envelope regularly during the past year, there are still approximately 400 among our communicants who do not use them.

It is absolutely necessary that our yearly income be increased $2,000 to avoid a constantly recurring annual deficit which is only made up by special appeals.

The following statement shows how this amount could be obtained by relatively small subscriptions:

100 subscriptions at 5c. per week yield		$260.00
100 subscriptions at 10c. per week yield		520.00
50 subscriptions at 25c. per week yield		650.00
25 subscriptions at 50c. per week yield		650.00
275 subscriptions	yield	$2,080.00

The Finance Committee of the Vestry has been instructed by vote of the Vestry to present these facts to the members of the parish with the hope of obtaining more support. The envelopes form the most reliable source of income, aside from pew rents, for parish maintenance.

No definite pledges are being asked for, simply a promise to use the envelopes regularly, but it is assumed that the amount given by each user of the envelopes on the first Sunday of the new fiscal year will be indicative of the amount he or she will give throughout the entire twelve months.

Our present receipts from pew rentals, cash and envelope offerings are far from sufficient to meet our expenses, especially during the summer months, this fact being largely due to a lack of systematic offerings being made by the majority of the parishioners, and this has resulted in the necessity of raising money by temporary loans during certain parts of the year.

While the improvements were being made to the church during last summer and fall, congregations were small, and cash offerings necessarily fell off.

At the same time, while the running expenses were as usual, considerable money had to be spent on necessary repairs and improvements. As a consequence, we find it necessary to ask that the Easter offering be devoted to meeting the obligations of the parish, a summary of which follows:

Loans for current expenses and repairs, $2,733, the latter including the cost of walling up the window back of the organ, $466.10; repairing altar candlesticks, $118; restoring reredos, $181.50, and $700 for current expenses.

Additional insurance of $31,000 has been placed on the property, the premiums on which were over $500, while the bills for electric lighting and power were approximately $135 over the usual amount.

Bills due and payable, aside from the sum due on loans, amount to over $900, which includes, for necessary repairs to the cellar ceiling, $568.16, and insurance premiums now due, $368.

The amount needed at Easter to clear the parish of all indebtedness is $3,500.

EDWARD A. CASEY,

Finance Committee.

March 17, 1915.

O Cross, that only know'st the woes
He suffer'd erst Who hung on thee,
Speak to our heart of those deep throes,
Those broken words, that agony.

Sharp were the nails, which ruthless bound
His fainting form in thine embrace;
The thorns, about His temples wound,
Forbade Him e'en that resting-place.

O fearful woe—the Lord of life
Upon thy breast contends with death;
And Victor in the mortal strife,
Yet yielded up His last faint breath.

O holy Cross, by thee we live;
And at thy foot our life we lay:
Tribunal, whence our Lord shall give
His judgment, in that bitter day.

Give us, O Lord, to die with Thee,
With Thee, fell death to rise above;
Despising earthly vanity,
To fix our hearts on joys above.

The Father praise we; and the Son,
Who triumphed for us on the Tree.
And hath for us that glory won:
Like praise unto the Spirit be.

PATTY D. NEILL

On Passion Sunday, very early in the morning, Patty D. Neill entered into Life Eternal. Miss Neill was for many years a Communicant of the Parish, and was the only surviving member of a family devoted to S. Clement's, almost from its inception.

Her singularly sweet and winning disposition triumphed valiantly over the suffering which was her portion in the later years of her life, and when fortified by the Holy Viaticum she entered the Presence of her Lord, her faith was undimmed and her loyalty to the Catholic Church unshaken.

Grant unto her, O Lord eternal rest, and let light perpetual shine upon her.

EASTER FORGIVENESS.

The Resurrection of Christ is the proof that God can meet human penitence with the Divine Grace of Forgiveness. The Risen Christ is the source of Power. The risen and glorified Humanity of Christ is the gift by which God enriches and empowers human life. It is the means by which the fruit of the Passion is secured to us. If the Passion deepens our penitence, the Resurrection assures us that God can, and will, pardon. For my sin, however great, however aggrevated by obstinacy and self-will, there is forgiveness in the Divine Heart, and there is the sacramental pledge of certainty which the risen Christ provides. Of that forgiveness I must have assurance. That assurance may be granted to some by the secret ministries of the Holy Spirit. But there must be no doubt. And for that reason God has provided sacramental certainty for our pardon. The risen Lord has left to His Church the ministry of absolution, conveying a sure and certain outward pledge of immediate forgiveness. Emphatically, in our Ordination Service, it is the one particular power of the Priesthood which is most expressly described. "Receive the Holy Ghost for the office and work of a Priest in the Church of God, now committed unto thee by the imposition of our hands. Whose sins thou dost forgive, they are forgiven; and whose sins thou dost retain, they are retained. And be thou a faithful dispenser of the Word of God, and of His Holy Sacraments." Thus the words of the Easter commission given by the Risen Lord to His Apostles in the upper room bear fruit to-day.

This ministry of Forgiveness is one of the Resurrection gifts which it may be ours to claim at the Hands of God. There will be clear signs in our life, which will reveal whether this is the divine help which we are needing to consummate our penitence, and to preserve to us Easter Peace. Is there stagnation in the spiritual life? Have we come to a halt in the progress of the soul? Is there some one sin continually recurring in the life, starting up again and again, not of necessity what the world calls a great sin, but a sin which for us bars the way to all advance in holiness, a sin which seems to rise up perpetually undefeated? Is the soul beset with a cloud of small sins—sinfulness hard to define, but overpowering in the sense of helplessness and hopeless infirmity which it creates? Do we feel that we have not yet exhausted all the possibilities of humiliation? Have we that longing for some spiritual reparation which St. Paul speaks of as indignation, vehement desire, zeal, revenge? Is there a weak and scrupulous morbidity which weighs down the soul with perpetual anxiety, dissipating all its powers with paralyzing inability to make a clear judgment upon the life? These would be signs that God the Holy Spirit is leading us to this special sacramental gift, which is such a resurrection for the soul.

So will the burden be taken from us. But not only will there be the relief and the comfort of forgiveness. As the use of this sacramental ministry continues, other blessings show themselves and become fresh motives for making it a habit of our devotional life—progress in holiness, the deepening of desire, clearer insight into sin, growth in the power of the Spirit, the widening of spiritual vision, more generous obedience. The soul yet seeks its pardon, but it looks far beyond the mere comfort of forgiveness, towards the perfection of service, the intimacy of a closer fellowship, the deeper consecration of purpose which growing penitence desires. And all that this resurrection life of penitence may mean is sketched for us in the story of St. Peter as we see him after Pentecost, God's chosen leader of the infant Church. The secret of this confidence, his humility, his readiness to endure, his power to serve, was the reality of his penitence and the fullness of the Divine Forgiveness.

Thus Easter forgiveness may be ours, certain and unquestioned. But forgiveness does not do away with punishment. Punishment follows sin. It is the inevitable result. To the penitent, punishment comes as a precious opportunity of penance, readily accepted and lovingly borne. Punishment so received becomes a way to sanctification, an inner discipline that bends the soul in the stern ways of happy obedience to God. It is the forgetfulness of this need of punishment that often makes us so impatient with our progress, so dissatisfied with the fruits of our pardon, so ready to turn our backs again upon God. Forgiveness takes away the guilt of past sin. But the power of that repeated sin upon the life has yet to be reckoned with. If the will has been dissipated with long inattention and years of tolerated distraction, the gift of pardon will not suddenly restore unbroken powers of concentration in meditation and prayer. Slowly and painfully the will must be regained, and brought to subjection with conscious daily effort, with many a lapse, it may be, many a fall, but always now with the certainty of final triumph in the power of the Spirit. The slowness of our spiritual progress, the dryness of our devotion, the indifference and listlessness, the recurring thoughts of evil, the difficulty of maintaining our high ideals—all these trials in our devotional life after absolution, what are they often but the natural punishment of our old sins? This is not the only interpretation of them. They may be God's specially chosen way of trial and progress, quite apart from the natural result of our past unfaithfulness. But often they are the natural penances of our own sins.

Thus forgiveness pledges us to a long struggle, to a continued effort, to perseverance in a higher ideal. And sometimes we lose hope because we forget this. Is it any wonder that our pregress is slow, that the struggle is hard, when we remember what we have been? Here is the test of our humility. Are we humble enough to accept this slow advance, this wearisome, repeated conflict, as the natural penance of our sins? It is not a sign that God has forgotten us, nor that His forgiveness has failed, nor that His pardon has proved unavailing. But it is just the natural punishment which we ourselves have earned, and which God in His mercy allows us to work out. This we will remember in our progress after Easter. The life after Easter is not really easier, but harder than it has been in Lent, because it is nearer to God. "Near to the Lord, near to the fire," is one of the old sayings attributed to Christ Himself. Let us not be dispirited if our advance be slower than we had hoped. We can, indeed, set no bounds to the gracious power of the indwelling Spirit. But in all humility we shall be ready to understand how much we yet lack of that faithful readiness to respond, that perpetual desire to co-operate, which alone can make speedier progress possible. Only day by day we shall renew our hope. Day by day we shall reset our purpose. "Tarry thou the Lord's leisure. Be strong, and He shall comfort thy heart, and put thou thy trust in the Lord."

Thus penitence will be the spirit of our risen life in Christ. As we draw near to death and the glories of the resurrection dawn upon us, penitence will win upon us more and more. "Jesu, mercy!" is the cry of the human heart as the light of Easter breaks. For penitence is love. The joy of Paradise will be its perfect penitence, crowning with purifying bliss all the repentant efforts of this imperfect life. The happiness of the eternal Easter will be the vision of consummate holiness, mirrored for the petinent soul in the face of the risen and glorified Saviour, the King of Love and Lord of Life.—The Wondrous Passion, F. W. Drake.

Rejoice, O ransom'd Christendom,
Sing, sing for gladness:
To-day the Lord hath burst His tomb.
Alleluya. Osanna in the highest!

But three brief days in earth He lay,
Sing, sing for gladness:
Then Jesus cast His cords away.
Alleluya. Osanna in the highest!

If Jesus lives, why sad at heart?
Sing, sing for gladness:
Thou knowest to Him right dear thou art.
Alleluya. Osanna in the highest!

He man with God hath reconciled,
Sing, sing for gladness:
And crowned thee with mercy mild.
Alleluya. Osanna in the highest!

PARISH NOTES.

The collection on Ascension Day will be devoted to the Summer Outing fund.

The church will be open as usual on the Rogation Days from 6 A. M. to 9 P. M.

On the evening of April 12, Dr. William H. Jefferys, of St. Luke's Hospital, Shanghai, China, gave a very interesting talk on the Medical Missions in China, illustrated by stereopticon views of the work. An offering of $25 was taken, which will be devoted to the work of St. Luke's Hospital.

On the morning of April 14th at 10.30 o'clock, Bishop Rhinelander acting for Bishop Tuttle, of Missouri, ordained Mr. Karl Tiedemann to the diaconate. Mr. Tiedemann graduates this year from the General Theological Seminary, New York City. It is of interest to note that this is the first ordination which has ever been held in St. Clement's Church.

EASTER.

The services at St. Clement's during Holy Week and on Easter Day were very well attended, and in spite of the rather unusual weather there were a good many communions on Easter Day itself.

The choir rendered Gounod's St. Cecilia Mass at 11 o'clock. The tenor and soprano solos were especially well sung. At even-song, Jordan's Te Deum was sung after the Solemn Procession.

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

The meetings of the Auxiliary during the past winter have been well attended, and much interest has been manifested.

The articles made for the missionary boxes, with some donations, amounted to 290 pieces. These were divided between Grace Hospital, Morganton, N. C. and the Philadelphia City Mission. To the Hospital were sent 165 articles of clothing, and to the City Mission, 125 pieces, including donations of men's clothing.

During the present Academic year, we are paying from the Education Account of the Yarnall Fund, for the support and education of five students, two each at St. Stephen's College and Kent School, and one at Donaldson School.

A considerable number of additions have been made to the books in the library of Theology during the past year, but not as many as the funds warrant. Most of the books are purchased abroad, and owing to the war such purchases have naturally been practically stopped. This accounts for the size of the balance standing to the Library's credit.

IV.

BOUDINOT FUND.

Under the will of Mrs. Elizabeth Coleman Boudinot, the Parish was bequeathed the sum of $36,000.00 for a Lady Chapel, and an additional sum of $5,000.00 for the endowment of the Chapel.

During the past year, the improvements contemplated have been completed. They include the Lady Chapel, enlargement of the Choir with new stone Choir rail, new stone lectern, new Clergy stalls, new sacristy, and the rebuilding and enlargement of the organ.

V.

ENDOWMENT FUND.

The annual statement of the Pennsylvania Company for Insurances on Lives and Granting Annuties, Trustees of the Endowment Fund, rendered March 1, showed that the fund then amounted to $31,563.06, which included a portion of the bequest left the Parish by Mrs. Elizabeth Cuthbert Smith, deceased. The balance of this bequest has since been received, the amount of the bequest being $6,631.83.

VI.

INSURANCE.

During the past year, the amount of insurance carried on the church building, has been increased $20,000.00. The insurance on the Church contents has been increased $3,000.00, and on the organ, $8,000.00, while in addition thereto the Church property is now covered by liability insurance.

The total amount of insurance now carried on the property is $207,800.00, apportioned as follows:

Church building	$105,000.00
Parish House	45,500.00
Clergy House	15,500.00
Church and Parish House contents	25,800.00
Organ	16,000.00
	$207,800.00

GENERAL SUMMARY.

In comparing this report with that for the preceding year, there is shown a decrease in cash offerings for Parish support of $1,063.35, but this is largely accounted for by the fact that early in 1914 special efforts were made to secure funds with which to pay off a note about falling due. The real decrease in cash offerings can mainly be attributed to the falling off in the size of our congregations while the improvements were being made to the church last summer and fall.

The envelope offerings for Parish purposes show an increase over last year of $971.96, this showing what has already been gained by the introduction of the duplex envelope system. No stronger argument for a more general use of these envelopes can be made than the mere statement of this increase in offerings.

Our offerings for Missions fell off $1,715.00, but no actual comparison can be made with last year, when we had only a monthly envelope for Mission offerings, and when one special offering for Missions totaled about $1,300.00. This year we have had no special offering for Missons and have depended solely on the duplex envelope system.

Income from pew rents decreased $169.38 as compared with last year.

Aside from the Lady Chapel and other improvements to the church already mentioned, the following repairs and improvements, all of which were necessary, have been made to the property during the past year. The fence around the church was straightened and painted, and a new fence built across the west end of the church lawn to prevent it being made use of as a neighborhood play ground, thus protecting the lawn and saving the church windows from danger of breakage.

The tower roof was reslated and the Cross regilded. The window back of the organ on the north side of the church was walled up as a protection to the new organ, and a window cut in its base to give light in the new sacristy.

The cellar ceiling has been covered with metal lath and cement plaster as a protection against fire. The painting on the reredos back of the high altar has been renovated and restored, and parts of the reredos have been gilded.

As shown in this report the Parish now owes for loans $2,800.00, incurred to meet the cost of special repairs and current expenses, while bills for work done in church cellar, insurance premiums and other items remaining unpaid, bring the sum needed to clear the Parish of all floating indebtedness, up to just over $3,500.00.

Respectfully submitted,

E. & O. E. S. McKEAN BAYARD,
March 29, 1915. Accounting Warden.

We do hereby certify that we have examined the report of the Accounting Warden for the year ending March 24, 1915, have compared vouchers with record of payments made, have examined the assets, and find the report to be correct as above set forth.

EXTRACTS FROM OLD LETTERS ABOUT FATHER BENSON, FOUNDER S. S. J. E.

Whit Tuesday, 1909.

Did I tell you the object of Fr. Benson's trip to London? He went up to assist at the 50th anniversary testivities of All Saints', Margaret street. He was intimately associated with the founding of that church in the troubled years of opposition, inhibition and persecution which preceded the consecration. That consecration rather marked the victory in the struggle for freedom to teach the Catholic Faith in London. Fr. Benson is the most prominent of the few veterans of that struggle. So he and the Bishop of London were to be the guests of honor at the dinner there.

The Father Superior carefully directed me to see the Father Founder safely to the hotel where the dinner was to be. He did not think the Father would let me do more. Also, he thought it would be convenient for the Father to spend the night there, have me call for him on Friday, and bring him quietly back to Oxford. Apparently the Father Superior had not made the plan a matter of obedience. Fr. Benson had not the slightest intention of staying in a hotel "convenient for the dinner." He stayed at St. Edward's House—convenient for Mass.

At St. Edward's House, Fr. Longridge and Br. Michael welcomed us with open arms. They had not expected him. Fr. Longridge was to go with him to the first evensong of the festival of All Saints and to the dinner. I could not go, for the Bishop was to be the preacher, and all seats were justly reserved for parishioners.

We had hardly gotten into the House when Fr. Benson said to me, "There must be things in London you would like to do." I said, in the "humble" way we ask for favors from the Novice Master, "I should like to call on my cousins if I may."

"Oh! dear, yes," said Fr. Benson, "do anything you like! I have Fr. Longridge to help me about for the rest of the day." Fancy being told "do anything you like!" I had not heard the phrase in a year. We often do pleasant things; never "anything you like."

The next morning Father Benson and I went to the High Mass at All Saints. They sang Gounod's St. Cecilia Mass, with a big orchestra. Rather a contrast to our severe plainsong! Fr. Benson enjoyed it thoroughly. We both sang "Jerusalem the Golden" and "For All Thy Saints" at the tops of our unmusical voices, with no one to disapprove.

Canon Newbolt preached. His warning was: We have inherited the orthodoxy our predecessors fought for; have we fallen behind their piety? With Fr. Benson beside me, I knew we had. Fr. Benson was deeply moved. His voice was broken with tears, as the people crowded around him after the Mass. How they love him! It is because he radiates love, and has done so for years. Everyone we met, every cabman and porter, as well as the people we knew, he treated as if they were our Lord. And for the moment they were like Him—almost. In that saintly love I was immersed for three whole days. I am drunk with the love pouring from that battered old chalice.

June 4, 1909.

In "Our Travels" I had arrived, I think, at our departure from Mrs. Benson's (the Father's sister-in-law) after luncheon on Friday. Fr. Benson and I then went to the Abbey for evensong. We do not say matins and evensong in choir at St. Edward's House, for the Dean likes us to come to the Abbey. The vergers have directions, I believe, to take us to stalls in choir. Having a wicked fondness for "chief seats in the synagogue" I should have enjoyed being assigned a clergy stall in the Abbey, but Fr. Benson just sat down in the transept, among the American tourists.

At 11 on Saturday the Father and I set out in a taxi for St. Peter's, London Docks. We finished our visits in Bayswater, having called on all the clergy and octogenarians in between. We may have missed a few, but not many. His sister-in-law's vigorous health and spirits rejuvenated him. Never have I seen such energy on an empty stomach. I had never regarded the Vigil of Whitsunday as a black fast, and I got hungry enough to eat the chauffeur. But the Father seemed quite oblivious to the time of day and of human desire for food.

For the first time in my life I felt the charm of London. I suppose it was because I was seeing it through Fr. Benson's eyes, or rather as his eyes. He loves every stone of it. He talked much of the changes, even since his boyhood. He was born in a corner house in Russell Square, in the garden of which now stands five houses. Only two other gentlemen, besides his father, had country places in Richmond. Now it is built up solidly all the way from London. Belgravia was unknown country. And, most surprising of all, his great-grandfather's town house stood near the end of London bridge. So he talked on, not being able to see the places himself, but opening my eyes to see them.

The chauffeur seemed never to have been beyond the Tower. But he managed to find the London Docks. We did not want them. I was telling him, on one side, to go to St. Peter's, Old Gravel Lane, while Fr. Benson, on the other side, was trying to tell him how to get there. In a moment there sprung from a group of wharf rats—looking as if they had been etched by Whistler—a smiling young "gaffer." "It's Fr. Wainwright you want. I'll take you."

When the taxi arrived in that thoroughfare of fashion, under the proud direction of our boy, all work stopped. The women hung out of the windows, the men came out of the "pubs," and the children swarmed around it like bees. No sooner had I got the Father out than he became a counter-attraction. They all knew him and loved him just as much as the people in Mayfair. Their disappointment that he had not come to spend Whitsunday with them was beautiful.

Fr. Wainwright came out to welcome us. He is the only person I have ever met who suggests the Curé d'Ars—old, neglected in appearance, with a face transfigured with gentle love. I like this story about him: "Why does Fr. Wainwright always look so happy at funerals? Because he has got another of his children safely out of Old Gravel Lane."

He invited us to luncheon, but food was not to be. The Father said we must be going on. He had gone there to say goodbye, but he was so overwhelmed with love and with invitations to come to every festival to preach that he did not say goodbye. His voice became firm and young again.

We headed for St. Alban's, Holborn. While going through the city, the Father surprised me by saying, "Did you know that I am the third oldest draper in London?" We both laughed, and he explained that he had inherited his membership in The Drapers' Company, and had always retained it, to have a vote in city affairs. Was there ever such a man for keeping in touch with everything in Heaven and earth? He said he was asked quarterly to dine with his company, but that he had not done so for sixty years. You can guess that I encouraged him to do so and take "his eyes" with him.

At St. Alban's all the clergy were hearing confessions, except Fr. Staunton. He was delighted to see Fr. Benson. We stayed there only a few minutes. As we got back in the taxi Fr. Benson said: "I thought he would have the courtesy to invite us to luncheon." I suggested that they had probably had luncheon several hours before. It seemed a new idea to the Father.

Then we went on for a last visit to All Saints'. After that the chauffeur and I exchanged looks of amazement when the Father said: "10 Cleveland Square, Bayswater." The Father could not see the meter, but I could. We had our return tickets, but would our shillings cover the figures on the meter? I should not have minded being two penniless monks in London, but two penniless monks in a taxi in London!

The Father kept my arm until we had gotten back into his cell at the Mission House, Cowley. Then I knelt while he prayed that God would take me safely through the journey of life to His eternal Home. Then he gave me a blessing. I am still drunk with his outpoured love. If I may say it without irreverence, I felt as if I had been carrying about the Blessed Sacrament for three days, and in the gayest pyx ever made.

Persons desiring pews or sittings are requested to apply to the Accounting Warden after eleven o'clock Mass, on Sundays or communicate with him at his office in the Clergy House.

PARISH NOTES.

St. Clement's Branch of the Women's Auxiliary contributed $116 toward the United Offering this year.

The Girls' Club will hold a Strawberry Festival in the Parish Hall on the evening of June 3d. The proceeds will be devoted to the Choir Outing Fund.

The annual meeting of the Confraternity of the Blessed Sacrament will be held on the eve of Corpus Christi. Vespers will be sung in the Lady Chapel at 5.15, and a business meeting will follow.

Commencing with Sunday, June 6th, the 8 o'clock Mass will be discontinued for the summer, and the 7.30 Mass on weekdays will be omitted after June 1st. The Litany and Intercessions on Friday will also be discontinued.

The members of the parish are reminded that during the summer it is always difficult for the Accounting Warden to meet the parish expenses. With many persons away from the city the congregations are apt to be very small and the income from the Sunday collections not large. The Easter collection this year amounted to $2,192.57, which was about $1,300 less than the sum needed. The parishioners are urged, therefore, to make special offerings for the expenses of the parish, and to make provision for the payment of their envelopes during the next three months.

EASTER MEETING OF THE VESTRY

At the annual parish election the following named gentlemen were elected to serve as Vestrymen for three years, or until Easter, 1918:

Mr. S. McKean Bayard, Mr. Clinton Rogers Woodruff, Mr. Caleb F. Wright, Mr. George Louis Mayer.

At the Easter meeting of the Vestry, held on Tuesday, April 6th, Mr. S. McKean Bayard was elected Accounting Warden, Mr. Francis D. Wetherill was appointed Rector's Warden, and Mr. Caleb F. Wright was elected Secretary of the Vestry.

Messrs. Berry, Mayer and J. L. Wetherill were elected Delegates to the Diocesan Convention.

THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY.

A Letter from Mr. McHenry.

"Just a line to thank you cordially for the splendid lot of new clothing from the St. Clement's Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary. Won't you please express my sincere thanks to the members of your Auxiliary and tell them how greatly I appreciate their kindness and interest.

"I wish that the members of the Auxiliary would visit the City Mission once in a while, and investigate our way of doing things. I think they would be more satisfied to know that they were helping an institution of the Church that is trying to give the most practical kind of aid to the poor of Philadelphia.

"With best wishes, I am,
"Cordially yours,
"H. Cresson McHenry."

A Letter from Grace Hospital, Morganton, N. C.

"Will you please express to the ladies who so kindly and generously helped in the ample box for the hospital, our sincere appreciation of all they have sent us. The garments are all so very nice, and will be of the greatest help. We have been very busy this winter, and the opening of spring has brought no less work. In the hospital we are doing a good deal of operating, and are feeling the need of a babies' ward, for certainly a shrieking baby is a very troublesome thing when there is no special place for him.

"In our work outside the hospital we have such opportunities of service, and it is so interesting to see the pleasure which very simple things give our people, who are so unspoiled. The women love to come to the meetings, where they sew a little and talk, and have a cup of coffee. The G. F. S. are just now so pleased with playing fairy stories, dressing up a little, and making believe, although most of them are big girls. I had explained in 'Little Red Riding Hood' that Grandma lived by the old mill, and the little girl who was playing, as she didn't know any 'mill,' except the one in town, said, 'My gran'maw lives over on the new mill row.' Was not that lovely?

"Again I thank you all, and I hope that you will come to see us, for some of you will be surely coming to Asheville, and we are on the way.

"With all kind regards, I am,
"Sincerely yours,
"Mary H. Hughson."

THE DIOCESAN CONVENTION.

The Annual Convention of the Diocese met at the Church of St. Luke and Epiphany on May 4th to 6th. Possibly the most interesting as well as most important matter that was considered was the report of the committee in regard to the Church Pension Fund. The Convention considered the whole subject as a committee of the whole on the afternoon of the second day. There was considerable discussion and opposition, principally on the part of the clergy to a system of pensions. For over an hour Mr. Monell Sayre, the Secretary of the Church Pension Fund, answered questions and explained the system. Finally the resolution was adopted which put the diocese on record as endorsing the general plan of the Pension Fund. The discussion of the details and the working out of the scheme in connection with the already existing funds was postponed till the convention of 1916.

The question of the care and support of the aged and infirm clergy is an important one, and one which has occupied the attention of the Church in America for nearly three-quarters of a century. No systematic or adequate provision has been made up to the present time. In the middle of the nineteenth century the General Clergy Relief Fund was created, but the resources of this fund are less than 20 per cent. of the minimum amount required.

In 1907 the General Convention authorized a movement to raise $5,000,000. This has not been raised, the subscriptions from individuals and offerings from the various parishes have been far short of this sum, and have been very irregularly paid. No guaranteed pensions or regular relief could be granted on such a basis.

With this situation to face, the General Convention of 1910 created a joint commission, entitled "The Joint Commission on the Support of the Clergy," to investigate the whole problem of the care of the aged and disabled clergy and of the families of deceased clergymen. The report of this Commission was accepted by the General Convention of 1913, and on April 3, 1914, the Commission was incorporated by act of the Legislature of the State of New York under the title of "The Church Pension Fund."

The scheme proposed by the Church Pension Fund, after careful consideration of all possible plans, is that of pension by insurance. Each parish, mission, or other ecclesiastical organization pays, in addition to the stipend of the clergy which they themselves receive, a certain per cent. of that stipend as a premium. This premium is sent to the Church Pension Fund, who will hold it until the contingencies of old age, disability or death occur, when it will be paid out as annuities. The average per cent. has been worked out for the whole Church as 7 per cent. of the stipends of the clergy. This will enable the fund to pay a pension ranging from the minimum of $600 to the maximum of $2,000 per annum.

A separate ledger account will be kept with every clergyman, so that any change in his field of work will not affect the pension. The pension will be affected, however, if the parish or parishes where he may work fail to pay the full assessment.

The objections to the plan are principally these: Clergy who are receiving large stipends and whose parishes are well able to pay the 7 per cent. premium, will receive larger pensions, while the clergy in the smaller parishes, who may need the pension most, will be uncertain of a pension, because of the inability of the parish to pay the premium. Also 7 per cent. of the stipend of the rector or priest in charge of a small parish is a much larger proportion of the total expenses, and consequently the smaller parishes may feel this most. This will be partly met by aid from the diocese.

The plan, however, although it has its objectionable features, is much more systematic and feasible than the present system which can guarantee no definite or regular income to those who have grown old or disabled in the service of the Church.

BASIL WILLIAM MATURIN, PRIEST

Among those who died on the Lusitania was Father Maturin. So ended the life of one of the most winning and lovable of men, leaving this world darker for some of us. "Very Irish" he was, in his impulsive warm-heartedness, as I who lived and worked with him in those happy times at St. Clement's very well know.

A popular, striking preacher—brilliant Irishmen are—he was his best in a mission, rousing the indifferent to feel and to act. Time changed him but little. He who years ago studied the methods of "Sam" Small in Baltimore, this last winter, I am told, studied those of "Billy" Sunday in Philadelphia. You heard him at his worst, when he tried to work out in cold-blooded reasoning, first principles to their logical conclusions. No one made more people love him better; no one was less fitted to be an intellectual leader. If he came to a precipice, his last thought was to find a way down by slow and easy steps; his first, "I'll throw myself down and soon find out if I am killed." A patient investigation of facts seemed to him a waste of time. He was a man to say, "If philosophy or theory has a reply, take it. If facts be against it, so much the worse for the facts."

He died while he was a Roman Catholic priest. As such he tried to be kind to his old Anglican friends of other days, and as far as possible, loyal to his past without breaking from his adopted Church; witness the way for a long time, in which he declined controversy; and the fact that he was the only Roman Catholic priest to attend the funeral of the ex-Jesuit, Father Tyrrell, who had been one of his father's parishioners in Dublin; and his appreciation of Father Benson in a recent number of the Church Times.

That may have been in part the reason why his co-religionists seemed to distrust him. They never gave him real responsibility. But we find other reasons in his latest book. He tells an anecdote of his writing out his reasons for 'verting, and finding how unsatisfactory and unconvincing they were even in his own ears, he was able to say nothing more than, "These are my reasons," as if he could make bad reasons become good by his will and choice and so act on them. So purely individualistic or Protestant, no wonder Bishops were afraid of him.

Many years ago, an Anglican friend asked him, "But what have you to say to the Eastern Orthodox Church. Surely, its mere existence shows your position to be both recent and wrong."

"I put that aside." It may be all very well and good, before one acts, to set aside for future examination what one feels to be fatal. But the same position is taken after all these years. (See his last book).

His powers may have lessened, and for his own peace I hope he never whispered to himself "Suspected," however true it may have been.

The same man whom we loved, however erratic his modes of thought, sleeps in his native island. Many saddened over the Lusitania will join me in the prayer "May the souls of the faithful rest in peace, especially that of Basil William Maturin, priest."

DUNCAN CONVERS.

THE GIFT OF THE SPIRIT.

There does not seem to be any reason either in the words of the narrative or in the nature of things for supposing that our Lord's complete ascension was the work of an instant. Rather the reverse. As He tarried forty days upon the earth, He might well tarry in other states of being. The other idea, although perhaps more common in the present day, arises from men not having any real faith in the existence of various heavens of intermediate glory between man on earth and the Right Hand of God to which Jesus ascended.

In order to conceive the glorification of Christ's Body we must consider what the human body really is.

The human body consists of a certain force which is found animating matter and filling it with certain powers such as cannot be found elsewhere. The Body of Christ had within it, moreover, the presence of the Holy Ghost, a Divine power anointing, regulating, expanding, glorifying, this organism.

By the resurrection the Body of Christ was freed from the conditions of our fallen nature, the likeness of sin under which the Son of God, though sinless, consented to be born, to suffer, and to die. His Body rose as a spiritual Body, all its forces being perfectly free to act according to the impulse of the anointing Spirit's eternal love, no longer cumbered by the conditions of dead matter which limited its action before death.

The grossness, heaviness, weariness, immobility of our material frame arises from the dead matter with which we are associated. Our true body is the force which struggles to act through this dense medium. The form of flesh is the condition under which this force becomes an agent in the material world, a form which is spiritualised but not destroyed by the resurrection. The force of our nature is developed, and so our body for the future is perfected, or, as we commonly say, habits are formed by the acts we do while striving to bring this flesh into subjection. Those habits formed on earth constitute our eternal selves. Our Lord Jesus acted in perfect truth according to the will of God. Consequently His Body rose again in perfect harmony with the Eternal indwelling Spirit. Nothing was wanting to Him.

This force became gradually manifest as He ascended. The indwelling Spirit showed forth therein all the various capacities which constitute the several glories of the heavenly host. All were found in Him.

This Body was capable of higher exaltation. Being entirely identified with the will of God, it was not capable of full development until it became the complete organ of the power of God.

All this exaltation, however, was the work of the indwelling Spirit, a glory not from without but from within, not involving a change of the Body, but manifesting the identity of the Body from first to last. "In Him dwelt all the fullness of the Godhead bodily" from the very beginning (Col. ii:9).

It would have been no Ascension if Christ had received a new Body. The habits formed by natural struggle in this lower world, keeping the flesh by a human will in entire subjection to the Spirit, constitute the glorious power of the Body now that it is set free. He attains the joy that was set before Him by unfettered correspondence with the Spirit whose power He exerts.

At the Right Hand of God He receives the Holy Ghost in all the fullness of anointing as Lord and Christ. The hand is the symbol of action, and Jesus is said to be on the Right Hand of God because God acts toward all creation through His glorified manhood. As man He receives the Holy Ghost, being Himself one God with the Father from whom the Holy Ghost proceeds.

The power of the Son of God was hidden from sight until His Ascension was thus complete, His manhood was manifesting fresh powers of the indwelling Spirit, but as receiving, not as communicating them. When He was seated at the Right Hand of God there was no longer aught to receive. He is seen as the Son of God, from whom the Holy Ghost proceeds. Henceforth He gives.

By this was His Sonship manifest. The Holy Ghost no longer descending upon His Humanity as having any emptiness, His Humanity was the perfect organ of Divine action. He acts in our manhood with supreme authority by the Holy Ghost proceeding from Himself as from the Father. His Humanity is taken up into the glory of the Sonship, which is called mystically the Right Hand of God, for it now becomes the sole instrument through which the Spirit of God works. The Spirit proceeding from the Son does not act save according to the energy of this glorious Body. This Body is the Sword of the Spirit, the temple wherein God dwells.

"He received gifts for men." The Body of Christ was not glorified in order to remain as an isolated Being His Body was to make its force felt throughout creation. The second Adam is a life-giving Spirit. Henceforth the Church as the Body of Christ shares in the glorified energy of the Body in which He personally acted and now lives on high.

The Apostles had been brought into connection with this Body by feeding upon it at the Last Supper, and by receiving the Spirit breathed forth from it on Easter-day.

When therefore Christ's Body was completely glorified there could be no delay. The upheaving power at the extremity of a lever acts coincidently with the motion of the central wheel of the machine. That central power is here the power of God. Divine actions are instantaneous. Christ's Body in the Apostles was in no way separable from itself as taken up into God. The glorification of Christ above the angel host was manifested by the outpouring of the Holy Ghost upon His Body which still dwelt in the persons of the Apostles.

Scientific experiments show us how there are subtle powers mysteriously generated, which when complete burst out with an energy filling the whole organism wherein before they were latent. So may we reverently image forth the sudden flash of glory whereby the whole Body of Christ felt itself kindled with the Divine perfection, "He being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received from the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, had shed forth this which ye now see and hear" (Acts ii: 33).

He received. He gave. The action was identical. God gave not the Spirit by measure unto Him (John iii:34) and of His fullness have all we received.

Of this Spirit we are made partakers by union with the Body of Christ. "By one Spirit we are all baptised into one body, and are all made to drink into one Spirit."

Christ is the Head. We are the members. All that is His is ours. But our flesh in its dullness must be subjected to His Flesh in its spiritual glory. The Flesh of Christ is a real created substance, but not a dull material lump. It is a self-communicative force. Our dullness must be moved thereby. It moves us not merely by the thrust of material contact. That would be our destruction, for our bodies could not bear such motion. To do His work is more than human strength permits. By the created fellowship of Body with body, He communicates to us the laws of conduct which constitute His own perfect righteousness and holiness. By the regenerating power of the Holy Ghost He strengthens us as by a Fire which transforms and deifies, so that we may live with the life of God and do the work of God.

The subtle powers of nature defy space. How much more does the Body of Christ! The force of His Holy Heart reproduces itself within every one of His members. We have but to yield ourselves up to it. God exalting Him to His Right Hand hath given Him to be Head over all things to the Church, which is His Body, the fullness of Him that filleth all in all.

O Jesu, grant that I may ever be true to Thy glorious Body. So shall I die to every other thought and live to God.

My son, I call thee out of the world that thou mayest live wholly to Me. Look to Me. Lean on Me. Abide in Me. Let Me be thine All, thy Life, thy Strength, thy Joy, thy Light, thy Law, thy Food, thy Spiritual Wealth, thine eternal Portion. Seek Me as being all-sufficing, and seek nothing but in Me, by Me, for Me. So shall the fullness of My grace raise thee out of thy weakness, and thy soul shall have her hunger sated in the fullness of My Righteousness wherein thou shalt be exalted for ever.

O Jesu, I feel Thy touch. I hear Thy voice. I see Thy brightness. I rejoice in Thy Spirit. Wonderful is the life derived from Thee and hidden with Thee still at God's Right Hand. O let Thy life overpower every movement of my natural being. As Thou art ascended to the Right Hand of God, let Thy loving Spirit lead me forth, revealing to me Thy beauty, that I may search into the mysteries of Thy dwelling.—"The Life Beyond the Grave."—Fr. Benson.

EMERGENCY FUND NOTES.

Our Board of Missions has asked the people of the Church to give, in addition to all other offerings, not less than $400,000 in order to wipe out the accumulated deficit of $254,000 and meet all the needs and emergencies of this present year. Mr. George Gordon King, Treasurer of the Board of Missions, reports that gifts and offerings are coming from all parts of the country. Men and women who can give thousands of dollars are giving their thousands; boys and girls who can give only a few cents are doing that. The largest gift so far is $5,000. Three persons have each given that amount. The smallest gift of 2 cents. Two people have given that amount.

How the Emergency Fund Stands.

Amount asked for.....	$400,000
Given and pledged to April 24.....	86,000
Still needed	314,000

Have you sent your gift?

Bishop Osborne, of Springfield, writing to the people of his diocese, says: "Every one can give one day's income, from the Bishop to the youngest communicant." Every congregation is to send its offerings to the diocesan synod in May, when a stirring missionary service is to be held.

Even the Indians in South Dakota are taking up the One Day's Income plan. The Rev. Edward Ashley, of the Cheyenne River Agency, writes that they will give and pray for the success of the Emergency Fund.

Work for the Emergency Fund is going on in the Hawaiian Islands. Bishop Restarick has appointed a committee consisting of three white men, one Hawaiian, one Chinese, one Japanese, and one Korean. They propose to reach every member of the Church in the islands. The Bishop says: "We shall not be able to finish our campaign until after June 1st, but we shall do it."

Bishop Tuttle, the Presiding Bishop of the Church, points out that our Church at home and abroad now has about 2,700 missionary workers. Every month they must have bread and butter. He asks everybody to give a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull altogether. If we do that, he says, we will get the Emergency Fund.

Many people are giving more than one day's income. Those who can do so will help to make up for others who perhaps at this time have no day's income. By following this plan one is relieved from the necessity of making any declaration of what the individual income may be.

A Connecticut clergyman says that never in his experience of twenty-five years in the ministry has he found so inspiring and enthusiastic a response to any call from the Church at large as has been given to the call for the Emergency Fund. People with large incomes and people with small ones, bank presidents and bank clerks, superintendents of factories and men at the benches, gardeners and workmen, men, women and children, all have joined in a fine fellowship of self-denial and giving in order that they may have a share in saving the Church's work from setback and disaster.

MISSIONARY NOTES.

The situation in Mexico is so kaleidoscopic in character that it is difficult to give any assurance of anything concerning it. We have at present no American workers except in Mexico City and Guadalajara. In other places there are clergy of the native Mexican Church at work, and many of our chapels are maintaining their services, but not a few of the missions are entirely cut off from touch with the Bishop. Conditions, however, at the present writing are slightly relieved.

In the cathedral at Hankow, China, on January 5th, was witnessed a suggestive scene, when a chorus of foreigners sang Gaul's "Holy City." The words had been translated into Chinese for the benefit of the hearers. Tickets were distributed in the London and Wesleyan missions, as well as our own. Some twenty blind boys and young men from the Wesleyan School were among the most appreciative listeners. This is surely a beautiful and suggestive way to "tell it out among the heathen that the Lord is King."

PARISH NOTES.

Contributions of flowers for the altars are requested during the summer.

A requiem mass will be said every Monday in the Lady Chapel at 7 o'clock. During the hot weather the other weekday masses will be said in St. John's Chapel.

Commencing the first Sunday in July and continuing through the summer, evensong will be said in St. John's Chapel at 5 o'clock in the afternoon and the evening service will be discontinued.

Father Quin commenced his vacation on June 14th. He will be absent until the end of July. On his return Father Caine will take his holiday. The Rector expects to leave for the summer on July 1st.

On Thursday evening, June 3, the Girls' Club held a very successful Strawberry Festival, the proceeds of which have been given to the Choir Outing Fund. A sum of eighty-five dollars was realized after all expenses were paid. It is our hope this year that we may be able to send each of the choir boys to camp for a number of days. Contributions for this object may be sent to Mr. Fry or to the Rector.

The contributions for the Summer Outing Fund have been much less generous this year than formerly. Up to the present writing we have in hand only fifty dollars. Last year the fund amounted to over two hundred dollars. It is needless to say that this means disappointment to many of our people, as there is no other money available for this purpose. The Rector feels sure that it is only necessary to lay the matter before the parish, and hopes for a generous response from those who are fortunate enough to be able to take holidays at their own expense.

THE LEAGUE OF INTERCESSION.

It seems necessary to again remind the members of the League of Intercession of the privileges and obligations of membership in the League. The obligations are not difficult of fulfillment, namely, the use of the intercessions weekly. Doubtless every member of the League is faithful in this respect. Very few, however, avail themselves of the privilege of sending in intercessions which may be published in the leaflet. There must be many persons and many good works that might well be prayed for. And may we ask that thanksgivings might be offered more frequently than at present.

REPORT OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL, FEBRUARY, 1915, to JUNE, 1915.

The Secretary records an enrollment of sixty-nine in the larger school and twenty-nine in the primary class. The Women's Bible Class has an enrollment of twenty-six. While the total number of scholars is practically the same as in February, there have been several who have moved out of the neighborhood or for some other reason have ceased to attend. New scholars have taken their places.

The work this year has been interesting and very well done. This is largely due to faithfulness and earnestness of the teaching staff.

Since Easter the 9.15 mass has been sung. The children have done very well. It is hoped that next fall not only a better attendance at this mass but also a more hearty support on the part of the older people who attend will improve the singing. During the summer the mass will be said. A short instruction for the children will follow the mass.

The following are the honor rolls for the second term:

Attendance at Mass and Sunday School.

Present every Sunday: John Coulthard, Marion Fullerton, Alfred Brown, Stanley Coulthard, Ruth Smith, Charlotte Stokes, Elsie Edwards, Florence Erhardt, Alice Erhardt.

Roiden Schaefer and Florence Schaefer, members of the Primary Class, have not missed one Sunday since their names were registered. They entered after the term commenced.

Absent only once: Ontamenia Kline, Kenneth Haskins, Lillian Miller.

The following have obtained a grade of 90 per cent. in their lessons: John Coulthard, Lillian Miller, Marion Fullerton, Janet Rothwell, John Remington, Stanley Coulthard, Elsie Edwards, Charlotte Garoh, Mabel Rothwell, Ontamenia Kline, Ruth Smith, Charlotte Stokes, Jessie Smith, Mary Rothwell.

It is of interest to note that the offerings from the Sunday School this past year were $70.02, while the expenses have been $36.23.

EMILY T. PENROSE,
Treasurer St. Clement's Auxiliary.

NOT A "RICH CHURCH."

Very often, within the last few years, we have met with persons, some of them, strangely enough, our own parishioners, who are cherishing the illusion that St. Clement's is a very "wealthy" parish. Indeed, during the past month certain members of the parish have responded to requests for contributions for special objects with a point blank refusal, on the ground that "such a wealthy parish ought not to beg," and that "there must be a fund" for such purposes. The assertion would be amusing were the results less serious. In view of this widespread misconception, it may be advisable to bring before those parishioners who have sufficient interest in parochial affairs to read the magazine a few facts for their information.

In the first place, there are a large number of persons on our list of communicants who give no regular contributions toward parish support. There are others who give nothing at all. If every member of St. Clement's parish were doing his full duty there would be no need of appeals for "special funds."

We feel that it should be quite clearly stated that the Endowment Fund and the Yarnall Fund do not provide an income which will support the parish. The income from the Endowment Fund at present amounts to only a few hundred dollars. As to the Yarnall Fund, only half of the income can be used for the parish at all. We have about $1,000 a year for repairs and $1,000 a year for choir and altar expenses. This is our whole income from the Yarnall legacy which is available for the church, and it can be used for nothing else. It will be quite evident to any intelligent and unprejudiced mind that this does not constitute enormous wealth. We would be grateful if the readers of this article would take pains to disseminate this information.

Last year, as has been stated often to the congregation, there were several extraordinary expenses which required a considerable outlay of money. This included the receiling of the cellar, the walling up of the window in the north aisle for the protection of the new organ, and the placing of additional insurance upon the church property. The total amount reached about $1,600. The Rector made an appeal to the congregation for contributions toward these expenses. The result was the princely sum of $33. It is evident that the members of the parish are entirely unconcerned as to whether or not the church building goes up in flames or the organ is ruined by the weather. If either are to be protected, some one else may pay the bill.

We quite recognize the fact that this winter has been difficult in many ways. The calls from Emergency Aid and Belgium relief sources have touched many hearts and opened many purses, but it would seem that we have been singularly blind to the fact that it is poor economy and strange charity to deprive the church of support that we may contribute to causes which make a stronger appeal to our sentiment and our emotions, and which have the advantage, always great in this restless age, of being something "new."

St. Clement's stands in need of funds—and it is not a rich church.

THE MOTHERS' MEETING.

The Mothers' Meeting had its closing session on May 27th.

The number of garments made during the year amounted to 106, besides a dozen worsted articles and a large quantity of rag balls.

The box has been sent to Mrs. Wetmore for distribution in her work among the mountain people at Arden, North Carolina.

The money for the purchase of materials was contributed almost entirely by the members through the offerings at the weekly meetings.

The enrollment at present is eighty-four.

AMERICAN CHURCH MISSION NEWS LETTER.

HANKOW, April 9, 1915.

Ordination: At Changsha, March 28, Yang T'ien-ts'en, to the diaconate. Rev. S. C. Hwang preached the sermon and Archdeacon Byrde, of the English diocese of Kwangsi, Hunan, read the Epistle. Rev. Mr. Yang will be stationed for the present in Changsha.

Confirmations during March: English Church, Hankow—Women, 4; men, 1; total, 5. Singti—Women, 2; men, 9; total, 11. Losan—Women, 2; men, 2; total, 4. Chuho—Women, 2; men, 4; total, 6.

A meeting was held at Trinity Church, Wuchang, in the interests of Sunday School work in that place. Addresses were made by the Bishop and Mr. Littell, and a general discussion followed. Both the need of such work in China and what it has accomplished in America were fully explained to the large audience of workers who attended. One of the important functions of the Sunday School was stated to be the field it offered for the layman's exercise of his ministry. A committee, of which Father Wood was elected chairman, was appointed to promote the work of Sunday Schools in Wuchang.

Six new men were admitted to the Boone Divinity School (one of these, however, being prevented by illness from continuing in residence). There are seven men in the Senior Class. Six new men have entered the All Saints' Divinity School in Hankow. Of these nineteen divinity students, one belongs to the District of Honolulu, one to Kwangsi, Hunan, two to Anking, and the remaining fifteen to this district.

Quiet Days.—One for Chinese workers of the Wuhan center was conducted by the Bishop in the Cathedral on March 13. One for the foreign staff was led by Father Wood in the Cathedral on March 27.

A mission was preached at St. John's Church (Chinese City) by Father Wood during Holy Week.

Changsha has had another union mission. This one was led by Rev. Ting Li-mei, and of the 1,318 names handed in as enquirers, 150 came to us.

Deaconess Stewart, the new Superintendent of Day Schools for the district, left on April 6 for a series of visits to Changsha, Hsinti, Shasi and Ichang. Miss Stewart sends the following figures for "Wuhan": Day schools—Hankow, girls, 5; boys, 6. Wuchang, girls, 9; boys, 6. Hanyang, girls, 2; boys, 3. Total, 31. Teachers—Hankow, 20; Wuchang, 23; Hanyang, 5; total, 48. Registration (not absolutely exact), about 1,200. These figures are for the first four grades only, no middle or boarding schools included.

MISSIONARY NOTES.

In the mission field in South Dakota are two men who have given forty-five years of service—the Rev. Henry Burt, of the Crow Creek Agency, and the Rev. Luke C. Walker, an Indian priest at Lower Brule Agency. Bishop Biller calls special attention to the long and efficient service of these two men. Forty-five years is a splendid record in any field, but it is specially significant in one so difficult as the Indian work of South Dakota.

A missionary in Japan tells of being invited to address public schools and groups of workers, such as employees of the Government Postoffice. These are signs of the changed attitude toward Christianity which have recently been remarked by many of our missionaries.

Bishop Rowe has been fighting his usual winter battle in interior Alaska. Recent letters tell of "hard mushing, fierce winds, no trails, and overflows on the rivers." In one Indian village he baptized a dying chief; here also he found a slave girl whom he rescued and took to one of our missions. At one place, he says, "We found a young man frozen to death. While the conditions were bad, with a temperature 40 below zero, at last we blew into Fairbanks."

Bishop Hunting, of Nevada, writing on May 3d, says: "Last week I confirmed nine Indians—one woman and eight men. One man rode eighty miles on horseback to be confirmed and two came fourteen miles. In the class were a father and two grown sons, a father and grown son, a husband and wife."

Speaking of the relief work done by our American Church in Paris and its rector, Dr. Watson, Mr. H. H. Herr, Editor of the Indianapolis Times, writes: "Before the things which I saw every criticism I have ever harbored against the Church fell away, and it thrilled me to think that it remained for an American Church, though not of my denomination, to give the American flag a new meaning in France."

There are at present seven men in the senior class of Boone Divinity School, Wuchang, China, and six new men have just been admitted. Six new men have also entered All Saints' Divinity School, Hankow. Of these nineteen divinity students, one belongs to the district of Honolulu, one to the Angelican district of Kwangsi, two to Anking, and the remaining fifteen to the district of Hankow.

The question is sometimes asked whether the natives in our foreign fields really contribute in any adequate way toward the support of Christianity. This is a perfectly reasonable question, since self-support is one of the signs of a vital, coherent national Church. As a partial response it is worth noting that within the past few months Chinese Christians have made the following gifts: (1) $10,000 toward a hall for St. John's College, Shanghai, commemorating the twenty-fifth anniversary of Dr. Pott; (2) $2,000 toward a pledge of $8,500 for the Cathedral School for Girls, Hankow; (3) $8,000 promised for the auditorium of St. Mary's, Shanghai; (4) a residence, erected at a cost of some $4,000, for Dr. MacWillie, Wuchang, as a mark of appreciation for the work done by him as head of the Red Cross during the revolution. Also, $5,000 has been contributed toward the purchase of land for the enlargement of a hospital; (6) $7,000 given outright for the purchase of land for St. Luke's Hospital, Shanghai.

These are very recent instances of Chinese generosity, in addition to which there is a constant increase in giving toward the general support of Christian work.

Contributions of flowers for the altars are requested during the summer.

The contributions for the Summer Outing Fund amount, at the present writing, to $129.78.

The Altar Guild has made a thin red chasuble for use during the summer. It was used for the first time on St. James' Day, Sunday, July 25.

The Boy Scouts, Troop No. 5, spent a very enjoyable week, July 6-13, at the Philadelphia Boy Scouts' Camp, Treasure Island, N. J. Mr. Thacher Souder and Mr. Theodore Casey were with the boys for a part of the time.

The members of the parish are once again reminded of the fact that while congregations are very small in the summer and offerings fall off very considerably, current expenses go on as usual and must be met. Special offerings for current expenses are therefore requested, and may be sent to the Accounting Warden.

THE MISSIONARY APPORTIONMENT.

The amount this parish is asked to give as its share of the total amount needed for the support of the Mission Work of the Church during the fiscal year of the Board of Missions that ends on August 31, is $3,198.65. This is an increase of about $600 over our apportionment of last year, which was fully met. Up to July 21 the total amount of the offerings for missions was $1,911.07, so that we are now almost $1,300 short of our apportionment for the current year. Any members of the parish who may feel like making special contributions towards this object are asked to forward them to the Accounting Warden. Any offerings made for the "Emergency Fund" of the Board of Missions are counted in the parochial apportionment.

EXTRACTS FROM OLD LETTERS ABOUT FATHER BENSON, FOUNDER S.S.J.E.

JUNE 25, 1910.

Father Benson's absence from my letters shows you how little I see of him. Since I have been relieved of caring for the library in which he sits, I sometimes do not see him to speak to once a week. That is a real loss to me. But I love seeing him every day, and knowing from his remarks at recreation that he is like his old self again mentally, even if he grows steadily weaker again physically. That restoration of mental activity was, it seems, the chief object of the operation on his eyes. Physicians said that, for a student of so many years' standing, to go blind would very likely cause softening of the brain. They must have been correct, for, with the partial recovery of his sight, he is mentally himself again. I say "partial," for he resents being told he can see. But he can, for the other day he found the Tonga Islands in a small atlas. I should not know what map to turn to, to say nothing of the specks that indicate them. Also, I often see him reading his Hebrew Bible. Only keen sight can follow Hebrew text. But I fancy he has to read slowly, and that annoys him.

He is able to get out into the garden now, to "bake" in this faint sunshine. I stupidly asked him one day if the sunshine was not better than his fire. He answered, "It doesn't need stirring." So you see he is "all there."

The great joy is that he gets to Mass now every morning, and on Sunday to the High Mass as well. He sings violently, to the complete overthrow of the plainsong, and to my great amusement. This afternoon the Father Superior sent me to say evensong with him. I found Father Congreve there with the same intention. So we three said the office together. Wasn't it blessed to be "chaplain" to them, to read I St. John 1 to them, to be third with two such saints—"When two or three are gathered together in my Name"—with Jesus in our midst? Fortunately I got through the new State prayers without a slip. When I was reading the office with him one day, I thought he was asleep; but I was the sleeper. I prayed for Edward instead of George, and got well sat on!

OF CHRISTMAS DAY.

DECEMBER 29, 1911.

I found excitement and scruples fermenting in the sacristy. Father Benson had announced that he was going to make his Communion again, having made it at midnight. I knew as well as any of the rest of them that the rule of the Church is that one may not communicate more than once a day. But I knew also that Father Benson would have said his three Christmas Masses if his legs would have held him up; and I knew also that St. John of the Cross had in his old age made his Communion eight times in one day in an abandon of love and devotion. So when Howard came into the sacristy with a message from Father Benson to the celebrant that it was quite right to communicate three times on Christmas day, I answered the message, sent to me, by telling Howard that I should communicate the Father a dozen times if he wished me to. Howard went off with a broad grin, and no one made any more remarks.

I was to carry the Blessed Sacrament to Father Benson to where he was sitting, directly in front of the pulpit. But before I could reach him, he had pulled himself along by the chairs and dropped down among the acolytes. He seemed to cuddle among them as if to take their warm young life into his cold dying frame. There he crouched, a heap of black surrounded by our spotless albs. But as I looked into his drawn face, I saw a life such as we knew nothing of, a Life transcending the life and death of this world, the Life of God. "The Body of our Lord Jesus Christ Which was given for thee," coming from my lips, was engulfed in his all-embracing "Amen." I rejoiced to place the Host in his hands, for I knew the Christ Child would be safe in his heart. God grant that I may never lose the inspiration of that Christmas Mass.

After the High Mass I went to him in the library, to wish him a Merry Christmas and to have his blessing. When I said: "Father, it was a great blessing to communicate you at the children's Mass," he broke down completely and said, with tears in his voice: "Oh! it was good to be with the children at the Christ Child's service." Then he gave me a blessing. His hand still rested on my head, so I could not have gotten up if I would; and he, leaning over my head in his lap, began kissing me on the only exposed spot—the back of my neck!

Throughout the festival he has been like that, and so gay with all his love! He hardly ate anything in Advent; and now, at every chance, he comes to the refectory for regular "tuck-outs."

On St. John's Day, when I had helped him from his place to the door of the refectory, as Howard had not arrived with the wheeling-chair, he said to me with a priceless opera-box manner: "It's a great nuisance having to wait for one's carriage." When I got him to his place by the library fire I said: "There you are, Father. That perilous journey is accomplished again." In answer, he squeezed my hand and chuckled, "Oh! the happy Christmastide."—Reprinted from The Messenger, Boston.

MISSIONARY NOTES.

In the Imperial University at Tokyo, a state university of Japan, there are seventeen Christians among the teachers and more than three hundred professing Christians among the students.

There are to-day in China over 500 medical missionaries, almost all British and American, united into an association, which meets, tri-annually, publishes a bi-monthly journal and has a committee in charge of the translating of books and the making of a Chinese medical nomenclature. There are about 230 hospitals owned by the various missions.

St. Matthew's Hospital at Fairbanks, Alaska, has been closed. This is not due to any failure of efficiency in the work or the workers, but the changing conditions in Alaska. Shifting populations have altered the problems and the needs. Bishop Rowe writes: "There will be no loss of prestige in closing the hospital, for the people recognize that it is inevitable. St. Matthew's has done splendid work in the past, and the people are satisfied. To continue it and have to ask for $4,000 more from the Church would, in my opinion, be unwise.

The dining-hall of the New St. Mary's Hall, Shanghai, has been pledged by one individual as a memorial to one long and lovingly interested in the missionary work of the Church. It is to cost $5,500.

A wonderful object lesson in self-help comes from Uganda, where some natives, under a native priest, built their own church, 300 of them walking twenty-four miles to carry back loads on their heads. So anxious are they to help each other that squads of Christians go to other villages to help build, and children support students in training for pupil teachers by making mats and pottery, and growing cotton and coffee.

Professor F. C. Cooper, of St. John's College, Shanghai, died in England on June 4. His loss to our work in China is well-nigh irreparable. For twenty years—the most wonderful twenty in all China's history—he has had a large share in the fine task of raising up leaders for an awakening nation. A friend says of him: "God has a place for every life—a place in this great world of need where one can serve with power and with joy. Many miss it; but Mr. Cooper found it, and as one came in contact with him, one felt that he had found it, and finding it, found the life of blessing."

Efforts in behalf of St. Luke's International Hospital, Tokyo, are producing great results. $150,000 of the $250,000 asked in this country is already in sight, and there is an anonymous pledge of $25,000 as the last gift of the first $200,000 raised in the United States. This great project of our American Church is receiving wide notice and awakening much interest.

The leaders of New China realize the importance of moral education as never before. President Yuan, in an interview with a missionary in 1912, said: "I am not a Christian. I am a Confusianist. But unless the ethics of Christianity shall dominate the scholarship of China, there is no hope for China."

Deaconess Sara Napper, of Salt Lake City, Utah, writing under date of June 4, says: "I am happy to tell you that our special offering of One Day's Income was very good, both in this Mission (St. John's, Salt Lake) and throughout Utah. The people to whom I wrote responded liberally; one sent her offering to us, and the others to their home church, St. Mark's Cathedral. I think the idea specially appealed here, as we are in the midst of the Mormons, whose tithing is rigidly paid as a rule—and our appeal was for a voluntary offering, leaving our wills free."

On June 8, in the sanitarium at Chamberlain, South Dakota, after a short illness, the Rev. H. Burt, priest and missionary, was called to his rest and reward. It is forty-three years since Mr. Burt went from the divinity school directly to the Indian mission field. When Bishop Hare arrived in South Dakota he found him already there, laying the foundations for our splendid Indian work. During all these years he has gone the faithful round of missionary service, taking no vacations, seeking no recognition, only glad and thankful that he might give himself to his Master's cause and to the primitive people to whom he had become father and friend. No better record of missionary service is to be found in the annals of the American Church, and few have been longer.

The Church in China held its Second Synod at Shanghai, May 14-22.

The statistics quoted for the past year are striking, particularly in the showing which they make concerning the efforts of the Chinese people to give of their own service and their substance to the cause of Christ. The number being trained for Church work in institutions rose during the year from 400 to 600, and the gifts of Chinese Christians increased by $10,000, reaching a total of $53,000. At the same time the work of the hospitals, which is in itself a fine test of the Gospel's practical efficiency, has almost doubled, the number of patient's treated, leaping from 250,000 to 454,000.

All these signs are more than hopeful. They testify in the strongest possible way the rare opportunity which is ours in this great nation. They also convince us that the work of the Anglican Communion in China is no small factor in the Christianization of that land.

A NATION-WIDE PREACHING MISSION.

At the last General Convention the following resolution was adopted:

"WHEREAS, Our age calls in no uncertain way for a revival of the prophetic ministry, and a re-emphasis upon the certain and unchanging words of eternal truth that pertain to salvation; and

"WHEREAS, A new accent needs to be placed upon the essential solidarity, as well as the broad catholicity of a Church that witnesses to and seeks to promote faith and order; therefore be it

"Resolved, The House of Bishops concurring, That this Church in General Convention assembled registers its desire and will to undertake a preaching mission of nation-wide proportions, that in its scope shall be inclusive of the Church at large, and whose sole purpose and aim shall be the salvation of men through Him whose Name is above every name."

Since the above action was taken the grave conditions produced throughout the world by the general European war have made it more evident to the Commission that at the earliest possible moment the plan for a nation-wide preaching mission should be put into effect. The psychological time for such a mission is the approaching Advent. The Commission recognizes the difficulty of creating through a central agency such machinery as would accomplish the largest results. It believes, however, that the Bishops, clergy, and laity of the Church in the dioceses throughout the country might, without much difficulty, create local diocesan committees, and, through a widespread system of exchanges, supplemented by such additional noonday and other special Advent preachers as are usually secured for the larger centers, together with the co-operation of all the Bishops, effect simultaneously throughout the Church a preaching mission of incalculable value. If a period covering a portion of the Advent season could be given over to such a nation-wide preaching movement, the unity of such an action would, we believe, result in a deep and far-reaching religious awakening within the Church. Now as never before we need to hear and heed the Master's call to a great service. Now as never before we need to accent the solidarity and unity of our Church. In confidence that the hour for such action is imminent, we beg to commend to the Bishops, clergy, and laity the following course of action, with such modifications or adaptations as in their judgment and that of the local diocesan committees may seem wise:

a—That a nation-wide preaching mission be undertaken for a period of two weeks at the beginning of the approaching Advent season.

b—That the Bishops of the Church be requested to call together (at the earliest possible day) the clergy and laity of their respective dioceses and appoint local committees as follows:
1—Mission Preachers and Stations.
2—Publicity and Advertising.
3—Ways and Means.
4—Mission Literature.

c—That an effort be made through a general exchange of diocesan and extra-diocesan clergy to supply missioners at the strategic points in each diocese.

d—That provision be made for special services in every parish and that the local clergy (where exchanges are impracticable) be requested to conduct daily preaching services.

e—That pre-Advent retreats be conducted for the clergy and laity.

Believing that the urgency of the present situation, together with the supreme importance of placing a "re-emphasis upon the certain and unchanging words of eternal truth that pertain to salvation," demand extraordinary action on the part of the Church at large, and praying God's richest blessing upon your efforts to aid us in effecting these important ends, we beg to remain,

Fraternally yours,

Commission on Nation-Wide Preaching Mission.

In response to this call issued by the Commission on a Nation-Wide Preaching Mission, the Bishop of the diocese called his clergy together to consider how best to undertake this work. The following letter and prayers were sent to all the clergy. The need and importance of such a Mission is easily realized. Its success, as the Bishop writes, "will depend upon the readiness of each one of our clergy to give himself, and to lead his people, to earnest prayer for God's blessing," upon this work.

The Diocese of Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, July 9, 1915.

Reverend and Dear Brother:

The clergy of the diocese were called together on Tuesday, June 22, to consider the recommendation of a Joint Commission of the General Convention in regard to a Nation-Wide Preaching Mission.

Acting on the resolution passed by the clergy at this meeting, I have asked the following to serve on the Committee in general charge of the Preaching Mission in this diocese next Advent:

The Rev. G. G. Bartlett,
The Rev. J. T. Cole,
The Rev. J. B. Halsey,
The Rev. J. B. Harding,
The Rev. C. S. Hutchinson, D.D.,
The Rev. A. J. P. McClure,
The Rev. H. M. Medary,
The Rev. G. L. Richardson,
The Rev. E. L. Sanford,
The Rev. F. M. Taitt,
The Rev. F. W. Tomkins, S.T.D.,
The Rev. H. B. Wright.

This Committee has met and organized with Dr. Tomkins as Chairman, and Mr. McClure as Secretary and Treasurer.

Most of the actual work of preparation will be postponed until the autumn.

A Sub-Committee on Mission Preachers has been appointed composed of the Rev. Messrs. Halsey, Hutchinson, Taitt and Tomkins, and charged with the duty of securing, at the earliest possible moment, the services of such men from outside the diocese as may seem desirable to reinforce the appeal and power of the Mission. The assignment to local churches of these outside preachers will, of course, be made only after consultation with the parish clergy.

Meanwhile I would remind you that the success of this Mission will depend upon the readiness of each one of our clergy to give himself, and to lead his people, to earnest prayer for God's direction and blessing, and to willing co-operation in all necessary preparations, to the end that the opportunity before us may be fully realized and turned to good account for the permanent upbuilding of God's Kingdom.

I enclose a prayer for the Mission, which, at the request of the clergy, I have authorized for use throughout the diocese in connection with the Mission. With the earnest prayer that we may be guided, strengthened and closely knit together by the Holy Spirit in our solemn undertaking,

Faithfully yours,

PHILIP M. RHINELANDER,
Bishop of Pennsylvania.

Prayers

"Preaching Mission" in the Diocese

For the blessing of the work:

O Lord Jesus Christ, the Great Shepherd of the sheep, Who seekest those that are gone astray, bindest up those that are broken, and healest those that are sick; Bless, we beseech Thee, the effort to be made in this Diocese to convert souls unto Thee; open the deaf ears of the wanderers, that they may hear the words which belong unto their salvation; confirm the weak, give more grace to the faithful; and grant that those whom Thou dost raise to newness of life, may persevere unto the end: of Thy mercy, who livest and reignest with the Father and the Holy Spirit, one God, world without end. Amen.

For the preachers and other workers in the Mission:

Almighty and everlasting God, Who dost govern all things in heaven and earth, we commend to Thy fatherly care all whom Thou shalt call to take part in the work of the Preaching Mission in this Diocese. Watch over them, we beseech Thee, for good; defend them from all dangers both of body and soul; grant unto them the spirit of power, of love and of a sound mind, that by their labors Thy name may be glorified and Thy kingdom enlarged: through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

For the spirit of unity:

O Lord Jesus Christ, Who saidst unto Thine Apostles, Peace, I leave with you, My peace, I give unto you: Regard not our sins, but the faith of Thy Church, and grant us that peace and unity which is agreeable to Thy will: Who livest and reignest God for ever and ever. Amen.

MISSIONARY NOTES.

On the Fourth of July an interesting service was held in our Cathedral at Havana. Two large and beautiful flags, one American, the other Cuban, had been given to the Cathedral and were hung there in the nave with appropriate ceremony. The Secretary of Justice represented the President of the Republic in presenting the Cuban flag, while the American Minister presented the Stars and Stripes.

At the recent Convocation of the District of Cuba, the Cuban clergy requested the Treasurer of the District to deduct a day's salary from their next pay checks as a contribution to the Emergency Fund. In the Missionary District of Liberia the Convocation adopted resolutions urging hearty response to the Emergency Appeal, and that the Rectors and Heads of Stations give one day's income and be required to present the appeal to their people.

Word has been received at the Church Missions House of the death on May 21 of Professor Tamura, the Principal of the Girls' High School of the City of Peace, formerly known as St. Agnes' School, Kyoto, in an illness of only twenty-four hours. Bishop Tucker says of him: "He was a faithful worker and a consistent Christian, absolutely honest, and untiring in his efforts to promote the welfare of the school."

Bishop Knight, who has just completed a visitation of our churches in the Canal Zone, says: "During my visitation, I ordained one deacon, consecrated one church, and confirmed 169 persons. We have nine missions now in the Isthmus, most of which are likely to remain as permanencies. We have resident three priests and one deacon. The American work is liable to fluctuate as employees come and go with the army and canal work, but the negro element will probably prove more stable, for those who receive employment are satisfied, and are far better provided for than they are in their native islands."

Among those confirmed by the Bishop were three inmates of the Leper Colony, at Palo Seco, where regular services are maintained.

We have a hospital under construction at Fort Yukon, Alaska. Because of unforeseen conditions arising from the war it seemed impossible to find a means with which to finish it. The doctor in charge called a council of the people, explained the situation to them and asked their help. "They responded nobly," he says, "and as a result gave one hundred and fifty days of labor, not one native refusing. There is no question that we shall complete the hospital this fall." Is not this a fine spirit coming at a time when the natives are practically destitute?

Bishop Hunting, writing from Reno, Nevada, says: "I returned yesterday from the Indian Reservation at Pyramid Lake, where I had three baptisms and three confirmations. One of those confirmed was Rosie Wadsworth, aged 72; she makes three generations of her family to be confirmed. I confirmed her son and two grandsons a few weeks ago. It was a sight worth seeing when she stepped up from her place to the front, with firm steps and a shake of her head, that said, as plainly as words, 'I believe and here I stand.' We certainly need a man here at once. It is a tremendous opportunity."

The Bishop of Iowa writes: "I, for one, hope we will spare no effort to raise the whole Emergency Fund and to clear the Board of its indebtedness by August 31. I do not believe that the Church should let up on this matter until every dollar of obligation to the end of the current year is provided for. I confess I am more aroused than I have ever been, and intend henceforth to try and have every parish and mission of this diocese pay its apportionment. If the effort to raise the Emergency Fund has had as good an effect on other people as it has had on me it has been worth while."

A prominent Japanese, speaking at a luncheon given to Admiral Uriu, who is on his way to represent Japan at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, referred to St. Luke's Hospital, Tokyo, and said that although his countrymen were always glad to receive and listen to peace-speakers from America, they were much more interested in practical demonstration, and to his mind this plan for an International Hospital with a foreign and Japanese staff presented one of the best methods of drawing together the peoples of the two nations, and that as an example of practical Christianity it was just what the Japanese believe in.

One of our workers in Mexico writes: "We are to-day spiritually responsible for congregations whose members do not and never have wanted sectarianism, and yet are hopelessly estranged from Roman Christianity as one sees it here.

Is it not passing strange that we, who pray so fervently for the entrance of the Church to other lands, cannot give of ourselves more generously where we are asked to come?"

Many friends of the Rev. John W. Chapman, of Anvik, Alaska, will be gratified to hear that at its June Commencement, his old college at Middlebury, Vermont, honored itself by conferring upon him the degree of Doctor of Divinity. It is too frequently the case that patient, constructive work, such as Mr. Chapman has done in Anvik, remote from the world's notice and without self-advertising, receives no reward beyond that which comes from the satisfaction of well-doing. We rejoice, therefore, that having given nearly thirty years of his life to Christianize and civilize a degraded and forsaken people he should be known and recognized.

THE INFLUENCE OF A HYMN.

One of our Indian priests in writing concerning his own conversion to Christianity says:

"One day—it must have been Sunday—I was following a path which led past the little church. Out of the open window I heard the sound of voices. The tune they sang was pleasant to hear. I wanted to hear it again, to learn it if possible. So I went to the church on three successive Sundays but that tune was not sung. On the fourth Sunday, however, I was happy to hear the hymn that I had longed for. I stood next to a man who sang out of a book. From him I caught the words of the first verse and learned them by heart. When I left that church, able to carry the tune and sing the first verse of the Dakota translation of 'Guide Me, O Thou Great Jehovah,' I felt that I was possessor of a great treasure. From that day on I attended the services with regularity, hoping to learn other things as beautiful as that hymn."

During August the east wall of the Church interior above the chancel arch was tinted to correspond with the new stonework. The result is very pleasing and brings the choir and organ into proper relation with the sanctuary. GEORGE HENRY LEA.

On the afternoon of Friday, the twenty-fourth of September, George Henry Lea entered into Life Eternal. Very early in the morning, he received Holy Unction, and the Blessed Sacrament of our Lord's Body and Blood, and awaited his Master's summons with quiet courage and unclouded faith.

Mr. Lea had twice held office as vestryman of St. Clement's Church, his last period of service terminated by his death, extending over a period of more than fifteen years. Quiet and unassuming in his religious life, he had a real devotion to the Catholic Faith, and gave himself freely and willingly to the interests of the parish which he sincerely loved.

Grant unto him, O Lord, eternal rest, and let light perpetual shine upon him.

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY.

The annual meeting of St. Clement's Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary will be held on Friday, October 15, at 3 P. M. There will be a short service in St. John's Chapel, with an address by the rector, followed by the business meeting in the Parish Hall.

A full attendance is desired.

A VISIT TO S. MARY'S-ON-THE-MOUNTAIN

It was a beautiful day in the early Autumn that we made our visit to S. Mary's-on-the Mountain. The mountain train stopped at the little station of S. Mary's and in a few minutes we found ourselves climbing the steep path up the mountain side that leads to the top of the bluff. Here we found three little girls awaiting us. They gave their names: Annie, Alice and Mable. They said the Sisters had sent them to meet us, and Annie asked if we would rather go by the path that led over the stile or by the path that led to the Great Gate. We chose the latter, and after a little walk through a dense green woods we came in sight of the beautiful iron gate, the main entrance to the grounds of S. Mary's.

"We shall not have to open the gate for you," said Mabel, "for there are Laura and Florence Adelia opening it for us. Do you see them?" Yes we saw them,—two bright, pretty little girls, but no brighter, no prettier than the other three who now guided us under the arch of the gateway and along the road that led to the Convent. Surrounded by the five children we walked slowly, listening to their free, merry chatter. "Did we know the Sisters?" "Did we like persimmons?" "Did we have any foxes where we lived, and did they catch the chickens o'nights?" "And did we not feel sorry for Albert, King of the Belgians?" They talked very intelligently of the war in Europe and with deep feelings of sympathy, these little children of the mountains.

In a very few minutes we were at the Convent. A Sister met us at the door and showed us over some parts of the House. First, we rested for a short while in the pretty little parlor. From the large window here we got lovely peeps of the mountain scenery which an hour later we were to enjoy more fully.

The Convent Chapel is plain and without ornamentation. The altar is large, and of beautiful design, and in the soft golden light that flooded the place the atmosphere gave a true sense of holiness and calm. The daily Eucharist is celebrated in this chapel and the offices of the seven hours are said here by the Sisters. In the Sacristy the Sister showed us the gold chalice and paten from which the four Sisters who laid down their lives in the yellow fever epidemic in Memphis in 1878 had received the Blessed Sacrament when dying, and she showed us also the ciborium in which the Sacrament had been reserved on the altar of the Cathedral at Memphis through three epidemics. This communion service has been in daily use for forty years. It is made of gold given by many friends—a coin from one, a little piece from another, a baby's necklace, a mother's wedding ring,—all precious things, too dear to be parted with but for the holy service of the King of kings.

There is also in the Convent an oratory for silent prayer where the Sisters offer to God the devotion of their hearts and intercession for the rich and the poor, the sick and the sorrowing, the tempted and fallen, for all sorts and conditions of men and for the Church and the Nation.

We passed out of the Chapel into the arched cloister, a lovely place that reminded one of Italy.

The library at the Convent is a very pleasing room, finished in dark oak with windows on three sides. The books, nearly a thousand volumes, were given by Miss Frances Allen, and the beautiful room was the gift of Miss Allen's mother.

Leaving the Convent we went immediately into the Crafts House. The Convent was built in 1909 and this additional building was put up three years later and is a memorial of Esther, one of S. Mary's girls. It is a large room, well lighted by four triple windows, with a big fireplace having andirons piled with logs of wood; a pleasant room in winter and in summer. The happy activity here showed the blessing this house is to the work. The centre of the large room was full of little children from the school taking their lessons in needlework,—a circle of happy little maids in blue frocks and white aprons, all intent on learning to sew or knit. In another part of the room is the steel loom, and here one of the older girls was weaving a pretty green and white cotton floor rug, while three little girls were filling shuttles for her. At the other extreme end of the room two Sisters were making reed baskets, and piled up on a large table were baskets of various kinds and shapes. The Sister showed us a number of beautiful finished articles—woven rugs and silk mats, baskets and pieces of lace, embroidery and other needlework. From the north porch of the Crafts House, amongst the trees we could see the mission rooms and the poor people coming and leaving in their little wagons or walking in groups. There was an old man on a donkey with a little boy and a sack of potatoes behind him. And another very old man and all his family in a dilapidated old buggy drawn by an old white horse. The mission rooms were usually open, the Sister said, from eight in the morning till noon only, but this had been a special day; there had been a "gift party," and the people had been long in getting away. They had come from long distances, some from beyond Elk River.

On the west side of the Convent is a straight path which leads directly to the bluff or edge of the mountain. Here we stood for a long while looking out over the valley to the mountains beyond, watching the soft white clouds rise up and float away to the north. There is a most beautiful view from these high rocks of S. Mary's.

Following another path we wandered down into a wooded ravine, and coming up on the other side we were approaching the Sisters beautiful cemetery. This is surrounded by a stone wall of strong masonry and entered by a lych-gate. At the head of the long path and opposite the gate the Calvary stands. It is very beautiful.

The grave of one Sister is in this quiet, holy resting place.

* * * * * * *

The school—S. Mary's-on-the-Mountain! How often we had heard of it! how much we had read of it! And now as we approached the building a great bell was ringing and seemed to be calling out a welcome to us. It was the chapel bell ringing for evensong. The school classes were being dismissed and a long row of girls was forming in line and marching into the Chapel, all the little ones whom we had seen in the Crafts Room having now joined their older sisters.

The bell ceased ringing and the evening hymn began:—

"Now the day is over,
Night is drawing nigh;
Shadows of the evening
Steal across the sky;"—

a flood of melody, one clear, bird-like voice high above the rest carrying the tenor.

We followed the children into the lovely Chapel and with them worshipped their "Redeemer, King."

After evensong we went through the school building,—through parlors, refectories, classrooms, dormitories, kitchen, laundry and work room, all spotlessly clean and orderly. On the walls hang many beautiful pictures, the gifts of loving friends: indeed, everything here is a gift—ornaments, furniture, rooms, the very house itself, the Chapel, even the roses that twine over the porches and the flowering shrubs that bloom on the lawn, are the gifts of absent friends. It gives one's heart a thrill of happiness to be in a place so full of the expression of love; where are tokens of the kindness of thousands of hearts and where thousands of God's poor have been blessed and cheered.

S. Mary's-on-the-Mountain!—a Home of charity and a House of Prayer!

EXPERIENCES OF A DISTRICT NURSE IN AFRICA.

Three years ago a young American woman, Miss Sarah E. Conway, went to Cape Mount, Liberia, to help in the Church's mission there. On a recent visit to this country Miss Conway was asked to tell a few of her experiences. "I have treated between six and eight thousand sufferers each year," she said. "As soon as breakfast is over the procession of human aches and pains begins, and sometimes when the last school bell rings at 9 in the evening, I am still at work upon these horrible tropical sores which inflict black humanity. While sores are the commonest affliction, there are many others; ulcers in plenty, infections of different kinds, while naturally the heat, dust and the other conditions of life in tropical Africa, produce troubles of the ear, throat and eyes. Besides these chronic difficulties there are, of course, broken bones and accidents of all sorts. Every patient who is able to walk comes to the Mission to be treated. Among them are many lepers.

"The clinic at the Mission is only a part of the problem. Much visiting in the wretched little places which they call homes is necessary. Fevers, pneumonia and rheumatism cannot walk or be brought to me; elephantiasis, of which there is a great deal, of course incapacitates the patient. To those afflicted with these diseases I make perhaps six or seven hundred visits a year. Then, too, there are dreadful accidents to which one must hasten with all speed. Many men have been horribly bitten by baboons. These animals seem to attack human beings more fiercely than do any other of the wild dwellers in the jungle. At any hour of day or night I am likely to be called for emergency work."

To those who know Miss Conway's slight, almost frail physique, this record seems little short of marvelous.

MISSIONARY NOTES.

The Rt. Rev. Samuel David Ferguson celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination to the ministry and thirtieth anniversary of his consecration to the Episcopate of Liberia, on June 22. Three separate services were held in Monrovia. At the last service in the evening there was read the sermon which was preached thirty years before by Bishop Alfred Lee, of Delaware, then the Presiding Bishop, and consecrator of Bishop Ferguson. The offerings of the day were for the establishment of a fund to erect a memorial building at St. Thomas' Parish, Monrovia, to be known as the Bishop Ferguson Memorial.

No communication from Bishop Aves, of Mexico, had been received for several months, until recently a letter which the Bishop had entrusted to a miner, who was attempting to get out of the country on horseback, arrived at the Church Missions House, New York. The Bishop was not permitted to say anything concerning the political situation or local conditions, but those who are interested in the work in Mexico will be glad to know that the services in Guadalajara continue with fairly good attendance. St. Andrew's school is doing splendid work and will soon be able to maintain forty boys. The Bishop says he is as thoroughly cut off from the outside world as though he were in the moon, but he is still "hoping, trusting and trying."

The response to the Board of Missions' appeal for an Emergency Fund to replace its accumulated deficit, has been most encouraging. During one week the gifts received at the Missions House ranged from $25,000 to 10 cents—the latter amount coming from a schoolboy; the former from two friends of Bishop Tuttle. One of the most encouraging facts is that this response is in no way interfering with the paying of the apportionment.

The question has been asked whether gifts received for the fund after September first will be credited. The Emergency Committee's answer is that an amount, not a date, is the goal, and that all offerings will be most acceptable. The campaign will continue until the full $400,000 is raised; it remains to be seen whether the Treasurer's Emergency Fund account will have to be kept open after the close of the fiscal year. Up to August 23, $332,000 had been received, leaving a balance of $68,000 still to be raised.

Have you sent your One Day's Income?

A remarkable instance of the changes which a short quarter of a century may bring forth is shown in the recent investiture of a Christian King of Uganda. Daudi Chwa is the son of King Mwanga, who put Bishop Hannington to death. The realm over which he will reign is an astounding contrast to that which his father inherited. It would seem that here in Central Africa is being developed a strong type of indigenous African Christianity.

Many Sunday-school teachers and leaders of Junior Auxiliaries and study classes throughout the country have found the lesson series, called "Lives That Have Helped," which apeared in The Spirit of Missions from October, 1914, to September, 1915, of great interest and help. In October, 1915, a new series of twelve articles which may be made the basis of study will begin, under the title "How Our Church Came to Our Country." As its name indicates, this course will deal entirely with the domestic field. Further information may be had from the editor, The Spirit of Missions, 281 Fourth Avenue, New York.

The Rev. Dr. Tidball, Professor Emeritus of Church History at the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., commenting upon a recent visit of Bishop Knight to the lepers of Palo Seco, Canal Zone, says that he thinks this is the first recorded visit of a bishop to lepers, and probably the only case in the history of the Church where lepers have been confirmed.

THE EMERGENCY HAS BEEN MET.

On the 21st of September, the treasurer of the Board of Missions was able to declare the final balance for the year ending the first of the month. On that date, $371,000 had been received of the $400,000 asked for the Emergency Fund. But the balance showed that the real emergency had already been met, even though the fund had not yet been completed, for the gifts on the regular apportionment were $20,000 in excess of last year; so that as a matter of fact practically $400,000 over and above the previous year's record had come into the treasury, which is now out of debt for the first time in eight years.

What a splendid cause for thanksgiving to God, and for confidence that His Church will carry on the work He has committed to her!

Anchorage is Alaska's youngest town. It has sprung up suddenly on the coast, near Seward, as the southern terminus selected by the Government railway which is to pierce the interior. Already it is a place of 3,000 people, and, with his usual energy, Bishop Rowe has a man on the grounl who has secured lots for a church and proposes to erect a simple building which will serve as reading room six days in the week and church on Sunday. The Government railway plan guarantees the importance and insures the permanence of this new mission post.

Bruton Parish Church, Williamsburg, was the successor of the Jamestown Church as the Court Church of Colonial Virginia, the inheritor of the Jamestown traditions, and is still possessed of the old Jamestown communion silver. On the third Sunday after Trinity this year the rector of Bruton took the old silver to Jamestown Island, and there in the open held a memorial service with rustic rail and crude bar nailed between two trees. The island is almost as devoid of inhabitants today as when the first settlers made their venture of faith, a planting which under God's blessing has taken root and filled the land. The offering was for work among the Indians.

Among the enterprises carried on in connection with our mission at Zamboanga, Philippine Islands, is the Zulu Press, operated by Moro boys. They print a monthly four-page sheet 9 by 13 inches, which is the first newspaper ever published in the Moro language.

One of our missionary bishops who has gone the round of many of our summer resorts, in commenting upon his experience, says:

"I could not help thinking, as I saw the wealth about me in costly hotels and mansions, that, after all, the thankfulness evinced in contributions to the missionary work was paltry in proportion to the reasons for thankfulness.

"One room less in one-half of those country houses, one day less in those expensive hotels, one seat or cylinder less in those motor-cars or vessels—if the cost were given to missions—would have raised the Emergency Fund twice over, if each of the vacation folks had made that offering."

"DIRT—NOT FATE!"

In connection with our mission hospitals in China a campaign of education and hygiene goes on. Leaflets and placards are issued concerning health and sanitation. A series of twenty charts has been made illustrating the fate of a clean family and the fate of a dirty family. These scrolls have been painted by a Chinese artist and are in true Chinese style. The artist loosed his imagination upon rats and mosquitoes and flies—all the carriers of disease. These charts have been used in a series of lectures upon hygiene to the school children, the women of the congregation, the hospital staff of nurses, amahs and coolies, and the patients. The gist of the matter is to teach them that "Dirt, Not Fate, Brings Disease."

The Board of Regents of the University of South Dakota recently conferred the degree of Doctor of Letters upon Miss Helen Peabody, head of All Saints' School, Sioux Falls. For thirty years she and her sister have been helping to make history by building character in the lives of the church girls of South Dakota—a service which is now graciously recognized by the highest educational institution of that State. Born and bred in missionary surroundings, educated in a missionary school, and giving her life continuously to missionary work, in the honor accorded Dr. Peabody the whole missionary enterprise is distinguished and dignified.

A missionary, on the eve of going to China, explains his purpose in the following language. "The Standard Oil Company has adopted the slogan, 'Standard Oil tin in every village in the Orient'; the American Tobacco Company is using the motto, 'A cigarette in the mouth of every person in China'; so I, as a unit of the Church of Jesus Christ, have taken the watchword, 'Christianity and its teachings in every hamlet within the boundaries of the Chinese Republic.'"

Bishop Aves, of Mexico, writing from Guadalajara on July 20, reports conditions most serious. Already there is much privation, and he fears an outright famine next winter. He says: "The population of this city, which is normally 125,000, is now (exclusive of the army) about 200,000. The increase is due largely to the influx of land owners whose properties have been devastated, and who have come here for personal safety. If this district, which is called 'the granary of Mexico,' is a criterion for the remainder of the Republic, there will be a general famine before the middle of next winter. Another cource of suffering, which is now rapidly appearing, is a lack of clothing, the cost of which is now from 600 to 1,000 per cent. higher than it was a year ago, and the prices are increasing with the growing scarcity. The native supply of cotton (with which the poor are clothed) is exhausted, and the mills are closed (cotton thread is now from $1.80 to $2.50 a spool) and there are no importations. Before the cold weather comes again the suffering from this source will be extreme."

The Bishop of Kansas tells of a mission which was utterly changed by the good act of one man. For years there had been little progress. An elderly and influential business man who had attended the services for twenty years had never been baptized or confirmed. One day he called together some of his friends, including several young men, and told them that he had made a great mistake. "I wanted," he said, "to know everything in and about the Bible, and I could not. I wanted every Christian to show Christianity in their daily life before I took such a step; but I have come to the conclusion that I have made an egregious blunder. I have been something of a hypocrite in my own Christian stand. Jesus Christ, I have learned, asks us simply to come to Him for help; I am going, boys, and I want you to come with me." The result of his missionary work was that twelve heads of families came for confirmation. This was not all, for he gave the missionary spirit to the whole class, so that after a few months a still larger class was confirmed.

Tuesday, November 30th, St. Andrew, Apostle. Masses at 7, 7.30 and 9.30. (For the associations of the parish.)

ST. CLEMENT, MARTYR AND BISHOP.

Collect:—O God, who makest us to rejoice in the yearly solemnity of blessed Clement, thy martyr and bishop, favorably grant that we who keep his festival may likewise imitate his fortitude in suffering, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Epistle: Phil. iii: 17—iv: 4.

The Holy Gospel: St. Matthew, xxiv: 42-48.

NOVENA—NOVEMBER 14-23.

Memorial for the parish (to be said daily):

Ant.—I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground; I will pour my Spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thine offspring.

V.—O Lord, look down from heaven.

R.—Behold, and visit this vine.

Let us pray:

Almighty and everlasting God, who dost govern all things in heaven and earth, mercifully hear our supplications, and grant unto this parish all things that are needful for its spiritual welfare; schools in which to train the young in Thy faith and fear; ministers to labor in this portion of Thy vineyard; a church restored to the beauty of holiness. Strengthen and confirm the faithful; visit and relieve the sick; turn and soften the wicked; rouse the careless; recover the fallen; restore the penitent; remove all hindrances to the advancement of Thy truth; bring all to be of one heart and one mind within the fold of Thy Holy Church; to the honor and glory of Thy Holy Name: through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

THE ST. CLEMENT'S DAY OFFERTORY.

At the October meeting of the Vestry the financial condition of the parish was very carefully considered in view of certain facts given in the report of the Accounting Warden for the six months ending September 24th.

It will be remembered that last winter considerable work in the way of repairs and improvements was found to be necessary, chief among such work being the fireproofing of the ceiling of the church cellar and the walling up of the window back of the new organ to properly protect it.

All told, the sum of $1,440.90 was necessarily expended from the Current Income of the parish for this work, as very little in the way of special offerings came in, though an urgent appeal was made.

Almost $800 was also expended in the placing of additional insurance on the church building and new organ, due to the recently completed improvements.

It became necessary to borrow $2,000 to meet these expenses, and this loan must now be paid off. Finally, there is due the special account for a transfer made in the summer of 1914 to meet current expenses, the sum of $732.98.

The Vestry has therefore authorized and directed that an appeal be made to the congregation for an offering of $3,000 to pay off this floating indebtedness of the parish. If each member of the parish makes his or her offering as generous as possible this sum can be raised.

IN MEMORIAM.

On the 24th day of September, 1915,

GEORGE HENRY LEA

Entered into Life Eternal.

Serving as a member of the Vestry of St. Clement's Church from the year 1900 until his death, save for a brief period when he was absent from the city, Mr. Lea rendered most valuable service to the church.

His religion was a vital force which he carried into his daily life, and he was deeply interested in all that concerned the welfare and development of the parish, and loyal and devoted to the principles for which it stands.

Regular in his attendance at the meetings of the Vestry, he brought to that body an extensive business knowledge and sound common sense that rendered him an invaluable member of the various committees upon which he served.

The Rector, Church Wardens and Vestrymen desire to record permanently their appreciation of his character, and their deep sense of loss at his decease.

May he rest in peace.

CHARLES S. HUTCHINSON, Rector;

THE PREACHING MISSION.

Some information may not be amiss at this time concerning the Preaching Mission to be held in this diocese during the first two weeks in Advent. The committee is completing arrangements for the services, and a detailed account of what is to be done will appear in the December magazine.

The diocese has been divided into groups, each group determining the best method to pursue within its boundaries. St. Clement's has been placed with St. Mark's, Holy Trinity, St. James', Christ Church Chapel, and St. Sauveur. The Rectors of these parishes met recently and determined to make Holy Trinity Church the center for the evening services. The congregations of the various parishes will be urged to attend the mission and to bring others within range of its influence. It will be noted that the mission is diocesan in character and not parochial.

In addition to the evening service there will be special instructions and services for intercession in the parish churches every weekday. A leaflet will be printed for distribution, giving the character and hour for these special meetings.

The Rector would urge St. Clement's people to do all in their power, both by prayer and example, to make this mission a power for good in the community.

The name of the mission preacher will be announced later.

RELIGION AT THE FRONT.

A member of the parish has recently received an interesting letter from an officer in charge of a company of young Frenchmen, all of them between 19 and 20 years of age, and placed on one of the most exposed positions on the western front. The letter, written September 14, evidently describes the activities of the soldiers in preparation for the recent successful offensive movement of the Allies. In guarded terms the writer refers to "important events which you will soon hear of" and speaks of the impatience of the young soldiers for some definite action and the eagerness with which they are all fitting themselves for the offensive attack now in progress. The following extract from the letter will certainly be of great interest to this parish:

"Our preparations are nearly completed. Yesterday a scene was enacted in the trenches the pathos of which is almost beyond description. You probably know that a chaplain has been assigned to every regiment. Our priest is a missionary from China, and every day we see him making his rounds among us who are in the trenches, braving shell and shrapnel. Yesterday, for he knew what was soon to take place, he came into our trench to give to Christian souls the comfort, the peace before entering eternity, by the administration of the Holy Communion. In a small covered portion of the trench the priest quietly confesses the soldier who with bent head and gun in hand always ready, calls upon the name of God to help him in his hour of danger. This is the most heart-rending scene imaginable. Then, one knee on the ground, the priest takes from a tiny pyx the Blessed Sacrament and the soldier communes with his God before throwing himself into the assault. Mid cannon and bomb his courage is firm, and with peace in his soul he offers his life to his country and in eternity joins the ranks of the blessed cohort of our heroes. When we are resting, the priest says Mass in the woods or fields, wherever we are, and he gives absolution to all those souls who have confessed to themselves their sins; and so, we are doing as you do in your church."

This last sentence is of particular interest to the churchman who follows with anxiety the ebb and flow in our relations with the rest of the Church Catholic. Times such as these only show too clearly how much after all we have in common with the rest of the Apostolic Church. May our prayers follow the young officer who wrote this letter, that he may be protected from all danger, and may we remember, too, those noble priests of France, once disowned and despised, that they may soon obtain the true and rightful recognition of their services.—New Haven Christ Church Chronicle.

ST. CLEMENT'S TIDE.

There were good congregations both at the solemn Evensong on the eve of the Festival, and at the Solemn Mass on St. Clement's Day itself. Not quite as many communions were made as last year. This decrease is offset somewhat by the fact that during the year there were nearly three hundred communions more than during the previous year.

The record of communions shows a rather interesting fluctuation, but no apparent reason to account for such a fluctuation.

In the year 1910-1911 (beginning at St. Clement's Day), 6,867 communions were made, in 1911-1912 there were 6,242; in 1912-1913 there were 6,433; in 1913-1914 there were 6,086. Last year 6,371 communions were made. This makes an average of nearly eight communions a year for each communicant. This is a very good average. As a matter of fact, not every communicant makes his or her communion with such frequency. Would that it were so! There are too many who make their communions but once a year, and if it were not for the more faithful, the average would not be so high.

The choir sang very well both at the Solemn Evensong and at the late Mass. The Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis were by Sears, the Te Deum by Jordan, and the Mass was Gounod's "Mass of the Sacred Heart."

THE BISHOP'S VISITATION.

The bishop of the diocese will visit the parish to administer the sacrament of confirmation on Sunday evening, January 30th. Those who are desirous of being confirmed should give their names to the clergy. The clergy would also appreciate very much having the names of those who are not confirmed who may be known to members of the Parish

THE MISSIONARY OFFERING.

After due consideration it has seemed best to continue our missionary offerings through the accustomed channel. Whatever may be the vagaries of a "Board of Missions, incorporated under the laws of the State of New York," our duty is manifestly to the Church and her missionaries. The stipends of the men, who have trusted us enough to give themselves to a life in the mission field, relying upon our support, must not be discontinued. To punish those priests by withholding their incomes, is to make the innocent suffer for the guilty. Deeply as we regret the partisan and unfair action of the "Board of Missions, incorporated under the laws of the State of New York," we cannot let our representatives in the mission field bear the consequences.

There is a perfectly proper and legitimate way of dealing with the Board of Missions. It exists by the will of the General Convention, and it is to the General Convention that we must appeal for the redress of grievances and the righting of wrongs.

By participating in the Panama Conference the Board of Missions acted in flat disobedience to the expressed will of the General Convention. According to the public utterance of one of its numbers, this action is to be justified, because, forsooth, the "Board of Missions" is "incorporated under the laws of the State of New York," and therefore exists as an independent body and can do as it pleases. This is an interesting legal quibble which appeals to a certain type of legal mind, but like many other legal quibbles bears little relation to the moral law. We have in New York State, apparently, a purely local corporation, which has assumed the perogatives of a little "vatican" and would dictate the policy of the Church according to its own will and pleasure. We send our offerings to a Board of Missions created by General Convention to represent the whole Church in all missionary work. The contributions are to be dispensed apparently by a partisan organization, "incorporated under the laws of the State of New York." One can readily understand the gravity of such a situation.

It is our duty, as loyal churchmen, to see to it that such steps as may be necessary shall be taken at the next General Convention, to instruct the Board of Missions as to its responsibility to the whole Church.

GIRLS' CLUB.

The Girls' Club has resumed its meetings for the year. At the October meeting the following were elected:

President, Miss Dorothea Wilde; Vice-President, Miss Rae Hausam; Secretary, Miss Helen Garber; and Treasurer, Miss Elsie Forrester.

On the third Tuesday of each month there will be a lecture, the last one being a talk by Mr. Waldo on "A Trip Through the War Zone."

A distinct plan was decided upon for the year, the meetings to be spent as follows: First Tuesday evening of the month, business; second, gymnasium; third, lectures; and fourth, social. Members of the congregation are cordially invited to the lectures.

THE MISSIONARY APPORTIONMENT.

For the fiscal year of the Board of Missions that ended on September 1, the apportionment of St. Clement's was $3,198.65.

The report of the treasurer of the Board, recently received, shows that the total amount received from the parish was $3,012.80, made up as follows:

From the Parish	$2,912.89
From the Sunday School	64.91
From the Woman's Auxiliary	35.00
	$3,012.80

These figures show that the parish fell short of meeting its apportionment by $185.85; but the apportionment for the year just ended was over $600 more than in the year ending September 1, 1914.

Of the total amount given this year, the sum of $902 was for the emergency fund.

THE POOR FUND.

Up to December 1 less than $70 has been received for the Poor Fund. The amount needed is far in excess of this. During the last two years over $270 was contributed each year respectively. By the greatest economy and care this amount has just sufficed. Only the persons in greatest need could be helped. Many had to be refused. Money is needed now to carry on this part of the Parish work.

THE NATIVITY.

The thatch on the roof was as golden,
  Though dusty the straw was and old,
The wind had a peal as of trumpets,
  Though blowing and barren and cold,
The mother's hair was a glory
  Though loosened and torn,
For under the eaves in the gloaming
  A child was born.

Have a myriad children been quickened,
  Have a myriad children grown old,
Grown gross and unloved and embittered,
  Grown cunning and savage and cold?
God abides in a terrible patience,
  Unangered, unworn,
And again for the child that was squandered
  A child is born.

What know we of aeons behind us,
  Dim dynasties lost long ago,
Huge empires, like dreams unremembered,
  Huge cities for ages laid low?
This at least—that with blight and with blessing,
  With flower and with thorn,
Love was there, and his cry was among them,
  "A child is born."

Though the darkness be noisy with systems,
  Dark fancies that fret and disprove,
Still the plumes stir around us, above us
  The wings of the shadow of love:
Oh! princes and priests, have ye seen it
Grow pale through your scorn?
Huge dawns sleep before us, deep changes,
  A child is born.

And the rafters of toil still are guilded
  With the dawn of the star of the heart,
And the wise men draw near in the twilight,
  Who are weary of learning and art,
And the face of the tyrant is darkened,
  His spirit is torn.
For a new King is enthroned; yea, the sternest,
  A child is born.

And the mother still joys for the whispered
  First stir of unspeakable things,
Still feels that high moment unfurling
  Red glory of Gabriel's wings.
Still the babe of an hour is a Master
  Whom angels adorn,
Emanuel, prophet, anointed,
  A child is born.

And thou, that art still in thy cradle,
  The sun being crown for thy brow,
Make answer, our flesh, make an answer,
  Say, whence art thou come—who art thou?
Art thou come back on earth for our teaching
  To train or to warn?—
Hush—how may we know?—knowing only
  A child is born.

G. K. CHESTERTON.

LETTER FROM MISS ELSIE DEXTER.

Wuchang, China, September 30th, 1915.

You know by the heading that yesterday was Michaelmas, and what a day it was for the Christians here in Wuchang! The beautiful gothic stone Church of St. Michael and All Angels was consecrated. It is the gift of a Boston church-woman, whose heart must be happy to know how much she has done to make the dear Lord known to the Chinese.

Monday evening Sister Edith and Sister Helen came to stay with me for three days, before returning to Auking for the winter. They were so anxious to see the church and be here for Michaelmas. They did a great many things for Father Wood, and at last cleaned the sanctuary and arranged the flowers on the High Altar.

The church stands on one of the principal city streets, and rears a fine stone cross high above all other buildings. Below the cross, in a niche, is a beautiful life-size figure of our Lord, with His Hands spread out in blessing over the city below. Above His Head is a crown. Inside the church, all the wood carvings were done by the Chinese, and they have done wonderfully well. The choir screen is as delicate as lace, and the rood with the figures is really beautiful. In the panels on the ends of the High Altar are four carvings, representing the evangelists, and at the front, in the centre, is the Lamb of God, with panels of adoring angels on either side. Above the retable and magnificent candlesticks are two figures. On the left is St. Michael, with his sword drawn and his foot on the dragon—most appropriate for China! And on the right stands a lovely guardian angel blessing a little Chinese child. Don't you long to see it?

In the apse, behind the High Altar, is the chapel of the Blessed Sacrament. There, on a beautiful blue wall with "M R" in gold and golden fleur-de-lys, are three more figures—one of our Lord and the Blessed Virgin and the third of the Angel Gabriel, I think.

It was a picture long to be remembered when, at the close of the service, our dear bishop went to the centre of the altar, and there, in a gorgeous red and gold cope, holding his pastoral staff of gold and brown in one hand, blesses that great congregation of Christians,—there must have been about four hundred present. With the exception of about fifty, all were Chinese.

The service began with solemn procession, preceded by crucifer and thurifer; then came clergy and choir, and then the bishop. Boys from the trade school at Ichang acted as acolytes, and Father Wood celebrated after the service of consecration. He had Archdeacon Hu and Mr. Hayward as deacon and sub-deacon.

The associates out here gave the red vestments made at the Bible School at Hankow. They were wondrous! Dear Miss Wood sat with me. She was almost as happy as her brother.

After the service, Miss Byerly had invited all to her house for tiffin. It was a happy day. I had four of my nurses with me, and how they did love eating the ice cream! Every evening for a week there is mission preaching at seven. I took ten nurses last night, and the church was packed to the doors. The dear bishop told them of the Church which was brought to them, and how now they must cherish its life and let it be their strength. I shared my hymnal with four soldiers, each anxious to read every bit of the service. There is every possibility for the full Catholic ritual to be used, and also all the means of grace are provided for, from a handsome font and confessional to the beautiful chapel for perpetual reservation of the blessed sacrament. The day was bright and warm, like September at home. We all remembered the sisters of St. Anne, and prayed for their appointment. We had mass at seven in the hospital chapel.—Reprinted from the Messenger, Boston.

The fiscal year, by a new by law, ends March 25th, so that the usual Easter offering will not be included in the report. We are gratified to say that the report is very encouraging. There is no floating debt, and a small balance on hand so that we will start the new year with encouraging prospects.

Low Sunday, we regret to say, is Mr. Baker's last day with us as Choir Master and Organist. We had hoped that his stay amongst us might have been longer. There can be but one opinion of his valuable work with the Choir while in charge of it, and his great talent as an organist is beyond praise. We shall wish him Godspeed wherever his lot may be cast in the future.

Mr. James Benton Tipton, the new organist and choir master, is a native of England, and came to this country about six years ago. While in England he received a thorough musical training under Dr. Stainer, the well-known composer of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, and Dr. Parrot, the great master of Gregorians, of the Chapel Royal, Windsor. Subsequently, Mr. Tipton served as organist at St. Barnabas, Oxford, and St. Augustine, Kilburn. After filling an engagement at Denver, Mr. Tipton came to the Epiphany, Washington City, of which the then Rev. Dr. Paret was the pastor. Leaving the Epiphany he came to St. Luke's, in Baltimore, where he has been since November, 1885.

The new choir master, we hope, will be with us by the middle of May. In the meantime the choir will be under the directionof Mr. Auty.

Dispensary Notes.

In a few days it is expected that the necessary legal documents will have been signed, and the first payment made by which the property on the corner of Cherry and Claymont street will have been transferred to us. The legal investigations into the title, etc., are now nearly finished.

The next step will be to alter it for our use. This will involve a complete rearrangement of the ground floor, giving a large hall in which the patients are to wait to see the physicians, the drug store, and three consultation rooms. The only change in the upper story will be the making of two rooms for the janitor's use. The contract for these changes has been let to George F. Payne & Co., who bind themselves to finish them "on or before May 1st." As soon as the work is done we can have our formal "opening." Then we can transfer the Dispensary from its present limited quarters on Friedlander street to our own building.

The Treasurer reports on hand money enough to make our first payment and pay for the alterations, but not enough to also pay for the current expenses of the next six months. To meet these we must look to what will be given us in future, to pledges made but not yet redeemed, to the Lenten Jugs, and to the sale which the Holy Cross Guild expect to have on April 10th.

As there was much sickness in February, the work at the dispensary was unusually heavy. There seems to be less this month.

Our friends must remember, however, that we have only made our first payment on the property, and until we can largely reduce the mortgage we shall be unable to put in the beds and open the Hospital. Now we must all say our prayers for this end.

The house now occupied for the Dispensary, 110 Friedlander street, is for rent. Possession can be given about the middle of May. For particulars apply to Father Convers.

THE OHIO CONVENTION.—We call the attention of our readers to the proceedings of the Convention called by the Bishop of Ohio to elect an Assistant Bishop. Never in the history of the Church in this country, has there been such an attempt to dictate the future policy of any diocese by the head thereof. Bishop Bedell charged the majority of the clergy (more than two-thirds of whom voted against the Bishop's candidate) with attempting to change the policy which he had deemed wisest, and said that there must be entire concord in every Church principle between the Bishop and his Assistant; and he threatened to withdraw his request for an Assistant unless they would elect some one satisfactory to him.

The election of Assistant Bishops is all wrong and is an Americanism which should be rooted out of the Church or at any rate essentially modified. By our canons the Assistant Bishop is the Bishop of the Diocese after the death of the Bishop. By Bishop Bedell's argument every Bishop who is too old or infirm to properly discharge his duties can demand an assistant who is in "entire accord in every Church principle" with him and thus perpetuate his peculiar ideas though the Diocese do not accept them. If he must have assistants they should represent the churchmanship of the Diocese and not of the individual Bishop. They should be elected with the view of their becoming the Bishop of the Diocese. We are not acquainted with the peculiarities of the canon law of Ohio but we cannot understand why it only takes a majority of the clergy actually voting to elect on their part, while it is necessary to have a majority of the whole number of accredited delegates to confirm the nomination of the clergy. In other words, why only 25 out of 53 clergy are necessary to elect if four do not vote, while it requires 78 out of 122 voting lay delegates to confirm; nor, can we see, if the minority report of the Committee on Credentials was correct, upon what principle of right or justice the Bishop declared the nomination rejected because some delegates voted "aye" and "accepted," instead of "To receive." We know of no law outside of Ohio which deprives a clergyman from voting for whom he will. The Bishop himself seemed to be in some doubt and made a decision limiting them to the three names presented by the Committee and then withdrew the ruling, but when a majority of the Convention voted against the three names proposed the Bishop again changed his ruling in the remarkable language quoted in the account of the proceedings.

Rev. Mr. Nichols, in our opinion, was fairly and legally elected Assistant Bishop of Ohio, and his treatment was the height of injustice, and we are surprised that any Bishop should have allowed his personal preferences and party feeling to have so biassed his judgment as to lend himself to defeating the will of the Diocese by acts which would reflect no credit on a political caucus.

After all was over, and Dr. Satterlee was elected, the Bishop made a most feeling and touching apology for his actions, which should be accepted by all on account of his age and the fact of his weak and nervous condition after a long and dangerous illness. The Bishop personally can be forgiven, but as a warning for the future it is better not to cover up what was really a scandal to the Church. If it shall result in repealing or modifying the canon for the election of Assistant Bishops, the Convention of Ohio will have accomplished a good result and one not anticipated.

THE AMERICAN CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY. This Society has issued an address stating its objects and appealing for support because under the new Missionary Canon of the last General Convention the Bishops of the Missionary Jurisdictions have the appointment of their own missionaries and disbursement of funds appropriated to their jurisdiction. It assures the contributors that "every missionary must be approved by the Executive Committee as faithful and true to the Protestant and historic character of our Church. The statement is signed by Rev. Drs. Dyer, Goodwin and Phillips Brooks. This is sufficient evidence of the kind of Protestant (with a big P) character that would be required. No wonder they use a small h when naming the "historic character."

The Ohio Convention.

The Special Convention of Ohio met at Trinity Church, Cleveland, on Wednesday evening of March 15th. An organization was effected and the salary of the Assistant Bishop was fixed at $4,000, with an Episcopal residence guaranteed for three years without cost to the Diocese.

On Thursday morning, after the celebration of the Holy Communion, nominations were made for Assistant Bishop, as follows:

Rev. Francis Lobdell, D. D., Rector of Trinity Church, Buffalo, N. Y.

Rev. Wm. S. Langford, D. D, Gen'l Secretary of the Board of Missions.

Rev. Henry Y. Satterlee, D.D., Rector of Calvary Church, New York City.

Rev. E. R. Atwill, D. D., Rector of Trinity Church, Toledo, Ohio.

Rev. W. F. Nichols, Rector of S. James Church, Philadelphia.

Rev. John W. Brown, D. D., Rector of S. Paul's Church, Buffalo, N. Y.

On the third ballot the Rev. W. F. Nichols was elected by the clergy, receiving twenty-seven out of fifty-two cast.

The lay delegates then retired for conference and an informal ballot was taken resulting in a vote in favor of agreeing with the election of the Rev. Mr. Nichols of 67 to 65 against.

At six o'clock the Convention was again called to order by the Bishop. It was ruled that a majority of all the lay delegates must vote "received" in order to confirm the election of the clergy. A majority and minority report of the tellers were made as follows:

The majority reported whole number of lay delegates 145, number of votes cast 132, necessary to a choice 73, to receive 65, to reject 68, informal 3.

The Rev. Mr. Avery presented the following minority report: Whole number of votes cast 134, to receive 67, to reject 68, "Ayes" 2, "accepted" 1.

Bishop Bedell announced the result by saying: "Gentlemen, the nomination of the clergy has been rejected by the laity."

The Convention then adjourned until Friday morning. After service Rev. Dr. Atwill announced that the Bishop requested that all proceedings should be suspended until he appeared. A motion was made for a reconsideration of the ballot taken by the laity upon Mr. Nichols' confirmation. During the discussion the Bishop entered and read the following remarkable address:

"The issue of the deliberations of the special convention yesterday was a painful surprise. It has led to a careful reconsideration on my part. No other member of the convention is at all aware of the communication which I now lay before you, for it would not be proper that any one except the bishop should be held in any degree responsible for the action which he proposes. After a day spent in earnest consideration of my request for the election of an assistant bishop the convention failed to give me an assistant, but to my great surprise the opportunity was taken by some of my clerical brethren to attempt to change the policy which as your divinely appointed spiritual head, following the traditions of the past and my own deliberate judgment, I deem wisest and for the best interests of the Church in this diocese. This cannot be done during my life without imminent peril of discord and contention. It is the first time, as far as I know, that it has ever been attempted in any diocese under such circumstances. An assistant means a helper. It implies entire cordiality both in counsel and in work. The relationship cannot truly exist where there is not an entire accord in every Church principle as well as in religious teaching. Constant irritation would result disastrously to both bishops as well as to the diocese. Therefore, in the present emergency, I withdraw my request for the assistant bishop, at this time, accepting the alternative of trying the effect of entire rest with medical care abroad. I shall hope that, in the providence of God, either my health may be so restored that I may be able to resume my work or that it shall become evident that it is my duty to resign. However, I have not changed my mind as to the course which a wise regard for the interests of the diocese suggests. If the convention desire to appoint a committee of conference whose report after consulting with me, shall be approved both by the convention and the diocesan, I will gladly accept that decision. Otherwise I withdraw my request for the appointment of an assistant bishop at this time, acknowledging with gratitude the cordial effort which my brethren have made to meet my wishes and anticipating the day when the request will be no longer needed."

A committee was then appointed who made the following report.

"The Committee have had under consideration the subject referred to them, and after prayer and full and free conference with each other, and full and free conference with the Bishop, it has concluded, as the best means of preserving harmony and insuring the welfare of the Church, to suggest the following: That the clergy at once proceed to ballot on the names of these three gentlemen: Rev. J Livingston Reese, D. D., of Albany, N. Y.; Rev. Dr. Atwill, of Toledo, O., and Rev. Dr. Henry Y. Satterlee, of New York City. And that when nomination is made the name of the nominee be referred to the laity for consideration as set forth in the canon. This decision was reached after Dr. Atwill had retired, upon request, and Mr King had been unanimously appointed Chairman of the Committee."

Discussion arose as to the right to vote for others than those named in report. The Bishop decided that votes must be restricted to the three names. The Convention took a recess until afternoon, when the Bishop withdrew his ruling of the morning so far as to allow any votes to be counted unless the Convention objected. The first ballot was then taken which resulted in no choice, less than a majority of the votes having been cast for all of the three persons named in the report. The Rev. Mr. Nichols having a higher number than any other person.

When the result of the ballot was announced the Bishop said:

"I am not sorry that the gentlemen who have not voted for the three candidates have had an opportunity to show their disrespect to this Convention. I am sorry that they have seen fit to do so. It is of no use to use moderate terms. If Mr. Nichols' friends persist in voting for him I will withdraw my request for an assistant Bishop. Is it right that these young me—. But I shall not continue. However, in Gambier, in the future, the young men who have not been brought up in the Protestant Episcopal Church will find it very difficult to enter the doors."

The Bishop stated that he desired to call the attention of the Convention to the rules which provided that names be presented for nomination by the clergy and voted upon.

"Under the rules the Convention is restricted to these three names," he said: "I so decide. After the solemn deliberation and action of the committee I do not see how any one can feel differently on the subject from the way that I feel. Those who do not want to vote need not, but a vote of those present, it is stated in the canon, elects. My former ruling I made in the interests of peace and harmony, but as I did not succeed in attaining my object, I go back to my former ruling which is in conformity with all practice and custom and confines the clergy to voting for the three names in question. All votes cast for any other candidates will not be counted."

On the fourth ballot Rev. Dr. Satterlee was elected, receiving 27 votes to 21 for all others.

Bishop Bedell announced that Dr. Satterlee was the choice of the clergy. The Bishop here advanced and said with emotion:

"As a boy I was taught that when I had committed an error it is a privilege as well as a duty to ask pardon, and more especially when the fault committed approaches to a sin—a lack of charity. In words which I have to-day used and to which I need not refer more fully, I have committed that sin. I have already confessed it to my Saviour; I now confess it to the clergymen who are offended. Will they please forgive me?"

The laity now voted with the following results:

Total number of lay delegates 155; necessary to choice 78. Received, 111; rejected, 11.

The Bishop announced the election of Dr. Satterlee as Assistant Bishop of the Diocese of Ohio.

General Notes.

ON SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 19TH, the main altar in St. Paul's Cathedral was formally accepted and consecrated by the Right Rev. Dr. Brown, Bishop of Fond du Lac. The altar is a gift of Mrs. M. H. Galloway, to the glory of God and in memory of her late husband, Edwin H. Galloway.

Bishop Brown in the course of his remarks gave substantially the following history of the altar: "Soon after my consecration as Bishop, I was unexpectedly summoned to the bedside of Mr. Edwin H. Galloway. He was known to me as one of the leading citizens of Fond du Lac. I had heard of the singular integrity of the man. His business honor was unquestioned. For truthfulness, purity, public-spiritedness, energy and sagacity he ranked among the foremost of our men. In his home he was a most devoted and tender husband and father. His stainless and honorable character was, however, the prop and glory of the infidelity and skepticism of this region. He met me with a greeting in words much as these: 'You see,' he said, 'my physical condition. I do not expect it can be improved and probably my days are already numbered. As I lie here I have been thinking over my past life and I wish for the sake of my family and friends to correct any mistakes I may have committed so that my example and influence may be of all possible advantage and use to them. You know, probably, what my opinions and principles have been. I am quite willing to review and revise them. Let me say plainly, however, that I am not ready to weigh religion in the balance and to decide by some difference in probabilities. It will make an infinite difference to me whether I lie here an honest man, or whether for the few days before me I must think of myself as a hypocrite and deceiver. Now what can you say to me for Christianity and the Church?' One day Mr. Galloway said to me: 'I am sure that I shall surprise you. I have weighed what you have said to me. Why did not some one say it to me a long time ago? But scrutinizing as carefully as I can my past life I see with perfect clearness that I have never been a skeptic, never really lost the faith that I had in my childhood. I have always been controlled by Christian principles. I have never heard the name of God profaned without a shudder, and I have never profaned it myself. I perceive that I have simply mistaken the scope of reason. I have been trying to understand God's government of the universe and his relations with men. The subject was too big for me. I could not grasp it and thought that I was an unbeliever. I am sure now that I have never been, in fact, an unbeliever. I have been honestly mistaken as to the province of reason. I would be glad to live long enough to make my friends understand this declaration, but I say plainly that my only desire to live is that I may serve God and extend and help His Church.'

"This altar signifies in particular that God is more powerful than we sometimes believe. It is a token that men around us regarded as skeptical and unbelieving are often in heart profoundly honest and earnest. Their faith is for a while eclipsed. By and by the shadow will pass from it and then they will discern that the relations with their God were less disturbed than they thought. Such a character as Mr. Galloway's teaches us to be tender in thought and word as to the character of those who seem to be far away from us in religious principle and feeling and to be hopeful for a time when men who mean to honor Him shall be really one with each other and with Him."

REV. HENRY Y. SATTERLEE, D. D., who was elected Assistant Bishop of Ohio, has declined to accept the position.

Letter from Father Sheppard.

CAPETOWN, CAPE COLONY,
Dec. 21, 1887.

MY DEAR ——: This will not reach you in time for Christmas, but you must please believe that I have nevertheless wished you in my heart all blessing and happiness which the Feast of the Incarnation, now so near, and the New Year, with its hopes and unknown benefits, can bring you. Your most welcome letter reached me just before I left home about ten weeks ago for a holiday and rest, so I had to delay answering it until I returned, which was about four weeks back. It was a most interesting and enjoyable trip. The country I went over was entirely new, and for a considerable part of the way the mode of traveling was new, or at least unusual for long distances, being partly in post-carts and partly on horseback. The first night and morning after I left Capetown was the only piece of railway traveling I had. After I alighted at about 11.30 A. M. on the Monday, all the rest of my journeys were, as I have mentioned, except for the last twenty-four hours, when I was at sea, coasting back to Capetown from a little port called Mossel Bay. Our railway system here is very embryonic; we have one main line going up to the Great Orange River, to the Diamond Fields of Kimberly, and an extension now projected to Pretoria, the capital of the Dutch Transvaal Republic. (South Africa beyond the Cape Colony is a very republican country.) Then there is a branch line leading to Port Elizabeth and Grahamstown, the two most important places in the Colony after Capetown and Kimberly. But between that line and the seacoast all traveling has to be done by post-cart, private cart, bullock wagon, or on horseback. The Cape cart is a two-wheeled vehicle, strongly built, with either shafts for one horse or, as generally, a pole for two horses, after the fashion of the old English curricle. It has a head or tilt and will hold sometimes four and sometimes six persons; on long journeys four and sometimes six horses are used. Riding in one all day nearly, as I did once or twice, making journeys of fifty and once seventy-five miles, is rather cramping and tiring work, but still it gives me a better opportunity of admiring the scenery, when there is anything to be admired, than rushing in a railway car. Riding on horseback, however, is to my mind the pleasantest way of all, if you can limit your wardrobe (as you must) to a pair of saddle-bags. In one of these two ways the country clergy here must visit their parishioners, so that they must generally keep a horse or horses, which in this country is expensive, as forage has to be provided all the year round, there being scarcely any pasture land in our part of the colony on which horses can be fed and thrive on it. Except at one village I always stayed with the clergyman of the place, and I was most kindly entertained. In return I was glad to preach for them, as in those isolated places, where one is thirty miles or more, i. e., five hours' drive from your nearest clerical neighbor, the clergy and people seldom hear but one voice year after year, so they may be forgiven if they are glad to hear a new voice when the infrequent opportunity occurs. So in regard to preaching my outing was by no means absolute rest, as I think I spoke or preached fifteen times during the six weeks I was away.

In most of the country places here, the Dutch Reformed Church—the full title still holds here, though dropped in the States—has the chief spiritual domination, and the Church of South Africa has a very uphill work of it, quite as much so as the P. E. Church has in New England amid the sects there.

In the western portion of the colony the farmers are all Dutch and so, by hereditary custom, belong to the Dutch Reformed Church.

In one village where I spent a fortnight, Oudtshoover, there are scarcely 2,000 people, and besides the Dutch and English churches, there are churches belonging to the Wesleyans and Roman Catholics; yet the Dutch church building is a very handsome one of red sandstone, capable of holding fourteen hundred people, and four times in the year, at the quarterly communions, it is more than filled. The farmers come in from long distances, spend two or three days in the village, living in their ox wagons or in tents, while some of them have built small houses near the church, which they occupy during these festivals and which are empty for the rest of the year. The Dutch minister has the best house in the village, a fine garden, a good cart, horses and mules and £600 a year. Still, the little South African, i. e., English church, is making way slowly but surely, especially among the colored people who form such a large proportion of the community and who are very much neglected by the Dutch; indeed many of the more ignorant farmers persist in declaring that the colored people have no souls, and if it were not for their use as working people, they would be glad to see them exterminated. The whole bent of the Dutch mind is to oppress the colored race of South Africa, deprive them of the chances of an education, demoralize them by the unrestricted sale of liquor and generally treat them as a degraded race only to be trampled upon and insulted. The consequence is that the natives, both Africans and Kaffirs, look to the English as their friends and are generally very anxious to learn English and to attend English services. The rising generation of the Dutch themselves, at any rate in the towns, mostly can speak and read English, and prefer it, so that also makes it easier for them to join the English church. Then, too, the English clergy are much better house to house visitors than the Dutch ministers, so that tells in our favor. In the case of the two parishes which I visited the distance from end to end can be little less than sixty miles, and some of the roads are anything but good; bridges, for example, are almost unknown, and you must ride or drive through the fords or "drifts," if you can, and if not, wait until the flood goes down. Post carts, however, cannot wait, and many accidents happen at these fords, with the loss of men, carts and horses. The clergyman with whom I stayed at Mossel Bay is named Taylor. If you happen to have the S. P. G. book, "Under His Banner," which gives a summary of the missionary work of Church of England, you would find there an account of Mr. Taylor's work at the little rocky island of Tristan d'Acunha which lies 1,000 miles south of Ascension Town, to the people of which, ninety or one hundred in number, he was the first chaplain. He brought away with him a good many of the people about twenty years ago, and some are still living at Mossel Bay. There is still, however, a small population there, and Mr. Dodgeon, a friend of mine, is the present chaplain.

Now, in reply to your inquiry about our work here, I must fill the rest of my sheet with a very brief sketch. If you could call and see us here I would take you to our school chapel, about two hundred yards away, and show you there between 300 and 400 children, more than half of them under six, who are being trained and disciplined and taught there, you would recognize in the chief mistress, one of the All Saints' Sisters, I mean by her dress. Our school is far too small for the number, and as soon as we possibly can find the money we are going to build a separate infant school. One or other of us is there giving religious instruction almost every morning, and I also give singing lessons twice a week. Quite half the number, if not the majority, you would notice are shoeless, and you would wonder how the little creatures could run about so gaily on the roads and streets which, from the action of our terrific southeast winds, have every stone exposed in all its roughness and sharpness. On Sunday you would see the same building with the east end screen gone out of sight, and a well arranged chancel and almost stately altar and dossal chiefly attracting your attention, and the body of the building well filled. The choir seats filled with a choir of about twenty-four, many of them colored more or less. On the south side of the nave you would be struck by the mass of dark, very dark faces and wooly heads, but the faces are not of the negro type, they are from the east coast, Kaffirs, Zulus, Saikas, Galekas, Inhambane and Mozambique men, and many other tribes are represented. These are gathered through the instrumentality of a Kaffir Home and School. In the Home (S. Columba's) we have about twenty lodgers, living under simple house rules and presided over by a Kaffir Catechist, John James, who lives in the Home. A German lady of considerable teaching power and great self-devotion is our chief teacher in the daily night school, which is attended by about forty or more scholars. There is generally a baptism class going on, and on Christmas Eve Father Puller will baptize seven by immersion in the baptismal tank in the chapel. The vows will be made in Kaffir, and the questions put through John James, as interpreter. F. Puller, who is in charge here, is chaplain to the All Saints' Sisters here, who have quite a number of works.

The new Mother was the Superior here until a few months ago. They have three schools of various grades, a large Orphanage, a House of Mercy and the care of a large Hospital, so all this involves a good deal of work for the Chaplain and myself, besides the parish work which chiefly falls on me. A third priest, a secular, lives with us and has charge of the Mission to the large Malay population of Capetown under our supervision. They are Mahommedans, many of them very devout ones, and it will be a long time probably before much impression is made. It is a work of faith and prayer, but a very important work, as there are about 12,000 in Capetown alone and many more in the Colony. You could not be many hours in Capetown without being struck by the gay and oriental-looking dresses of the Malay women and the gorgeous flowing robes and snowy turbans of some of the Hadjis. You might also meet men with dark faces with regular features and smooth black hair, wearing a close-fitting single breasted black surtout and white trousers, or dome-shaped cap with peak or brim but with a gold band round the edge. Over his shoulder he would be carrying a large bundle of Indian stuffs for sale, and in his hand a white umbrella. This you would be told is a Hindoo pedlar. Probably you would also remark what a number of soldiers of different costumes you saw in the streets; for we have here and in the neighborhood about 4,000 men, engineers, artillery, medical staff, dragoons, besides two foot regiments, and there are five or six volunteer corps, each of which has its own regimentals. As you walked about Capetown you would be impressed with the grandeur of the mountain masses which engirdle and seem to overhang the oriental-looking town, while on the only open side you would delight to gaze out on the beautiful blue bay and the mountains beyond. This is a very imperfect sketch, but it must end here I am afraid. If this brief setting forth of some of our work and our needs should stir you to specially remember us in your prayers, I shall be very grateful. Please remember me most kindly to all old friends, and believe me to be yours very truly.

PARISH NOTES.

The Bishop will visit the parish for Confirmation on Sunday evening, January 30th.

The dinner of St. Vincent's Guild will take place on Wednesday night, January 26th.

Archdeacon Stuck is expected to preach in St. Clement's on Sunday morning, January 16.

On January 5 thieves entered St. John's Chapel and stole two of the memorial candlesticks. The gates of the Lady Chapel will be kept locked hereafter as a protection against desecration.

On the Feast of the Epiphany, at the 9.30 Mass, Miss Claudine Whitaker, a communicant of St. Clement's, who is working in Mexico was set apart as a Deaconess. Bishop Rhinelander preached and Fr. Hutchinson said the Mass.

Fr. Underhill, who has been curate at Trinity Church, Bridgeport, Conn., has accepted the position of curate with Father Townsend, at St. John's Church, Camden. Both Father Townsend and Father Underhill were former rectors of St. John's, and will now be working together in their old parish.

On Sunday, February 6, the members of the League of Intercession and any who are using the leaflet regularly, are asked to meet in St. John's Chapel at 4 o'clock.

Names of sick persons will be kept on the list hereafter for one week. By special request they will be continued longer, but in such cases information should be given to the clergy at the commencement of a recovery—and a thanksgiving should always be made.

Names should never be handed to the clergy excepting in the case of really serious and critical illness. It would, of course, be our desire to pray for all who were ill, but the list would soon become unduly long.

CHRISTMASTIDE.

Our Christmas Feast brought us many blessings. There was a slight increase over last year in the number of Communions, and the attendance at the Solemn Mass was larger than usual. The service was very simple, but there was an atmosphere of peace and quiet which was very suggestive of the message of Christmas.

The church was very simply decorated. Trees were placed at either end of the Altar against the wings of the reredos, and the Crèche was erected against the choir wall, near the pulpit. We seem at last to have found the proper place for the "manger." It can be seen from the north aisle, and has a position of proper dignity, while not obstructing any altar.

On Monday night the children held their festival in the Parish Hall.

Laurence Housman's mystery play, "Bethlehem," was given, with the following cast:

Gabriel.....Henry Erhardt
Abel, a Blind Shepherd.....Alfred Hunter
First Shepherd.....Elias Borden
Second Shepherd.....Edwin Ritter
Third Shepherd.....William Boss
Fourth Shepherd.....Thomas McCollom
First King.....Edward Wilson
Second King.....Norman Ruark
Third King.....Charles Fullerton
S. Joseph.....John Coulthard
S. Mary.....Mary Rothwell
Prologue.....Ruth Smith
Epilogue.....Marion Fullerton
Singing Angels,
Ben Baker and George Wells

The production was under the direction of Father Caine, and was better done than in any previous year.

For the first time we had a "scene"—which added much to the effectiveness of the staging—and new costumes were designed and made by a number of interested helpers. Too much praise cannot be given to those who, by their willing and hard labor, made the play a possibility.

The hall was filled by an appreciative audience, and at the close of the mystery, presents were distributed to the Sunday School from the tree in the rear of the hall.

A pleasing feature of the mystery was the singing by Thomas McCollum of a song set to music by Mr. Fry.

The Turkey Supper was held on Thursday night, December 30th, about seventy people being present.

THE GIRLS' CLUB.

The December meetings of the Girls' Club have been well attended, one of the new features being the opening of the gymnasium under the instruction of Miss Tolson.

The members of the Club held a carol service in the chapel at Blockley the Sunday afternoon following Christmas.

The members of the Guild of St. Michael's were entertained at the Club's Christmas party, January 4.

On Tuesday evening, January 18, Miss Virginia Garber will deliver an illustrated lecture on "A Trip up the Nile." Members of the congregation are cordially invited.

Any girl over sixteen years of age, who sympathizes with the objects of this Club and is willing to aid in promoting them, is eligible for membership.

SICK COMMUNIONS.

As some persons have asked for simple directions concerning preparation for sick communions, we repeat the suggestion made some years ago.

There should be by the bedside a table covered with a fresh linen cloth and, if possible, a crucifix upon it with two candles, a small bowl of water and a napkin. The candles should be lighted before the priest arrives. Women should cover their heads. The priest should be met, if possible, at the door by a person carrying a lighted candle, who should genuflect to the Divine Presence and lead the way silently to the sick room. There should be no conversation with the priest before the service, unless it is absolutely necessary.

To accept a non-Episcopal ministry is an act of explicit rebellion against the authority of the ancient and undivided Church than which there can be no rebellion more complete.—Bishop Gore.

PARISH NOTES.

The ornaments stolen from St. John's Chapel have been recovered.

There will be a meeting of the Men's Club on Wednesday evening, February 9th. all the men of the congregation are urged to make an effort to be present. The lecture will be announced later.

On Tuesday evening, February 15th, an organ recital will be given in the church, under the auspices of the American Guild of Organists. Mr. Charles Heinroth, organist of the Carnegie Institute in Pittsburgh, will give the program.

It will be gratifying to the parish to learn that on Monday, January 17th, the last payment was made upon the $2,000 note which had been outstanding for over a year, and that indebtedness has been wiped out. We still owe, to the Burial Lot Fund, about $700, which was borrowed in 1914, and upon which we pay interest. When this amount is paid, the parish will be free from any incumbrances. This is a most encouraging condition, as the current expenses of the parish have been fully met during the last year. If all the communicants would use the weekly envelopes, conscientiously and regularly, we would have no cause for anxiety concerning the financial condition of the parish. It may be as well to state here that the fiscal year closes on March 25th, and the envelopes are distributed at that time. Those who are not already provided with envelopes, but who may desire to use them in the future, are asked to send their names and addresses to the Accounting Warden at the Clergy House.

THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY.

On Friday, February 4th, the Auxiliary will hold its usual monthly meeting. Every woman in the parish should become a member of the Auxiliary, and those who are able should attend the monthly meetings. Our interest in the extension of Christ's Kingdom must not lessen. It is proposed to start a Mission Study Class for the members of the Auxiliary. Notice will be given later as to the day and hour when it will meet.

ALTAR FLOWERS.

Members of the C. B. S. are asked to contribute 25 cents per year for flowers during the week for the Lady Chapel. If each member will respond, flowers can always be upon the altar.

Contributions may be placed in the alms basin, at the foot of the south aisle, after C. B. S. Vespers, February 13th.

There may be some members of the parish who would be glad to provide the flowers for the high altar on one Sunday of the year, which may come near the date of some anniversary. If there are any such, they may give their names to Miss Arnold, signifying for what Sunday they will be responsible.

All contributions should be sent to Miss S. H. Arnold, the Monterey Apartments, Forty-third Street and Chester Avenue.

ST. ANNA'S HOME.

One of the brightest spots in the vicinity of St. Clement's is St. Anna's Home which, it will be remembered, was started by the All Saints' Sisters three years ago. It is not a parochial institution, but any work undertaken by the community that has served the parish so faithfully and so well for many years, is necessarily of interest to St. Clement's people.

The Home is now full and there is a waiting list, which is an indication, surely, that it ministers to the present needs of the community. There are, of course, other Church Homes in the Diocese, but we know of none that has the gentle atmosphere of peace such as dwells in St. Anna's, nor do we know of any where Catholic ministrations may be had, without let or hindrance.

The chapel of the Mission House is at the disposal of the residents of St. Anna's, whenever they may desire their Communion, and the Chaplain often carries the Blessed Sacrament directly from the chapel altar to the bedside of some ill or infirm person. This he considers one of his highest privileges.

There is a trained nurse in residence, that proper care may be given, and the house is happily free from the dreadful trammels of "red tape" that so often burden an institution.

The Sisters will be glad at any time to receive visitors at St. Anna's and show the haven of rest that has been provided for those who are in need.

ST. STEPHEN'S COLLEGE.

The trustees of St. Stephen's College have inaugurated a campaign to raise the sum of $250,000 for an endowment and building fund. There is no institution in the American Church more deserving of the support of Catholic Churchmen than this college on the banks of the Hudson. For many years the Church has been served by able and devout priests who laid the foundations of their intellectual and spiritual life at St. Stephen's.

Its history has been one of continuous struggle for existence, while striving to maintain the highest standards of scholarship, and it now remains practically the only Church college in the country. Other institutions, founded in the name of the Church, have sold their birthright for the mess of pottage of a "foundation." St. Stephen's has never been willing to betray her trust.

Under the leadership of Dr. Rodgers the Catholic faith is now taught at Annandale, and Catholic privileges are granted in their fullness.

Our Seminary in New York always has enrolled on its list of students many graduates of St. Stephen's, who bear witness to the high standards of the institution from which they have come. Any contributions, however small, will be of real help in raising the amount desired for the continuance of this Catholic work, and may be sent directly to Mr. Philip S. Dean, Treasurer, 160 Broadway, New York City.

SUNDAY SCHOOL REPORT.

October, 1915—February, 1916.

The present enrollment of the Sunday School shows 63 scholars in the upper school and 36 in the primary class. In the Bible Class for Women there are 20 enrolled. The teaching staff numbers 10 teachers.

The Honor Role for perfect attendance at Mass and Sunday School for the half-year is as follows:

Donald Grieve, George Day, Elsie Edwards, Mary Stokes, Florence Erhardt, Alice Erhardt, Marion Fullerton, Ruth Smith, Ontimenia Kline, Marie Clark, Mary Rothwell, Charlotte Stokes, Stanley Coulthard, William Boss, Clarence Plagford, Howard Playford, Henry Erhardt, Charles Fullerton.

Although the Sunday School is not very large as far as members, yet its condition is very encouraging. The large percentage of children who have had a perfect attendance is certainly an indication of their faithfulness.

THE BISHOP'S VISITATION.

The Bishop of the Diocese visited the parish on Sunday evening, January 30, and administered the Sacrament of Confirmation to twelve children and three adults. The Bishop gave his address at the beginning of the service. He chose as his text, "We beseech you also that you receive not the grace of God in vain." (II Cor. 6-1). He asked the class to keep this as their motto.

CONFERENCES BY THE BISHOP.

BISHOP'S HOUSE,
251 South Twenty-Second Street.

My Dear Brother:

There seems at this time a real and pressing need, felt and expressed in many quarters, of a clear and convincing "declaration of those things which are most surely believed among us."

The responsibility of meeting this need rests, of course, upon each one of us, and, in a particular degree, upon me as Bishop of the Diocese.

I have therefore planned to make the following series of addresses during the weeks immediately before Lent:

1. The Incarnation.—Thursday, February 17th, 4 P. M., St. Mary's Church, West Philadelphia, Locust Street, above Thirty-ninth Street.

2. The Church.—Thursday, February 24th, 4 P. M., Calvary Church, Germantown, Manheim Street and Pulaski Avenue.

3. The Sacraments.—Thursday, March 2d, 8.15 P. M., St. Simeon's Church, Philadelphia, Lehigh Avenue and Ninth Street.

4. The Ministry.—Monday, March 6th, 11.30 A. M., St. James Church, Philadelphia, Walnut and Twenty-second Streets.

I hope you will find it possible to be present yourself, and will extend an earnest invitation to your people.

Although the addresses will be delivered in churches in different sections of the city, they will form a connected series.

Faithfully yours,
PHILIP M. RHINELANDER,
Bishop of Pennsylvania.

PARISH NOTES.

The Paschal Candle will be blessed on Holy Saturday night after the First Vespers of Easter.

The League of Intercession will hold its Service of Intercession on Low Sunday at 4.30 P. M. in St. John's Chapel.

The Mission Study Class, under the direction of Mrs. Van Harlingen, meets every Thursday, after the 9.30 Mass.

Parishioners are reminded that they should fill out their Easter Communion cards that the parish list may be corrected.

The national colors have been presented to the Church by a member of the parish. They will be placed in the Church within a few weeks.

A silver ciborium for use at the Sunday Masses is to be made. This last is in fulfillment of a bequest left by Miss Patty D. Neill for this purpose.

Donations in money are asked for the flowers for decorating the altar of the Blessed Sacrament on Maundy Thursday. Donations may be sent to Miss Arnold, The Monterey Apartments, Forty-third Street and Chester Avenue.

The new duplex envelopes have been issued. It will be noticed that the mission envelopes have been altered. Hereafter we shall not be sending our contributions to "General Missions," but will "designate" our offerings for either foreign, domestic, or diocesan purposes. Our apportionment for diocesan purposes is something over seven hundred dollars. The daily offerings taken during Lent are devoted to Diocesan Missions.

A MEMORIAL WINDOW.

The many friends of Miss Patty D. Neill will be interested to learn that designs for a window to be erected in her memory are at present being prepared under the direction of Mr. Sellers. The window, which will form the first of a series which it is hoped may be completed eventually, will be placed at the head of the south aisle, just outside the entrance to the Lady Chapel. The present wooden tracery will be replaced by stone mullions which will follow the general lines of the clerestory windows of the sanctuary, and the first section of the stone wainscoting which it is purposed to extend around the church will be erected.

The proposed general scheme of subjects is as follows:

The windows will contain three tiers of saintly figures. The lower row, commencing at the Lady Chapel and extending round the Church, will contain the saints and martyrs of the first five centuries, in chronological order, commencing with St. Ignatius of Antioch, and ending with St. Gregory the Great, who sent St. Augustine to England. The second row will contain the saints of the English Church, commencing with St. George and St. Alban, and ending with Mother Harriet, the foundress of the Community of St. Mary, and Father Benson. The upper row will contain figures representing the nine choirs of the angelic hierarchy.

Following this plan, the saints in the first window will be St. Ignatius and St. Polycarp, St. George and St. Alban—with angelic figures above them.

It is pleasing to think that the first window to be erected in the carrying out of this plan is to be in memory of one who, with her family has been for so many years, devoted to the parish and its interests.

ERNEST E. BELINFANTE.

Of your charity pray for the repose of the soul of Ernest E. Belinfante, for many years a communicant of this parish.

Give rest, O Christ, to thy servant with thy saints, where sorrow and pain are no more; neither sighing, but life everlasting. Amen.

THE GIRLS' CLUB.

At the cake and candy sale, which was held on Tuesday evening, February 29, thirty-five dollars were cleared. A part of this money is to be used to supply several needs of the gymnasium class, so that hereafter the gymnasium can become a more important feature of the Club.

Miss Rosalie Tolson, of Temple University, is conducting the class.

PARISH FINANCES.

Two years ago the duplex envelope system was introduced in St. Clement's parish and the results have been very encouraging, but the success of this system depends on its general adoption by all members of the parish, and while about 330 persons have used the envelope regularly during the past year, there are still approximately 470 among our communicants who do not use them.

It is absolutely necessary that our yearly income be increased by $2,000.00 to avoid a constantly recurring annual deficit which is only made up by special appeals.

The following statement shows how this amount could be obtained by relatively small subscriptions:

100 subscriptions at 5 cents per week yield	$260.00
100 subscriptions at 10 cents per week yield	520.00
50 subscriptions at 25 cents per week yield	650.00
25 subscriptions at 50 cents per week yield	650.00
275	$2,080.00

The Finance Committee of the Vestry has been instructed, by vote of the Vestry, to present these facts to the members of the parish with the hope of obtaining more support. The envelopes form the most reliable source of income, aside from pew rents, for parish maintenance.

Our present receipts from pew rentals, cash and envelope offerings, are far from sufficient to meet our expenses, especially during the summer months, this fact being largely due to a lack of systematic offerings being made by the majority of the parishioners, and this has resulted in the necessity of raising money by temporary loans during certain parts of the year.

As a consequence we find it necessary to ask that the Easter offering be devoted to meeting the obligations of the parish, the amount needed to clear the parish of all indebtedness being $1,500.00.

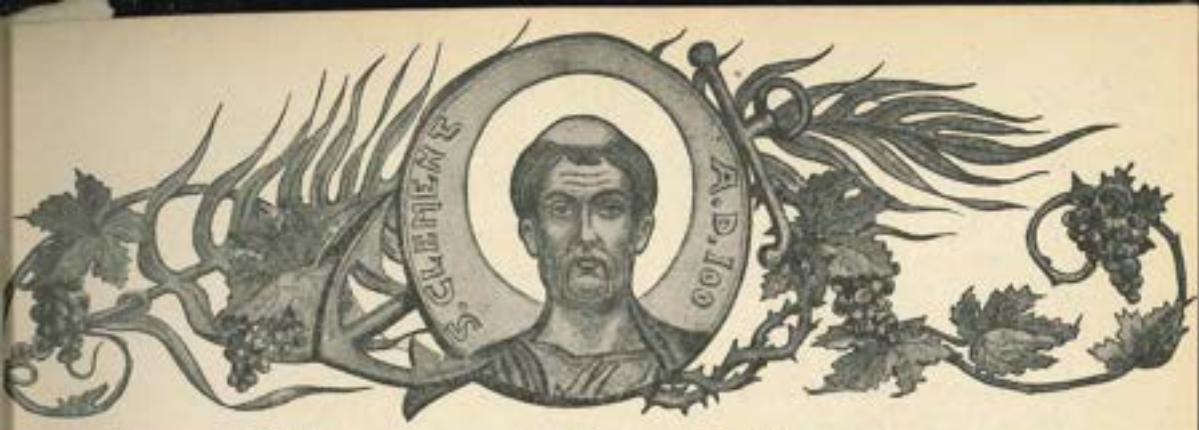
"THE LOVE OF CHRIST WHICH PASSETH KNOWLEDGE."

I bore with thee long weary days and nights,
Through many pangs of heart, through many tears;
I bore with thee, thy hardness, coldness, slights,
For three and thirty years.

Who else had dared for thee what I have dared?
I plunged the depth most deep from bliss above;
I not my flesh, I not my spirit spared:
Give thou me love for love.

For thee I thirsted in the daily drouth,
For thee I trembled in the nightly frost:
Much sweeter thou than honey to my mouth:
Why wilt thou still be lost?



I bore thee on my shoulders and rejoiced:
Men only marked upon my shoulders borne
The branding cross; and shouted, hungry-voiced,
Or wagged their heads in scorn.

Thee did nails grave upon my hands, thy name
Did thorns for frontlets stamp between my eyes:
I, Holy One, put on thy guilt and shame;
I, God, Priest, Sacrifice.

A thief upon my right hand and my left;
Six hours alone, athirst, in misery:
At length in death one smote my heart and cleft
A hiding-place for thee.

Nailed to the racking cross than bed of down
More dear, whereon to stretch myself and sleep:
So did I win a kingdom—share my crown;
A harvest—come and reap.

PARISH NOTES.

The Paschal Candle was decorated this year by Miss Marion B. Monroe.

The collection on Ascension Day will be devoted to the Summer Outing Fund.

The Church will be open, as usual, on Rogation Days from 6 A. M. to 9 P. M.

The contribution of St. Clement's Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary to the United Offering was $118.

The Litany on Fridays will be said after Matins until further notice, and the intercessions at noon discontinued.

The national colours have been presented to the Church by Miss Anna P. Prichett, and Mr. Francis P. Adams has given the State flag. They will be hung at the west end of the Church.

Mr. S. Tagart Steele, Jr., who graduates this year from the General Theological Seminary, New York City, will come into residence as a member of the staff immediately after his ordination to the diaconate on Whitsunday.

The Boy Scouts will give an entertainment on May 10, for the benefit of their outing fund. The boys have been rehearsing very hard under the direction of the scout masters and assistants. The "show" will be well worth seeing.

EASTER.

On Easter Day 354 communions were made at the Church. A number of the parishioners made their communions at churches nearer their homes, as was indicated on their communion cards.

There were good congregations both at the Solemn Mass and at Evensong. The music at both these services was very well sung.

The services throughout Lent and Holy Week were well attended. More confessions were heard before Easter than in the last two or three years. This, surely, is an indication that the Catholic religion is not a thing of the past.

GENERAL SUMMARY.

As it is through the General Account of the Parish that all receipts for current expenses, Missions and other objects outside the Parish pass, it seems fitting at this point in the report to call attention to various increases or decreases in amounts given or expended for various objects as compared with the figures shown in the last annual report.

Cash offerings for Parish purposes increased $3,336.37 and were within $225.96 of being double the amount received last year. The greater part of this increased amount was for the special purpose of cancelling the floating indebtedness of the Parish, which included a note for $2,000.00, repairs and improvements of a necessary character, and premiums on the increased insurance placed on the property.

Envelope offerings decreased $14.41, while receipts from the rental of pews and sittings increased $98.73.

Our offerings for Missions increased $768.27, and the sum of $330.10, forming part of this increase, and counting on the Parochial apportionment, was especially designated for the Emergency Fund of the Board of Missions.

As for expenses paid from the General Account the amount spent for coal shows an unusually large increase and this was due, first, to the fact that in 1914 we had a considerable quantity of coal left over but incidentally carried over to this year an unpaid coal bill for an additional supply, and, second, to the fact that during the past winter we have used egg coal instead of pea coal as heretofore, at a considerable increased cost. The results of the change in the coal used have been most satisfactory, however, and but few complaints have been made of the church being cold, while in preceding years such complaints were both numerous and well founded.

The amount expended for electric lighting shows a decrease of $76.15, and while electric power cost the Parish $77.10 more than a year ago, no proper comparison is possible, this being the first full year that the Parish has used electricity instead of water power for the church organ.

Repairs paid for from this Account amounted to just over $200.00 less than during the preceding year.

The amount expended for stationery, printing and advertising shows an increase of $138.15, most of which is accounted for by the fact that in this report appears the charge for duplex envelopes used during two years and also by reason of unpaid bills carried over at the close of last year.

The publication of the Magazine cost $50.00 more than shown in the last report, but again the fact that unpaid bills for publication carried over at the close of last year largely accounts for the increase noted. The Magazine is now issued in new form and distributed gratis, but the cost of publication is materially reduced.

The expenses incident to maintaining the Sunday School decreased $24.18, amounting to only about one-third of the sum expended last year and falling about $100.00 short of the sum expended in the year ending March 24, 1914, this result being attained by the use of all supplies purchased in preceding years, and not yet exhausted.

BAPTISMS.

March 24.—Norman William Pinney, Jr.

April 22.—James Thomas Smalley, Charles Frazer Gimber.

Taxes and water rents cost the Parish $50.00 less than last year, due to the doing away with water power for the organ motor and the substitution of electric power.

There will be a still further decrease during the coming year, as last summer the entire plant was placed on a water meter basis, the improvement or change being paid for from the Yarnall fund for repairs and improvements.

A further decrease in expenses was in the item of vestment laundering, scouring and material for new vestments for the choir, the amount of the decrease being $27.12.

There are two periods in each year when receipts are almost always short of the amount needed to meet current expenses. The first of these is in mid-summer, when many people are away, and the second is in mid-winter, when on account of sickness or inclement weather the congregations are very apt to fall off in size, with the resultant decrease in offerings. If members of the Parish away in the summer would pay up their envelope offerings in advance it would be of great assistance, but while some do so it is a regrettable fact that the majority wait until fall before sending in their summer offerings. A more general and proper use of the duplex system is much to be desired, and would largely prevent the summer deficits.

On March 1 it became necessary to borrow $700.00 to meet current expenses on a four months' note and in addition to this sum there remains unpaid a loan or transfer from the burial lot fund of $732.98 made in the summer of 1914. When this latter amount is repaid and credited to the burial lot fund a lot will be purchased and set aside for the purpose for which the fund was started, a committee of the vestry already having the matter in hand.

The insurance carried on the church property is the same as shown for last year, the total being $207,800.00, but to conform with the new State law, Compensation Insurance has been taken out for the proper amount required.

From the Education Account the Parish is this year paying for the tuition and maintenance of four students, one at St. Stephen's College, two at Kent School, and one at Donaldson School.

To the Library of Theology there have been added during the past year a total of 407 books. As the majority of the books purchased come from abroad, additions to the Library have not been as extensive as they might otherwise have been owing to the war.

ENDOWMENT FUND.

The annual report, rendered March 1, by the Pennsylvania Company for Insurances on Lives and Granting Annuities, Trustee, showed that the fund amounted to $38,254.25.

THE GIRLS' CLUB.

The attendance at the weekly meetings of the Club during March and April has decidedly improved. The gymnasium, which has been more thoroughly organized, has been very popular among the majority and thus far successful.

On Tuesday, in Holy Week, a service preparatory to Easter was conducted by the Rector in St. John's Chapel.

The Easter party was held on Tuesday evening, April 25, and all present had a most enjoyable time.

It has been decided to held the annual strawberry festival on Tuesday evening, June 6, in the Parish Hall. The proceeds this year will be devoted to the Summer Outing Fund. The tickets, including refreshments, are 10 cents each. Members of the parish wishing to buy tickets for the festival may secure them by mail if they will kindly notify Miss Helen Garber, 1414 Pine street.

THE NEW MISSAL.

The parish is the possessor of a new treasure in the new Altar Book, which was used for the first time at the Solemn Mass on Easter Day. The book has been in the making for three years, and is considered by experts to be the best work in modern binding that has yet been done. The volume is the last copy procurable of the "Updike" Altar Book, printed in Boston at the Merrymount Press about twenty years ago. The borders and initials designed by Goodhue have been exquisitely illuminated by one of All Saint's Community. The binding, designed by Mary Crease Sears, of Boston, is a masterpiece. The foundation is a most perfect piece of deep red morocco, mounted with a silver cross and edged with silver. On the front is a beautifully wrought Crucifix, with adoring angel figures at the extremities of the cross. The back has the Agnus Dei, with symbols of the Evangelists in place of the Angelic It is a satisfaction to possess a book so worthy of the Most Holy Sacrament of the Altar. It will be used at all Solemn Masses.

RENTALS OF PEWS OR SITTINGS

Persons desiring pews or sittings are requested to apply to the Accounting Warden after eleven o'clock Mass, on Sundays or communicate with him at his office in the Clergy House.

AN ANNIVERSARY.

On the second of July, Father Quin will have completed twenty years of faithful and devoted service as curate at St. Clement's. This is far beyond the average length of residence in one place, for any of our clergy. It is needless to say that in such a case the relationship between priest and people becomes peculiarly tender and intimate. Father Quin is very much a part of the bone and sinew of the parish, and we are sure that the congregation will especially remember him before God on the day of his anniversary.

PARISH NOTES.

Donations of flowers for the altar are requested for the summer.

After July 1, Evensong will be read in St. John's Chapel on Sundays, at 5 o'clock, and the evening service will be omitted.

The eight o'clock Mass on Sundays, and the half-past seven Mass on weekdays, will be discontinued, after Trinity Sunday, for the summer.

The annual meeting of St. Saviour's Ward of the Confraternity of the Blessed Sacrament, will be held on Wednesday, June 21. The Vespers will be sung at 5.15 P. M., followed by a business meeting.

On Thursday, May 25, the Mothers' Meeting exhibited the work done during the winter. The box will be sent to Christ School, Arden, N. C. This was the last meeting for work until the autumn, but it is purposed to hold the services in the Chapel through the summer.

On Friday, the 12th of May, Mr. Thacher Souder, one of our acolytes, left for the mission field. He will work in the diocese of Hankow, where, it will be remembered, his brother, Father Edmund Souder, is stationed. We are sure that the members of the congregation will remember our young missionary in their prayers.

The annual conference of the Confraternity of the Blessed Sacrament will be held in St. Clement's Church this year on Corpus Christi. Solemn Mass will be sung at 10 A. M. and a sermon will be preached by the Rev. Dr. Delaney, of St. Mary the Virgin, New York City. The conference will follow and luncheon will be served in the Parish Hall.

Once more we would remind the members of the congregation that the expenses of the parish continue during the summer. If those who leave the city for a holiday would make some arrangement whereby the payment of the weekly envelopes might be continued, the Accounting Warden would be much relieved. The church cannot exist on air.

THE MOTHERS' MEETING.

For the year 1915-1916 there was an enrollment of 90 members of the Mothers' Meeting, besides 10 teachers and helpers. The attendance at the weekly meetings has been very good and a very creditable amount of work, both as to quality as well as quantity, has been finished.

During the first part of the year two and a half dozen flannel baby gowns were made and sent to Paris through the French Relief Committee.

The following articles were sent to Christ School:

Rag balls for carpets, 104.

Children's dresses, women's blouses, boys' blouses, baby gowns, 90.

Worsted articles, 31.

It is hoped that the membership next year may be increased to 150.

THE BOY SCOUTS.

On Wednesday evening, May 10, our Scouts gave a very creditable performance for the benefit of their camping fund. A good sized and appreciative audience filled the Parish Hall, and about thirty dollars was realized from the sale of tickets.

The programme consisted of a Scout play, entitled "A Strenuous Afternoon," with the following cast:

Farmer.....Henry Erhardt
Tough.....Fred Ritter
Patrol Leader (Seal)....James Crawford
Patrol Leader (Eagle)..Stokeley Morrison
Injured Scout.....Stanley Coulthard
Very Small Scout.....John Phipps
Scoutmaster.....Mr. Herbert Casey
Asst. Scoutmaster....Mr. Thacher Souder
Characters for groups and orderlies by the rest of the Troop.

After the play, Professor La Morrell, a magician, mystified his audience by some very clever sleight-of-hand tricks.

Many thanks are due Mr. Eric Sandville for coaching the play, and Mr. Edward Massey, for his share in the entertainment.

The silver cup for the highest number of good turns during the year was presented to Fred Ritter.

THE NEILL CIBORIUM.

On Whitsun Day, at the seven o'clock Mass, the silver ciborium, the gift by bequest of Miss Patty D. Neill, was used for the first time.

The ciborium bears the following inscription: "A. M. D. G. In loving memory of Anna M. Wharton Hollingsworth Neill. The gift of her daughter, Patty D. Neill. May they rest in peace."

PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE CHURCH.

It may be of interest to the parishioners to know that the very excellent pictures of the church, taken by the late Ernest Belinfante, may be obtained from Mr. W. G. Matthews, 915 Sansom street. Mr. Matthews has been a life-long friend of Mr. Belinfante and has come into possession of his collection of photographic plates.

FATHER MATURIN.

A memorial window has been placed in the Abbey Church of the English martyrs at Downside in honor of the late Rev. William Basil Maturin, who lost his life in the Lusitania disaster. The window contains the figures of St. Basil and St. William of York, Father Maturin's patron saints. The central piece represents the story of St. Peter upon the waters. "Lord, bid me come to Thee upon the waters! And Christ said, 'Come!'—and Peter going down out of the boat, walked upon the waters to come to Jesus." Peter's story, says the London Universe, will recall to future generations in what heroic manner Father Maturin found Christ upon the waters.

SUNDAY SCHOOL REPORT.

February, 1916-June, 1916.

There are at present sixty-two scholars in the Upper School and thirty-seven in the Primary Class. In the Bible Class for Women, which meets after the 9.15 Mass, at the same time as the Sunday School, twenty-two are enrolled. The teaching staff for the school numbers ten.

The Honor Roll for the second half year for perfect attendance at Mass and Sunday School is as follows:

Ruth Smith, Ontamenia Kline, Florence Fireng, Henry Erhardt, Charles Fullerton, Charlotte Stokes, Marion Fullerton, Stanley Coulthard, Elsie Edwards, Florence Erhardt, Alice Erhardt, Clarence Playford, Howard Playford, Franklin Playford, George Day, Dorothy Garoh.

On June 4th the classes were discontinued until the fall. During the summer there will be a short catechetical instruction after the 9.15 Mass on Sundays.

No report can adequately show what has really been accomplished in the way of work. The enrollment is small, much smaller than it need be. There are many more children in the parish who might be regular members of the Sunday School. It is sincerely hoped that a wider interest on the part of every member of the parish may accomplish much in this direction. The Sunday School is the Parish's School.

The Honor Roll shows the interest on the part of the children. No rewards are given for attendance or lesson work. Probably bad weather and sickness may account for the absence from the roll of many other children who have been most faithful during the year.

In looking back over the whole year one cannot but feel that a real work has been done. A spirit of loyalty and earnestness has marked both the attitude of the teachers and children alike. This is the aim of all religious education. The things which have been taught are those things "which a Christian ought to know and believe to his soul's health." The whole scheme of instructions, both in the classes and catechizing, has been to make our Lord and His Church the center of each child's religious life.

Of your charity pray for the repose of the soul of

for fifty-two years a devout communicant of this parish.

Give rest, O Christ, to Thy servant with Thy Saints, where sorrow and pain are no more; neither sighing, but life everlasting. Amen.

THE GIRLS' CLUB.

At the Strawberry Festival, which was held on Tuesday evening, June 6th, over one hundred dollars was made. The amount cleared, after paying expenses, was seventy-nine dollars.

The Club has rented a cottage at Townsends Inlet, N. J., for two weeks in August. The money raised at the festival will be used to run the holiday house, where each member of the Club may spend a week.

On Trinity Sunday, at the seven o'clock Mass, the Club made a Corporate Communion. The last meeting of the Club, until fall, was held Tuesday, June 13th.

During the winter ten new members were enrolled.

CATHOLICITY

THE WORD AND THE IDEA

We believe in the Catholic Church; we profess the Catholic Faith; we call ourselves Catholics. What do we mean? What is Catholicity?

It is never safe to discuss an idea in terms of etymology. We are dependent on words for expression, and a word is usually chosen to express an idea with some reference to its etymological sense; but it becomes set, or polarized, as Wendell Holmes would say, in a fashion that gives it a conventional meaning. Where this has been done it is merely misleading to hark back to its origin, and to use it with deceptive purism in the etymological sense. The depolarization of theological terms, which Holmes with some reason demanded, is not a study in archæology; it is the examination of words in common use, for the purpose of finding out what the users really mean, and the occasional substitution of an unusual equivalent for the purpose of accentuating the sense. We cannot determine the meaning of Catholicity by the study of Greek adjectives and prepositions.

Yet in this case there is something to be gained from that study. We are investigating an idea which has a history; and in history it is well to begin with the beginning. The Christians of the first age found in use—perhaps in common use, and sufficiently established in literature—a Greek word which seemed to them suitable for describing the Church of Christ. They called the Church Katholiké. How soon the word found its way into a baptismal creed cannot be ascertained; it is used familiarly in one of the Epistles of St. Ignatius and in the Martyrium Polycarpi. In the first of these places the meaning is quite clear, though the word has been perversely interpreted. It is a favorite contention of St. Ignatius that the bishop is the head of the Church in each several locality, and he emphasizes this by a comparison, "even as wherever Jesus Christ is, there is the Catholic Church (Katholiké) ekklesia." The Catholic Church is, then, the whole Church, as distinct from the part of the Church locally organized. We are thrown back to the language of St. Paul, who could speak of the Church as one and undivided, and yet could name "the Church which is in Corinth," or "the Churches of Judea." The Catholic Church is the Church regarded as one and indivisible. In this sense the word had long been current.

The Martyrium has the word three times in the same sense, made more emphatic by explicatory additions. In the inscription, "the Church of God dwelling in Smyrna," addresses "the Church of God dwelling in Philomelium and all the habitations of the holy and Catholic Church in every place." In the eighth chapter Polycarp is described as praying for "the whole Catholic Church throughout the world." In the nineteenth chapter is the same description of the Church as shepherded by the Lord Jesus Christ. But in the sixteenth chapter the word is found in a very different sense. Polycarp is here called the "bishop of the Catholic Church in Smyrna." The local Church itself is called Catholic. Evidently, then, the word has another sense different from that in which it is used to distinguish the whole Church from its several parts.

There is another question. In which sense—if there be none other—does the baptismal creed use the word? I would have you observe that the Greek term is taken over in the Latin version of the creed. Why? The Slavonic translators made a literal rendering of the Greek, as the construction of their language allowed. In modern times the Scandinavian Lutherans, and some Germans, have done the like. They have been accused, perhaps unreasonably, of an heretical intention; but allgemeine is an almost exact equivalent of Katholiké as used by St. Ignatius, and if that is the meaning of the word in the creed, the rendering is justified. But is that the whole meaning? Why did not the Latins use a native word? Universalis ecclesia would be a sufficient rendering of the Ignatian phrase; generalis ecclesia would do equally well. But no such word would fit "the Catholic Church in Smyrna." Shall we infer that the word is used in the creed as in this phrase, and that no Latin equivalent could be found? The conclusion would be too large. But it seems probable that it was not narrowed to either sense exclusively, and was therefore taken over intact, there being no Latin equivalent that would cover its various shades of meaning.

I return to the Martyrium Polycarpi, and ask in what sense the Church in Smyrna could be called Catholic. Twice in the body of their communication the Smyrniotes call the whole Church Catholic, with insistence on its universality alone; but in the inscription they describe it in a single phrase, "holy and Catholic."

Remember that these men were not using a compound phrase consecrated by centuries of repetition in the Creed. They themselves were helping to form the language of Christendom. You may be sure that when the Church was first called in a breath Holy and Catholic the two epithets were not without congruity.

Yet the Church was certainly called Catholic because of its extension. True; but if the extension of the Church was due to some interior quality, then the savour of that quality would easily communicate itself to the word by which the extension was described. The Church would be called Catholic, not merely because it was world-wide, but because there was something in it which made it world-wide.

And the quality making for universal extension might well be one that could be coupled not incongruously with holiness. Moreover, this quality, being diffused throughout the Church, could be recognized, like holiness, in each several local Church, which might therefore be called Catholic. The Church in Smyrna was Catholic for the same reason that the whole Church was Catholic—because it had in itself the quality that makes for world-wide extension.

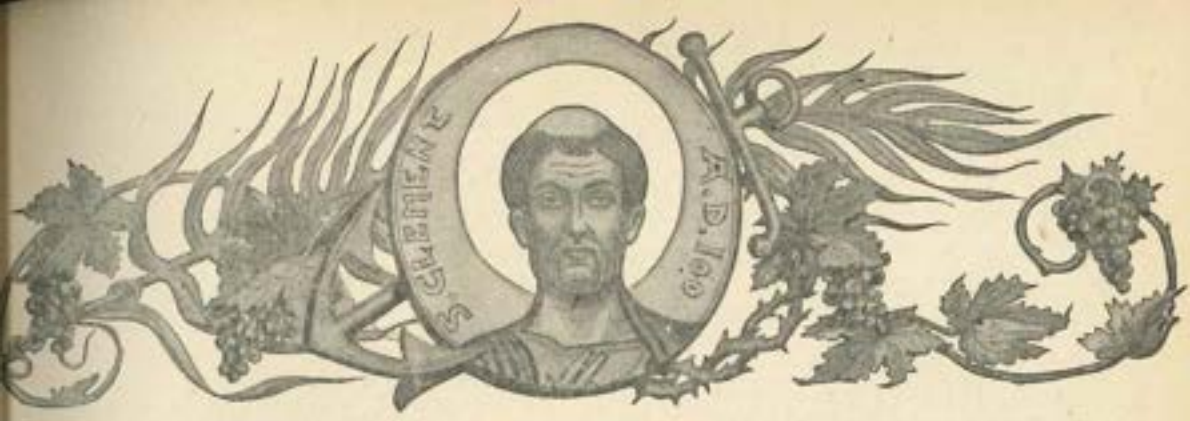
This quality of the Christian Church and of the Christian religion, this Catholicity is my subject. I am not speaking to you of Catholicism, an ordered system of faith and practice, of doctrine and discipline. I am concerned with the underlying quality of which Catholicism is but the expression, probably an imperfect expression. What is it?

I shall not set before you a cut-and-dried definition by means of which you may determine whether this or that Church, this or that person, this or that doctrine, is rightly called Catholic. There is no such thing. The Church is Catholic precisely because it is too large for that sort of particularity. For practical purposes you must approach the question of Catholicity from the other side. The Church is professedly Christian, this man professes and calls himself Christian, therefore this Church or this man is presumably Catholic; for Catholicity is a normal quality of the Christian religion. Being Christian you are Catholic because Christian, unless there be some flaw in your religion serious enough to destroy that quality. Catholicity is not something superadded to Christianity; it is inherent in Christianity, unless it be extruded by some contrary quality.



We must hark back yet nearer to the beginnings of the Church. We can trace the word no further, but we can look for the idea. When St. Peter enters the house of Cornelius at Cæsarea it leaps into sight. The door was opened to the Gentiles. It was not yet flung wide. The holy seed would not yet mix with them on equal terms. Peter himself was to hesitate and dissemble. It was the work of St. Paul, through much disputing, through much bitterness, through much unhappiness, to beat down the middle wall of partition and then to proclaim with almost lyric fervor the united Church in which there was neither Jew nor Greek, but all were one in Christ. The Church is Catholic because in its essence it transcends all national and local particularities. It is the Church of Humanity. And more. There were already religions that overlapped these barriers, and others no less wide were rising simultaneously with Christianity—the worship of the Genius of Cæsar, Buddhism, the cult of Mithras. If Christianity had been a religion of humanity only in this sense, it would have had no quarrel with the Roman Empire. But the religion of Christ was essentially exclusive; not in the Jewish or Greek sense, for it would shut out no man. But the Church was and is exclusive in the sense of claiming to be the sole possessor of the oracles of God, and the only ordered channel of divine grace.

Again, the Church of Christ transcends not only civic and national boundaries, but the limits even of the visible world. The Catholicity of the Church would be a poor thing if it meant only the general agreement of men at a particular moment, or the sum of human thought since the beginning of the world.

I find a fourth element. Ancient religion was not only a religion of local cults, but it was the worship of local gods. The conviction that God is the one Lord of Heaven and Earth was peculiar to the Jews. Christianity entered upon their heritage, enriching it after some hesitation with the complementary truth that the chosen people of God is no less universal than the sovereignty of God. The Church is Catholic because God is One.

In Catholicity are these four elements; they constitute the idea. Catholicity means that the Christian religion embraces ideally and potentially all mankind; it means that no rival or supplementary cult is to be endured; it means the transcendence, not only of civic or national bounds, but of the whole world; it means the proclamation of One transcendent God. And this fourfold quality is found, vitally energetic, in the smallest fraction of the whole Christian society. Catholicity is fundamentally this in its primary significance; from this all secondary meanings must flow, and to this they must conform.—Catholicity (condensed).

RENTALS OF PEWS OR SITTINGS

Persons desiring pews or sittings are requested to apply to the Accounting Warden after eleven o'clock Mass, on Sundays or communicate with him at his office in the Clergy House.

PARISH NOTES.

St. Mary's Guild will meet on Monday evening, October 2.

The Mothers' Meeting will be resumed Thursday, October 5.

It is hoped that the Sunday School classes will be able to meet, for the first time of the fall term, on Sunday, October 1.

During the summer there has been a short catechetical instruction after the 9.15 Mass, which has been discontinued for the present because of the epidemic of infantile paralysis.

Father Quin wishes to thank all of his friends who gave the purse which was presented to him on his twentieth anniversary, and especially for their good wishes and prayers.

THURSDAY NIGHT SERVICES.

The attendance at the Thursday night services during the summer has been very good. The instructions were in the form of informal talks on some of the doctrines of the Catholic Faith and on the history of the books of the New Testament. The hymns were sung with or without accompaniment, depending upon the presence of an organist.

PARISH EXPENSES.

It is an unpleasant task to be continually appealing for funds with which to meet the current expenses of the parish, but however unpleasant the task may be, it is one that cannot be avoided.

During the summer, with so many away and with the result of small congregations, the receipts from offertories are very small indeed. An appeal is therefore made for special offerings for the support of the work of the parish.

THE MISSIONARY APPORTIONMENT.

The amount apportioned to this parish for the support of the Mission work of the Church during the fiscal year of the Board of Missions that ends September 30, is $3,697.18. Towards this sum the Accounting Warden has received and forwarded, to August 15, $1,640.54, leaving a shortage on that date of just over $2,000. Members of the parish wishing to make special contributions for this object may send them to the Accounting Warden, who will promptly acknowledge them and transmit them to the Board.. Even though the action of the Board in the Panama matter last winter was a great shock and disappointment to many, it should be remembered that it will be the missionaries in the field who will suffer if the Board is unable to meet its obligations and should be obliged to curtail the work.

EVENING BRANCH OF THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY.

The Evening Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary will resume meetings on Wednesday, October 4, at 8 P. M. About sixty persons attended during the three months in which the meetings were held in the spring, and it is hoped that all who cannot conveniently be present at the regular meetings of the Auxiliary, Friday afternoons, will become members of the Evening Branch. In addition to a quantity of other work eighty dozen gauze sponges were made for the hospital service in the war, and these were sent to the American Committee of the Red Cross Society, in answer to their appeal at the time of the recent trouble in Mexico.

Beware of letting your care degenerate into anxiety and unrest; tossed as you are amid the winds and waves of sundry troubles, keep your eye fixed on the Lord, and say: "Oh, my God, I look to Thee alone; be Thou my guide, my pilot," and then be comforted. When the shore is gained, who will heed the toil and the storm? And we shall steer safely through every storm, so long as our heart is right, our intention fervent, our courage steadfast, and our trust fixed on God. If at times we are somewhat stunned by the tempest, never fear; let us take breath, and go on afresh. Do not be disconcerted by the fits of vexation and uneasiness which are sometimes produced by the multiplicity of your domestic worries. No, indeed, dearest child, all these are but opportunities of strengthening yourself in the loving, forbearing graces which our dear Lord sets before us.—St. Francis de Sales.

It matters not where or what we are, so we be His servants. They are happy who have a wide field and great strength to fulfil His missions of compassion; and they, too, are blessed who, in sheltered homes and narrow ways of duty, wait upon Him in lowly services of love, wise or simple, gifted or slender in knowledge, in the world's gaze or in hidden paths, high or low, encompassed by affections and joys of home, or lowly and content in God alone, what matters, so that they bear the seal of the living God? Blessed company, unknown to each other, unknowing even themselves.—H. E. Manning.

Be patient with every one; but, above all, with yourself. I mean, do not be disturbed because of your imperfections, and always rise up bravely from a fall. I am glad that you make a daily new beginning; there is no better means of progress in the spiritual life than to be continually beginning afresh, and never to think that we have done enough.—St. Francis de Sales.

Because perseverance is so different, even when supported by the graces of God, thence is the value of new beginnings. For new beginnings are the life of perseverance.—E. B. Pusey.

MISSION NOTES.

The Anglican missions in India are suffering severely from the war, not so much in money as in men. The Rev. W. E. S. Holland, principal of St. Paul's Cathedral Mission College at Calcutta, writes to a friend in this country that two of the men on his staff have been killed, and two or three others who were to have come out have enlisted. He makes an appeal for two first-class young Americans. They should be unmarried, with university qualifications, and ready to fit into a self-forgetting brotherhood of service. An ample salary will be paid, free quarters supplied and travel expenses met on a five-year agreement.

A correspondent of the New York Times recently suggested that the government should spend ten million dollars to establish schools and colleges where the youth of Mexico might be trained, as the best way of bringing the nation out of its present turbulent condition. A churchman, writing in reply, calls attention to the fact that this is exactly what the religious bodies of the country have been trying to do. For example, our own Chuch has had a bishop and twenty-five clergy there. They have established schools, a college settlement house, an industrial school and a farm school, but when they have appealed to this country for support many of our citizens unfortunately have turned a deaf ear.

Boone University in Wuchang, China, is proud of its band. In its eight years of existence it has developed from an instrument of torture to an organization of some finish which is in demand for social functions in Hankow and Wuchang. As a direct aid to missionary endeavor the band is distinctly a help. It supplies musicians for the students' Sunday afternoon missionary campaigns in the city; it provides a musical feature which helps to attract the large numbers of government school students who attend the regular Saturday night course of popular lectures in the University library; it offers a systematic training in music to the great number of embryo teachers who will later need it in their work, and it prepares many of our divinity students to better guide the musical part of the church services of their future congregations. The band is badly in need of any kind of brass instruments, except slide trombones. The Rev. C. P. Howe, of Boone University, is at present in the United States, and will be glad to correspond with any person willing to donate such an instrument and to arrange for its forwarding. A note, in care of the Church Missions House, 281 Fourth Avenue, New York, will always reach him.

The Fifteenth Infantry of our army is stationed at Tientsin, China. Recently the children of the regiment, under the direction of Chaplain and Mrs. N. H. Watts, gave a sale and entertainment, the proceeds of which were devoted to the children's ward of St. Luke's Hospital, Shanghai. This, together with their Easter offering for the same object, amounted to $500 and has been sent to Bishop Graves. This does great credit to the Fifteenth Infantry and the Americans in Tientsin who interested themselves in the enterprise.

St. Paul's Normal and Industrial School, Lawrenceville, Virginia, is putting before the Church its great need of a dormitory for girls. The rapid growth of the school, and the great demand for training, make the situation urgent. For lack of accommodations from two to three hundred deserving girls must be turned away every year. A dormitory for seventy-five or eighty girls could be built for from $10,000 to $12,500.

The Rev. Edgar H. Goold, has been elected principal of St. Augustine's School for colored youth at Raleigh, N. C., in place of the Rev. A. B. Hunter, who becomes honorary principal. Mr. and Mrs. Hunter will continue to work at the school, with which they have been connected for over twenty-eight years.

An outcome of the work of Deaconess Spencer, of Trinity Japanese Mission in Honolulu, was a "Cherry Blossom Fete," held for two days at the Royal Hawaiian Hotel in that city, which netted $2,500 for the erection of St. Hilda's Hotel, a settlement house for Japanese women and girls.

A chaplain of one of the New York regiments now in Texas, who is a clergyman of the Church, and to whom a Communion service had been loaned for his use, writes under date of July 11: "You will be glad to know that at the celebration of the Holy Communion on Sunday at 5.45 A. M., at which your chalice and paten were used, almost the entire regiment was present, and between 100 and 200 men took the Communion. My fondest expectations as to usefulness have been surpassed. The interest in the services, the eagerness of the men to consult and talk seriously with the chaplain, the appreciation by the men of my efforts to get their letters to them promptly, and the gratitude of the men in the hospital for the attention I can give them, are all very wonderful. Men have come to me to say that they want to prepare for confirmation, to tell me about their families, and numberless other concerns in which they are deeply interested."

RENTALS OF PEWS OR SITTINGS

Persons desiring pews or sittings are requested to apply to the Accounting Warden after eleven o'clock Mass, on Sundays or communicate with him at his office in the Clergy House.

PARISH NOTES.

Thanks are due to a parishoner for providing flowers for the High Altar during the summer.

Beginning with the first of October, the eight o'clock Mass will be resumed on Sundays for the winter, and the half-past seven Mass on weekdays.

The Sunday School will commence as soon as permission is granted by the Board of Health. A notice will be sent to the children of the parish advising them of the date.

A pair of vases have been given for use in the Lady Chapel, as a memorial to Mrs. Boudinot. They are of hand-wrought copper, and were designed and executed by Samuel Yellin, who made the gates and altar ornaments.

As the magazine goes to press preparations are going forward toward the erection of the stonework for the memorial window. The glass may not be ready for some months, but the mullions will be set in place and filled with clear glass before the cold weather sets in.

Six prayer books and hymnals for the use of the clergy in the sanctuary, stalls, and St. John's Chapel, are needed, as the present ones are in rather bad condition. Any members of the congregation desiring to give one or more as a thank offering are asked to communicate with the Rector.

A class of men is being formed under the leadership of Mr. Steele, to discuss the attitude of the Church toward present-day problems. No date has as yet been fixed for the meetings, but they will commence in the early autumn. Any men desiring to join the class are asked to hand their names and addresses to the clergy.

CONVENTION PRAYER.

(Authorized by the Presiding Bishop, the Rt. Rev. Daniel S. Tuttle.)

It is intended that this prayer shall be used in the Churches generally up to and during General Convention.

The General Convention meets at St. Louis on October 11. At St. Clement's we shall be keeping the nine days before, beginning Monday, October 2 and ending Tuesday, October 10, as a special time of prayer for the guidance of the Holy Ghost in this important meeting of the General Council of the Church in America. Bishop Tuttle has authorized the prayer which is printed in this number of the magazine for use in churches up to and during the sessions of the Convention. It is hoped that each member of the parish will use the prayer daily. This is the least, it seems, that one could do. The responsibility for actions taken and the measures proposed rests not alone with the deputies, but with each baptized member of the Church, who is being represented by these deputies. It is evidently a very real duty then that each baptized member of the Church should be praying that the will of God be done at this time.

Many very important and vital issues are to be presented for the decision of the Convention. Six prayer books and hymnals for the use of the clergy in the sanctuary, stalls, and St. John's Chapel, are needed, as the present ones are in rather bad condition. Any members of the congregation desiring to give one or more as a thank offering are asked to communicate with the Rector.

A class of men is being formed under the leadership of Mr. Steele, to discuss the attitude of the Church toward present-day problems. No date has as yet been fixed for the meetings, but they will commence in the early autumn. Any men desiring to join the class are asked to hand their names and addresses to the clergy.

THE LEAGUE OF INTERCESSION.

The League of Intercession will have a monthly service on the third Friday of each month, commencing October 20. Services will be held in St. John's Chapel at 8 o'clock.

Members of the League are reminded that it is the duty as well as the privilege of each one, not only to use the leaflet, but to send in intercessions and thanksgivings each month. These should be written on separate slips of paper, so that they may be more easily classified.

It is hoped that many will be led to join the League this winter.

THE CONFRATERNITY OF THE BLESSED SACRAMENT.

It has been decided to change the day and hour for singing the Vespers of the Blessed Sacrament. Heretofore the service has been held on Sunday afternoon, and the attendance has been far from satisfactory. This winter we shall have the service on the first Friday of each month at eight o'clock, probably followed by a short address. The "C. B. S." is one of the oldest confraternities in our Communion and one to which all St. Clement's people should belong. It is hoped that the change in day and hour will make it possible for more persons to be present, and that those who have not yet joined the Confraternity may be led to do so.

The first meeting will be held on Friday, November 3, at 8 P. M.

CONVENTION PRAYER.

(Authorized by the Presiding Bishop, the Rt. Rev. Daniel S. Tuttle.)

It is intended that this prayer shall be used in the Churches generally up to and during General Convention.

O God, Holy Ghost, Sanctifier of the faithful, Who didst preside in the Council of the blessed Apostles; we pray Thee to visit with Thy love and favor the Council of Thy Church, our General Convention, summoned to meet this year in Thy Name and Presence. Help us to prepare and make ready for its assembling wisely and well. Those who are to gather and serve in it, inspire with Thy grace and guidance. Teach them whither they are to go and what they are to do and what measures they are to take for Thy glory and the spread of Thy Kingdom upon earth and the good of redeemed souls. Enlighten our minds more and more with the light of the everlasting Gospel; graft in our hearts a love of the truth; inflame our wills with zeal for Thy Holy Church; and pour out Thine own breath of hallowing might upon us and upon all people, we beseech Thee, O blessed Spirit, whom with the Father and the Son together we worship and glorify as one God, world without end.—Amen.

NOVENA FOR THE GENERAL CONVENTION.

October 2 to October 10.

The General Convention meets at St. Louis on October 11. At St. Clement's we shall be keeping the nine days before, beginning Monday, October 2 and ending Tuesday, October 10, as a special time of prayer for the guidance of the Holy Ghost in this important meeting of the General Council of the Church in America. Bishop Tuttle has authorized the prayer which is printed in this number of the magazine for use in churches up to and during the sessions of the Convention. It is hoped that each member of the parish will use the prayer daily. This is the least, it seems, that one could do. The responsibility for actions taken and the measures proposed rests not alone with the deputies, but with each baptized member of the Church, who is being represented by these deputies. It is evidently a very real duty then that each baptized member of the Church should be praying that the will of God be done at this time.

Many very important and vital issues are to be presented for the decision of the Convention. The one which has been foremost in the minds of us all is that in regard to the action of the Board of Missions taking part in the Panama Conference. Bishop Kinsman, and Bishop Anderson, and Dr. Manning have put the matter before us in a very clear form. Many of our readers have already seen the pamphlets issued, but the summary of the question as given by Dr. Manning in his annual statement in the Year Book of the Parish of Trinity Church, New York City, may well bear quoting in part, at least, here:

"It now remains for the General Convention to pass its judgment on the matter, and to say clearly whether the sole responsibility of the Board of Missions is to foster and direct the missionary work of the Church, or whether, on the other hand, the Board is intended to be practically the Executive Committee of the Church, a majority of which, consisting possibly of only twenty-three men, is to have power to originate, shape, or change the policy of this Church in regard to Christian Unity, Federation with Protestant Communions, or other matters involving the essentials of her faith and life. Unfortunate as was the action which occasioned it, this discussion has nevertheless had good results. It has brought into light the issues which are involved in the policy of union in religious work in the mission fields. It has made clear the fact that the clergy and people of this Church as a whole are loyal to her principles, that they will not sit still and see her historic position impaired, nor her Faith and Order compromised by any plan to identify her officially with the platform of Protestant Federation, and that if misguided leaders should attempt to force such action they would bring upon her the greatest crisis that she has known in all her history.

"Although this is not often perceived, these movements which suggest approach to Christian unity through compromise or surrender of belief have relation to another and still deeper issue which now confronts us and all Christian people. The most pressing danger of our time is that arising from what has been called the 'down grade' movement, the widespread weakening of belief in the fundamental verities of the Christian religion.

"The real issue today is not any secondary matter, of policy, or of ritual, of 'High Church' or 'Low Church.' The issue now is between 'Church' and 'no Church.'"

No less important a matter is the consideration of the amendment of the Canon on divorce. The report of the Joint Commission on Marriage and Divorce was published some time ago. A minority report was also submitted at the same time, showing some difference of opinion as to the action to be taken. The present Canon does not recognize the indissolubility of the marriage bond for both parties. The Marriage Service, the formal expression of the Church's faith in regard to the Sacrament of Matrimony (not to mention our Lord's own words), in no uncertain terms declares that the bond is indissoluble, and in the Collect for St. John Baptist's Day we ask God to "make us so to follow his doctrine and holy life, that we may truly repent according to his preaching; and after his example constantly speak the truth, boldly rebuke vice, and patiently suffer for the truth's sake." Either there should be no "re-marriage" of divorced persons for any reason whatsoever, or, let us give up all idea of the sacramental character of Holy Matrimony, and change the Marriage Service and the Collect for St. John Baptist's Day. Shall we change the Faith or the Canon? Let us pray God that it may be the Canon.

One other report to be submitted for the consideration of the General Convention is that of the Joint Commission on Prayer Book Revision. The Scottish Church revised her Prayer Book in 1912. The revision of the English Prayer Book is still under consideration. The report of our own Commission is most thorough, and as stated in a recent editorial "we doubt whether, in all the annals of Prayer Book revision, English and American, since the use of the English language in the formularies began, so thoroughly well-digested a series of proposals for revision, in form so generally satisfactory, has ever been presented before." Some of the suggested changes and additions one hopes may be reconsidered. The proposals as a whole, however, would give us a much richer and more liturgically correct Prayer Book than our present one.

The report of the Joint Commission on a Racial Episcopate comes up for a second consideration. The whole question of giving the Episcopate to other races than the white in our own land as well as in the mission field, has at times been confused by prejudice on the one side and a certain stiff conservatism on the other. Let us pray that these contrary forces may be overcome, and that the Holy Ghost may guide the Convention in the decision to be made.

There are many other questions, of course, but these seem to be the ones which most involve the Faith and Tradition of the Church, and so as a congregation let us take our part in this work of prayer for the General Convention.

PARISH NOTES.

A Requiem will be said every allowable day in November at 7.30 A. M.

Bona Mors will be said every Monday during November after Evensong.

Vespers of the Dead will be said after Evensong on November 1.

The Rector's Bible Class will commence on Tuesday, November 7, after the 9.30 Mass.

Persons sending names to be read on All Souls' Day, are asked to hand them to the clergy not later than Sunday, October 29.

There has been a very generous response to the appeal for new prayer books and hymnals for the clergy stalls. The full number have been ordered.

A sewing machine is needed for the work of the Saturday Classes. If any one in the Parish has a machine which they could give, it will be very much appreciated.

Members of the C. B. S. are asked to contribute to the fund for flowers for the Lady Chapel during the winter season. The Alms Basin will be found at the south door after the Vespers on November 3.

The following offerings will be taken during November: November 1, for All Saints Sisters of the Poor; St. Clement's Day, for the parish debt; Thanksgiving Day, for the poor; also for the Episcopal Hospital. (This last should be designated.)

We can commend most heartily a pamphlet just published by Father Hughson, entitled "Protestant Liberty and Catholic Loyalty. Some Consideration on 'Liberty and Loyalty,' a recent charge by the Bishop of Vermont." The pamphlet may be obtained at Holy Cross, West Park, for 25 cents.

For those who may be preparing for a first confession, or who may desire some help, we can recommend two little books that can be obtained at small cost at Jacob's book store—"Pardon Through the Precious Blood," edited by a committee of clergy, and "The Hand Outstretched," by the Dean of Bloemfontein.

A STATEMENT AND APPEAL TO EVERY MEMBER OF ST. CLEMENT'S PARISH.

The Finance Committee reported to the Vestry at their meeting held October 10 that owing to the fact that about four hundred members of St. Clement's Parish are not using the envelopes, and not thereby contributing regularly through the envelope system, they have been under the necessity of borrowing twenty-five hundred dollars to meet the current expenses of the Parish accrued during the past four months.

Those who are in arrears, owing to their absence from the city during the summer are requested to send in their offerings without further delay.

Those who are not using the envelopes are now very earnestly requested to do so; and should this appeal to help support the work be not heeded, a canvass of the Parish will be made, and an effort put forth to induce the Parishioners to contribute toward the expenses in the manner that the Vestry have authorized.

If the people of St. Clement's want the services and ceremonial continued as at present the income must be increased until it fully meets the expenditures. If not, then the expenses will have to be decreased by drastic measures until they shrink inside the income even though that may mean fewer services and a smaller staff of clergy, and a cutting out of other activities of this Parish.

This is a serious matter and should be earnestly laid to heart by each member of St. Clement's Church.

Each attendant on the services should put forth an honest effort to wipe out this debt, unavoidably contracted at this time, and give of his or her income that which costs them something.

We have been greatly blest in the past, and should show our gratitude to Almighty God for all that he has done for us. "Much is required to whom much is given" and all will admit that our blessings and privileges have been manifold. What will our cherished and boasted Catholicity do, but add to our condemnation if we fail?

Those who now contribute are asked to increase their amounts 10 per cent., and to induce others they know of to give, who are not already using the envelopes.

If every member, man, woman and child, in St. Clement's Church would take the envelopes, and use them, there would be no deficit, and an appeal and statement such as this would not be needed. The Finance Committee asks each member to apply for envelopes at once, and thus save the trouble and time and expense required to call upon them personally, and to know the reason why each one does not give of their means to support the work of this Parish.

No definite pledge is required, but only a request is made to take and use the envelopes.

The Accounting Warden is the only person who knows what each one gives; and the transaction is entirely confidential

Pride, the greatest sin of all the seven, keeps some people from using the envelopes for fear the amounts of their offering may become known to others.

Cards may be found in the pews which should be filled out at once and either placed in the offertory plates or handed to the Clergy or Accounting Warden.

Please give this very important matter your early and prompt attention.

THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY.

The first meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary for the winter was held on Friday, October 6. It was preceded by a short devotional service in St. John's Chapel, at which Father Caine made an address. The business meeting followed and plans for the winter were discussed.

The following pledges for this year have been made by St. Clement's Branch:

$75 towards the salary of the priest at Christ School, Arden, N. C.

$50 for St. Clement's Scholarship at St. Mary's School, Sewanee, Tenn.

$25 to each of the five branches of Missionary Work, Colored, Indian, Domestic, Foreign and Diocesan.

$10 to the Daily Bread League of the Leper Hospital, Kumamoto, Japan, for November 23.

Besides these pledges, considerable money is given for special purposes which are brought to the notice of the Auxiliary during the year. Should any woman of the congregation, who cannot attend the meetings, care to contribute towards any of these objects, she may send her gift to the Treasurer, Miss Gladys Connelly, Cornwells, Bucks County, Pennsylvania.

The annual dues of the Auxiliary are 25 cents.

THE GIRLS' CLUB

It will be remembered that at the strawberry festival which was given last June by the Girls' Club, over $90.00 were cleared. With this money the club conducted a vacation house for two weeks at Townsend's Inlet, N. J., for the club members. About thirty-four girls visited the house. Out of this number twenty-two were able to spend a week or more at the house, while the others visited for the week-end. The weather was delightful the whole two weeks. Boating and bathing were the chief sources of amusement.

On August 8, those at the house packed a lunch and went by launch to Wildwood for the day. A great deal of credit is due Mrs. John A. Dailey, Mrs. Benjamin B. Taylor and Mrs. Frank Homan for their very wise management of the house and for making the undertaking a success.

The Club resumed its meeting for the winter on October 3. The general plan of the work for the year will be as follows: The first Tuesday of the month will be devoted to business and followed by an informal gathering at which some light refreshment will be served. A dancing class is to be organized for the second Tuesday. The third Tuesday will be spent in the gymnasium. The fourth Tuesday will be spent in doing some charitable work, which has not been definitely decided upon as yet.

A Hallowe'en party is being planned for Tuesday evening, October 31.

The annual business meeting will be held November 7, when the new officers for the year will be elected.

ST. CLEMENT, MARTYR AND BISHOP.

COLLECT.

O God, Who makest us to rejoice in the yearly solemnity of blessed Clement, Thy Martyr and Bishop, favorably grant that we who keep his festival may likewise imitate his fortitude in suffering through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

THE EPISTLE: Phil. iii: 17—iv: 4.

THE HOLY GOSPEL. St. Matthew, xxiv: 42-48.

Novena—November 14-23.

MEMORIAL FOR THE PARISH

To be said daily.

Ant.—I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground; I will pour My Spirit upon thy seed, and My blessing upon thine offspring.

V.—O Lord, look down from heaven.

R.—Behold, and visit this vine.

Let us pray.

Almighty and everlasting God, Who dost govern all things in heaven, and earth, mercifully hear our supplications, and grant unto this parish all things that are needful for its spiritual welfare. Strengthen and confirm the faithful; visit and relieve the sick; turn and soften the wicked; arouse the careless; recover the fallen; restore the penitent; remove all hindrances to the advancement of Thy truth; bring all to be of one heart and one mind within the fold of Thy Holy Church; to the honor and glory of Thy Holy Name: through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

THE PARISH FESTIVAL.

Father Staunton, our missionary at Sagada, Philippine Islands, will be the special preacher on St. Clement's Day, and will also give an illustrated lecture in the Parish Hall in the evening. Father G. F. Richardson, Rector of St. Mary's, West Philadelphia, will preach on the Sunday evening in the Octave. The preacher for Sunday morning will be Father A. W. Jenks, of the General Theological Seminary.

The Parish Tea will be held on Tuesday night, November 28, and a festival for the children on Monday evening, November 27.

It is hoped that every member of the parish will endeavor and make our Parish Feast all that it ought to be. Every one should make a devoutly prepared communion on St. Clement's Day or during the Octave.

Every parishioner is urged to be present at the Parish Tea on Tuesday night.

A PRAYER FOR PRIESTS.

O Jesus, Eternal Priest, keep Thy priests within the shelter of Thy Sacred Heart, where none may touch them. Keep unstained their anointed hands, which daily touch Thy Sacred Body. Keep unsullied their lips daily purpled with Thy Precious Blood. Keep pure and unearthly their hearts, sealed with the sublime marks of the priesthood. Let Thy holy love surround them from the world's contagion. Bless their labors with abundant fruit, and may the souls to whom they minister be their joy and consolation here, and their everlasting crown hereafter.—Amen.

LETTERS OF FATHER BENSON.

The Sacrament of Penance.

. . . We must not wish to have cut-and-dried theories as to what is necessary for pardon. If we come to the Sacrament of Penance in a selfish spirit merely to get pardon, we are not likely even to get the pardon. We must confess our sins in order to glorify God: no lower motive will avail.

It is not for us to determine what sins may find pardon with God without absolution. The ordinary shortcomings of faithful people do not theoretically require such absolution—only mortal sins do that—but we come to seek not pardon only, or counsel, but renewing grace. An inferior priest may give absolution to a saint, although quite incompetent to direct such an one. A layman may give direction, although incompetent to pronounce absolution. It is well for us sometimes to have the one without the other, that we may learn to value each separately. If we use Sacramental Confession aright we ought to feel that the absolution has a real sanctifying efficacy for our present daily life, quite independent of our final pardon, and quite independent of any advice given to us by the confessor.

Christ's Presence in the Holy Eucharist.

We must not think of our Lord as descending to the conditions of earthly locality and contact by His presence in the Holy Eucharist. His presence is after a heavenly and spiritual manner—a real presence—whereas what is local and earthly is transitory and unreal. His Body is now passed into the heavens, to the reality of eternal glorification. He comes to us in the Holy Eucharist to be our spiritual food, raising us who feed upon Him out of the conditions of merely earthly life, to share His glory. So we are bidden, "Lift up your hearts." A presence by which He should descend to earth would be a second humiliation. His presence in the Holy Eucharist, so far from being a humiliation, is only possible by reason of His being glorified. He ascended up that He might fill all things. Being glorified, He can manifest Himself wheresoever He will, without motion or change. He loses none of His glory by taking the consecrated elements into union with Himself by the power of the Holy Ghost.

RENTALS OF PEWS OR SITTINGS

Persons desiring pews or sittings are requested to apply to the Accounting Warden after eleven o'clock Mass, on Sundays or communicate with him at his office in the Clergy House.

PARISH NOTES.

The alms box, at the foot of the south aisle, has been restored for the use of those who may desire to make an offering at the weekday Masses.

As Christmas Day falls upon Monday this year, the clergy will keep their usual hours on Friday and Saturday, but confessions will not be heard on Sunday the 24th.

In accordance with the Diocesan custom the offering on Christmas Day will be given to the Christmas Fund of the Diocese. Offerings for any other purpose must be designated.

Several requests have been made as to where pictures of the church may be obtained. Mr. Matthews, 915 Sansom street, has the plates, and will be very glad to fill any orders.

The Children's Christmas Festival will be held on the evening of Holy Innocent's, December 28. Contributions are asked for defraying the expenses and also for the decorating of the church at Christmas time.

A very attractive card has been printed for distribution among the children during our Patronal Feast. It bears a photograph of the statue of our patron which stands among the figures on the reredos of the High Altar.

The stonework of the new memorial window is finished, but some time may be required for the completion of the stained glass. The window will be a great addition to the church, and it is hoped that it may inspire other persons to make similar gifts.

The members of the congregation will be interested to know that Father Underhill and his sister are to sail for the Philippines in January, where they will take up work in Sagada with Father Staunton. St. Clement's has a grateful remembrance of Father Underhill's ministry in the parish, and we are sure that many prayers will aid him in his new venture for God.

The Crucifix and Mass lights that stood on St. Katharine's Altar formerly have been placed on a shelf at the foot of the south aisle. A dossal is to be hung behind them, and the arrangement will give added dignity to the font. It is hoped that eventually we may be able and have a proper baptistry, possibly built out from the wall of the church. A wooden platform has also been constructed around the font, which adds greatly to the convenience of the clergy.

For the second or third time during the last few years we ask the members of the parish who attend the weekday Masses or other services in the church to use the pews near the Altar and not remain in the back of the church. Also, it is most desirable that all should join audibly in the service in a tone which can be heard by the celebrant. It is the custom at Mass to say, "Praise be to Thee, O Christ," after the gospel. This seems to have been omitted of late. It is always sung at High Mass and should be said at Low Mass.

ST. CLEMENT'S TIDE.

In spite of inclement weather our Feast day was observed with the usual solemnities. The number of communions at the early Masses was not as large as could have been wished, although the number exceeded last year by one. The Solemn Mass, of course, drew those who appreciate the beauty of Gounod's music, but whose devotional fervour failed to stir them to the point of making an "early morning sacrifice."

The choir rendered the Mass wonderfully well. Our tenor, Mr. Wilson, was unfortunately ill, but his place was filled by Mr. E. Lewis, from the choir of the Second Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Huntington rendered the baritone solos, and Master George Wells was the soprano soloist. On Sunday the music was of the same high order, and we were fortunate in having Mr. Wilson with us for the tenor solo work.

On St. Clement's Day Father Staunton gave an inspiring sermon on his work in the Philippines, and in the evening delivered an illustrated lecture in the Parish Hall. It is to be regretted that the severe storm prevented many from being present.

Dr. Jenks, from the General Theological Seminary, preached on Sunday morning, and our friend, Father Richardson, of St. Mary's occupied the pulpit on Sunday night.

Incidentally it might be stated that in spite of urgent appeals, the offering toward the parish debt amounted to a little less than fifteen hundred dollars. As this is only half of the amount asked for, it is evident the members of the parish fail to realize their privileges and their responsibility.

The parish tea was held on Tuesday night. A goodly number were present.

Musical numbers were rendered by Miss Rachel Hausam, soprano; Mr. Robert Papy, violin, and a double quartette made up of members of St. Clement's choir.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

The Sunday School is growing larger and larger each succeeding Sunday. Christmas is too far off, or has been up to this writing, to have caused any decided increase in fervor. The Catholic Faith in its entirety must be the pulling force that is drawing children to us. It is the Catholic Faith taught by those who believe and practice it, for one does not hesitate for a moment in claiming that St. Clement's Sunday School has a most earnest and devoted staff of teachers.

On Monday night in the Octave of St. Clement the children had their own festival. Miss Williamson kindly consented to come and tell the children some stories in her own delightful way. Everyone there—the little children as well as the grownups—throughly enjoyed listening to fascinating tales of the "wee folk" and Christmas stories. Afterwards there were games and then refreshments.

THE EVENING MEETING.

The Evening Meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary, held November 8, was very interesting. Miss Sprecher, the Secretary of the Afternoon Meeting, gave an instructive resume of the meeting held the previous Friday, including the reports of various Committees, and the address made by Mrs. Ralph North, who has just returned from the Convention of the Woman's Auxiliary in St. Louis. Plans were then made for sending a box of clothing and other articles to Father Lobdell, whose people have suffered so terribly from the cloudburst and its consequent floods and landslides.

The attendance was very encouraging, and all women of the parish who are unable to attend the afternoon meeting are most cordially asked to be present at the evening meetings the second Wednesday of each month, so that they may take part in the work of the Woman's Auxiliary.

THE GIRLS' CLUB.

On the first Tuesday of November the annual election of the Girls' Club was held in the Parish Hall. The following officers were elected for the year: President, Miss Lucy Decker; Vice-President, Miss Naomi Lush; Secretary, Miss Jessie Forrester; Treasurer, Miss Elsie Williams.

On the second Tuesday evening the first meeting of the dancing class was held under the direction of Mrs. Miller. Mrs. Miller is one of the best dancing teachers in the city. The dancing class will prove a decided success if one may judge from the first meeting.

The club has developed activities along athletic lines also, and the girls are enthusiastic over the prospects of forming a basket ball team.

CONFIRMATION.

The Bishop Suffragan has signified his intention of visiting the parish on Sunday evening, February 4th. Those who may be looking forward to Confirmation are asked to hand their names to the clergy.

PARISH FINANCES.

Since St. Clement's Day several contributions have been received toward the payment of the parish debt, which has now been reduced to about six hundred dollars. This is encouraging, and makes us naturally desirous that the entire amount should be on hand at an early date, so that we may start our fiscal year with a clean slate.

The children of the parish have been interested in collecting over eight hundred pounds of paper, on which about five dollars was realized. This was contributed toward the indebtedness. If the adults of the parish would manifest as much interest as the children, there would be little need of anxiety concerning funds for parish maintenance.

CHRISTMAS-TIDE.

We have had a very joyous Christmas-tide at St. Clement's. A large number made their communions at the early Masses on Christmas Day, and there was an unusually large congregation at the Solemn Mass. The choir sang Mozart's Seventh Mass, and showed that the painstaking effort of Mr. Fry had borne fruit. The Mass was exceedingly well rendered and the whole service one of peculiar devotion.

On Thursday evening, December 28, the children of the Sunday School gave a mystery play, under the direction of Father Caine. This year the "Bethlehem Episode," from the "Soul of the World," by Mrs. Percy Dearmer, was produced, with a prologue and epilogue added from the "Key of Life," by Frederick George Scott. Several musical numbers were introduced, including the "Angel Chorus" from the Gloria in Excelsis of St. Cecilia's Mass, a pastorale from "Nöel's Francais," by Julien Tiersot, and several carols.

Mr. Steele presided at the piano, assisted by the Messrs. Pile, who played the violin and 'cello.

The scenery, which was used last year, was erected again, with the addition of the inn at Bethlehem, and the electric lighting of the stage was greatly improved.

The children recited their lines very clearly, and the play was distinctly devotional and helpful.

Our hearty thanks should be extended to those whose interested co-operation made the "mystery" a possibility.

After the play the presents were distributed from the tree in the rear of the hall.

THE SAGADA HYMN.

Hark to the Angel from Heaven who came,
Gabriel, joyfully praising thy name,
"Hail highly-favored one, God is with thee; Mother of God's only Son shalt thou be."
Ave Maria—so full of grace,
Chosen of God—pride of our race:
Hail! blessed Mother of Jesus our King
To thee our praises for ever we'll sing.

Hark to the praises all people have sung,
Calling thee blessed all women among;
Blest in believing the Heaven-sent word,
Blest in accepting the will of the Lord.
Great was thy joy—Holy thy Child,
Mother most pure—Maiden most mild:
Hail! gracious Mother of Jesus our King
To thee our praises for ever we'll sing.

Hark as our prayer we now add to our praise
Thy intercession we beg thee to raise
For us, for all men, most humbly we cry
Now and whenever our death draweth nigh.
Pray for us now that we may be Worthy of Heaven—worthy of thee:
Hail! loving Mother of Jesus our King
To thee our praises for ever we'll sing.

Tune: "Glory for Me."

A MESSAGE FOR LENT.

MY DEAR PEOPLE:

As the Lenten season approaches, it is well for us to consider how, by the help of the Holy Spirit, we may make it a time of benefit to the Parish, and of spiritual refreshment to ourselves.

We should begin our Lent with a real sense of co-operation. Let us strive to realize that we are "members one of another," and that the more deeply we appreciate this spiritual union, the greater will be the fruit of our Lenten devotions. Let each one of us, then, determine to enter into the Parish life of devotion as earnestly and as whole heartedly as may be.

First—The life of prayer. The daily Masses should be largely attended. If one is unable to be present each morning, then one should select certain days when attendance may be possible, and put this in one's Lenten Rule.

The daily service of Intercession is a most blessed method of "working together with God." Try to be present every day, for the full quarter of an hour. Besides the corporate intercession, one should make some person or object a matter of special prayer for the entire six weeks.

Secondly—The life of abstinence. Put away from you all worldly pleasures. Do not be found at public places of amusement. Refuse all invitations to social functions, and observe all the Fridays with special devotion.

Thirdly—Almsgiving. Try to lay aside a definite amount for your Easter offering and endeavour to help the needy poor. If you are not supporting the Church by regular contributions, ask for weekly envelopes. The offering at the daily Evensong is devoted to the support of Diocesan Missions. Give as liberally as you can, and remember always that the gift should be the result of real sacrifice—the giving up of some pleasure or thing much desired, that one may have more to dedicate to God.

Fourthly—Increase the number of Communions, and prepare very carefully for the reception of the Blessed Sacrament. There is no greater, or better, way of uniting the soul to God, and cementing our membership in the One Body, than the devout reception of the Body and Blood of Christ.

Make special resolutions against pride, selfishness, and gossip; and strive to cultivate humility, generosity, and charity.

If we enter upon our Lenten fast in the true spirit of repentance and with real humility, we may look confidently for God's Blessing upon the Parish and our own souls.

Affectionately in our Lord,
CHARLES S. HUTCHINSON.

Septuagesima, 1917.

St. Vincent's Guild held its annual dinner at the Clergy House on the evening of January 17. Father Kellogg, rector of St. John's, Portsmouth, New Hampshire, was a special guest.

During Lent the following retreats will be held:

Ash Wednesday—Parochial retreat. Addresses 10, 12 and 3. Fr. Niblo, Conductor.
Mid Lent Sunday—Retreat for women.
Thursday in Holy Week—Retreat for St. Mary's Guild.

The Mission Study Class, under the direction of Mrs. Arthur Van Harlingen, has been well attended and much interest has been shown. The first session was held on Thursday, January 4, after the 9.30 Mass. The subject for this year is "The Church's Mission to Latin America." The following is the outline of study for the seven sessions: "The Church's Mission to Latin America," "The Country and the People," "Porto Rico" and the "Canal Zone," "Cuba and Haiti, Mexico, Brazil" and "The Missionary Life."

IMPORTANT CHANGE.

The last regular monthly meeting of St. Clement's Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary was held Friday, January 5th, when Rev. Father Andrews, of Japan, was the speaker. Very few of us have the opportunity to visit the Far East and see the actual work that the Church is doing in that part of the mission field. The next best thing is to hear about the work from one who has been engaged in doing it. Father Andrews presented in a very interesting way the Church's work in Japan.

It is the desire of the Woman's Auxiliary to have every woman of the Parish attend the meetings, and to help by their prayers and personal interest. Owing to the decrease in attendance the past few months it was decided to change the day of meeting, hoping to gain a better attendance.

The next meeting will be held Friday, February 9th, at 3 P. M., in the Parish Hall, and all the meetings hereafter will be held on the second Friday of the month instead of the first, as heretofore.

The speaker on February 9th will be Mrs. Thomas C. Wetmore, of Arden, N. C., who will talk about the work at Christ School, and the offerings that day will be towards the pledge of $75 for the priests' stipend.

THE GIRLS' CLUB.

On Sunday afternoon, December 31, a number of the girls went to Blockley and sang Christmas Carols for the Sunday School, which is under the care of Fr. Millet, the chaplain of the hospital.

On Tuesday evening, January 2, the annual turkey supper was held in the Parish Hall. The rest of the evening was given over to playing games. In all there were thirty-five present.

The Dancing Class continues its meetings on the second and fourth Friday evenings of each month.

ST. CLEMENT'S BURIAL LOT.

After many years of waiting, the Parish has at last secured a burial lot. The fund for this purpose was commenced by Father Moffett, several years before his death, at the time when the Mortuary Guild of St. Vincent severed its connection with the Parish.

A plot of ground has been purchased in Mount Peace Cemetery, bordering on Nicetown Lane, and directly opposite the church yard of St. James the Less.

Such a lot has long been needed, and we trust that the congregation may be moved to make special gifts for the erection of a proper cross.

LENTEN SERVICES.

In addition to the Bible Class on Tuesday mornings an Address will be made after Evensong on Wednesdays (excepting Ash Wednesday), a Meditation will be given after the 9.30 Mass on Thursday mornings and the Stations of the Cross will be said as usual on Friday evenings, preceded by a sermon. A service for the children will be held on Ash Wednesday and Friday afternoons at 4 o'clock. The usual intercession will be made on every week day at 4.45 P. M. in the church.

THE LEAGUE OF INTERCESSION

Last month the League of Intercession was a year old since its reorganization. There has been a meeting each month for intercession with an address on some aspect of the prayer life and on one Sunday each month the intention at the 8 o'clock Mass has been for the League. The third Friday has finally been settled upon as the day of meeting and the intention at Mass has been on the third Sunday.

The League is not something about which one can say much. It does not advertise either the Parish or itself but it serves a much more real purpose than any organization which might be substituted for it. There is no financial report from a treasurer, no account of meetings from a secretary to be submitted. Nevertheless the work has been done and a work for which the clergy are most grateful. The prayers of its sixty odd members is a real force, which can not be measured.

May we state again, that the membership of the League is not limited to women? The effect of prayer is two-fold —a deepening of the spiritual life of the one who is offering the prayer—and a laboring together with God. It is hoped that the men of the Parish will be willing to make this venture for God, for their own good and the good of the Parish.

SAMUEL J. KENNEDY

Of your charity pray for the repose of the soul of Samuel J. Kennedy, for many years a communicant of this Parish.

Rest eternal grant unto him, O Lord: and let perpetual light shine upon him.

PARISH FINANCES

When the Parish closed its last fiscal year in March, 1916, there was carried over to the new year a considerable indebtedness, and the Vestry felt it necessary to ask the parishioners for an offering of $1,500 on Easter to make possible the payment of outstanding bills or other current indebtedness.

Again a fiscal year is drawing to a close and can be closed with all bills paid and a clear cash balance carried over to the new year, provided every member of the Parish is willing to do his or her part to secure that greatly to be desired condition.

Quite a number of the members of the Parish who use the duplex envelopes are in arrears in their offerings, while a few of the holders of pews and sittings are in arrears in the payment of their rentals, the amount due for the rental of pews and sittings being approximately $400.

To all of these this special appeal is made that they make every effort to cancel their indebtedness in full, before the fiscal year closes on March 24.

The increased use of the duplex envelopes by members of the Parish thereby insuring greater and more systematic offerings both for Parish support and for the Mission work of the Church, is hoped to be brought about with the beginning of the new year. An "Every Member Canvass" has been authorized by the Vestry and will be made under the supervision of the Finance Committee. A spirit of willing cooperation on the part of all members of the Parish in the support of its work, in the keeping up of its services, and because of our appreciation of the privileges that we of St. Clement's enjoy, is the result hoped for from the canvass soon to be undertaken.

Surely in no better way can we show our appreciation of all that St. Clement's means to us, than by contributing to the very best of our ability, to its support.

Every member of the Parish shares in the responsibility and each of us should take pride in faithfully bearing our share.

The Accounting Warden is ready at any time to furnish envelopes to those desiring them, and the envelopes for the new year will be sent to all using them prior to March 25.

Announcement will be made later as to the object for which the Easter offering is to be devoted, as the Vestry takes action in the matter at its March meeting.

S. McKEAN BAYARD,
Accounting Warden.

February 22, 1917.

THE NEILL WINDOW.

The new memorial window is in place, but the formal blessing will be deferred until after Easter, when the inscription can be engraved upon the stonework. A full description of the window will then be given.

A LETTER FROM MISS RIDDELL.

[Perhaps no Lenten letter could be written which could convey a more potent message to genuine Christians than this which we have recently received from Miss Riddell. If anything can awaken us from our self-satisfaction, and arouse our interest in something beyond our own needs, surely this account of work among the suffering servants of Christ ought to move our hearts.]

MY DEAR AND REVEREND SIR: Some years ago, when the "Daily Bread League" was established it was understood that I should write to every member of it, to remind them when the day or days on which they were responsible for the food of the hospital fell due. It being so very difficult for those who give to remember when all their subscriptions should be met.

It was also understood that on those days we, in the hospital, should remember the donor of the food for the day in prayer. This has, I think, been quite faithfully carried out, but I have hitherto been unable to write as I at first hoped to do. Despite this failure on my part, provision for the days appropriated has come in fairly steadily and continuously. From this time on, however, I hope to send a letter either on, or very near to, each appropriated day, whether endowed or maintained by annual subscription, giving some item of news connected with the hospital, and thus also giving proof that we do not forget you on your day—November 23.

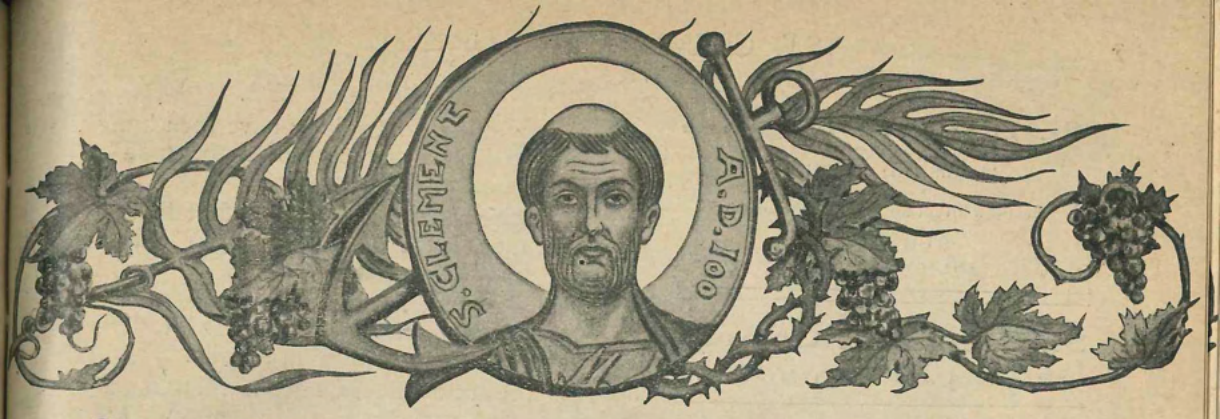
We have had an unusual amount of illness in the hospital during the early part of the year, and two dear girls who have been there since they were respectively nine and five years old have passed on—both very happily. One was 22 and the other 23 when the end came.

Malcolm, our young American patient, is in fairly good health, but during the spring one foot was very painful and he went about chiefly in a bath chair or sat in it in the sunshine. The foot is now much better and he is able to walk and often accompanies me through the hospital grounds.

Mrs. Thompson, of Shimonoseki, gave a beautiful "Corona" typewriter to Malcolm, and it was a great adjunct in every way, for although he has lost all feeling in his fingers—and every one of them is bandaged—and used the india rubber end of a lead pencil to work his typewriter he did it with marvelous celerity. He quite forgot his troubles in the joy of using it, but now even that consolation is denied to him, for the sight of his remaining eye has all but left him. He can no longer see a glass of water, for instance, if it is a white glass, but a colored glass he can discern sufficiently not to knock it over.

His graphophone is a great delight to him and I am most glad to receive records (especially American ones) for his use, and they are also greatly enjoyed by Mr. and Mrs. George (our other American subjects), who with their little son have a pretty house and garden in the hospital grounds. Mr. George suffers badly every spring, but this year his condition is better than ever before, owing to the new treatment—a serum composed chiefly of copper.

Recently we have buried such a dear woman, and feel nearer to the Kingdom of God by her passing. Her name was Makomo San, and she was 27 years old and had been ill since she was nine. Eighteen years of loathsomeness! And with it all she was always a little "gay" to the very end.



The poor broken body could not bear the weight of bedclothes, and the cradle which kept them off her hindered her seeing me sometimes when I passed; but just to hear my voice meant a poor stump being waved outside the cradle! Can you imagine it? A poor flat little palm without any fingers being waved at you, and always with a little glad air of "Here you are again!" I quite loved that poor palm and miss it dreadfully. But now I can think of her as having shed the dreadful body, and as beautiful beyond my ken, for hers was a truly beautiful spirit.

At present we have a very long intercessory list for those at the front in this terrible war, and the list for those who have already fallen is sadly growing.

With very many thanks for all your kindness, and especially asking for your prayers during this present year with so many shadows looming for us all, yet not without its ray of hope.

Believe me, ever sincerely yours, and very gratefully,

H. RIDDELL.

RENTALS OF PEWS OR SITTINGS

Persons desiring pews or sittings are requested to apply to the Accounting Warden after eleven o'clock Mass, on Sundays or communicate with him at his office in the Clergy House.

PARISH NOTES.

A new dossal and riddels have been hung behind the altar in the crypt chapel, and a dossal placed by the font.

As Good Friday falls on the first Friday of the month, the C. B. S. Vespers will be omitted for the month of April.

We have received word from the Church Mission House in New York that Fr. Underhill has arrived safely in Manila.

As a result of the notice concerning membership in the League of Intercession the name of one male communicant has been added to the list of members.

Donations of money for flowers for the Altar of the Blessed Sacrament on Maundy Thursday are asked. Donations may be sent to Miss Arnold, the Monterey Apartments, Forty-third street and Chester avenue.

It is suggested that those who attend the week-day services should leave the end seats free for persons coming late. This will result in a less scattered congregation and will promote a greater sense of corporate worship.

MAUNDY THURSDAY.

The attention of the congregation is called to the change made in the order of services for Maundy Thursday as noted on the Kalendar. The Solemn Mass will be sung at 7 A. M., and will be the only Mass said on that day. It is believed that this will insure a larger attendance, and furthermore it will be in accord with ancient custom which provides for one Mass only on this day.

THE GIRLS' CLUB.

The meetings of the Club for the last two months have been well attended. On Sunday, February 25, the members of the Club made a Corporate Communion at the 7 o'clock Mass. On the fourth Tuesday of each month there is a Church History Class conducted by the Rector. As a special Lenten work, the girls are sewing for the French Depot.

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY.

The last regular meeting of S. Clement's Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary was held on Friday, March 9. Fr. Townsend, Rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd, Rosemont, gave a very helpful spiritual address.

During the last two months the attendance at the meetings has been larger and a greater missionary interest shown. The various pledges for the year are being satisfactorily made up, but there are still a number of members in arrears who are urged to pay their annual dues or offerings before the April meeting, Friday, April 13. The April meeting marks the close of the fiscal year.

RENTALS OF PEWS OR SITTINGS

Persons desiring pews or sittings are requested to apply to the Accounting Warden after eleven o'clock Mass, on Sundays or communicate with him at his office in the Clergy House.

for Maundy Thursday as noted on the Kalendar. The Solemn Mass will be sung at 7 A. M., and will be the only Mass said on that day. It is believed that this will insure a larger attendance, and furthermore it will be in accord with ancient custom which provides for one Mass only on this day.

THE GIRLS' CLUB.

The meetings of the Club for the last two months have been well attended. On Sunday, February 25, the members of the Club made a Corporate Communion at the 7 o'clock Mass. On the fourth Tuesday of each month there is a Church History Class conducted by the Rector. As a special Lenten work, the girls are sewing for the French Depot.

BAPTISMS

"For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ."
March 4—Helen Dorothy Fulmer.
March 8—Joseph Bernard McKenna.
March 11—Beatrice Frances Haskins.

BURIALS

"Rest eternal grant unto them, O Lord, and let light perpetual shine upon them."
February 18—William Henry Keyser.

THE SISTERS AND THEIR WORK.

It is with regret that we must at this time announce to the congregation the withdrawal of the Community of All Saints Sisters of the Poor from parish work. This necessarily involves the severance of ties that have existed for many years. Ever since the days of the Cowley Fathers, the Sisters have rendered invaluable service to the parish, and they will be much missed. The Community is to devote its energies in the future to purely institutional work. St. Anna's Home, which has always been non-parochial, will be continued in another part of the city. We are sure that the prayers of our people will follow the Sisters in their new venture of faith.

It is a satisfaction to announce at the same time that we will not be left without Sisters. The Sisters of S. Margaret will take up the parish work. This Community is one of the oldest in England, having been founded by Dr. John Mason Neale at East Grinstead. The Sisters do a large work in this country, and in Philadelphia their habit is well known to most of us. There is no need to bespeak them a hearty welcome.

The date of the change is as yet undecided, but it is tentatively set for the early autumn.

CONFESSIONS.

The hours of the clergy for Holy Week are as follows:

Father Hutchinson, Tuesday and Wednesday, 10.30-11.30 A. M.; Maundy Thursday, 10.30-11.30 A. M., 3-5 P. M.; Good Friday, 7-8 P. M; Easter Even, 10-12 A. M., 7-9 P. M.

Father Quin and Father Caine, Wednesday and Maundy Thursday, 4-5 P. M. Good Friday, 3-5, 7-8 P. M.; Easter Even, 3-5, 7-10 P. M.

Persons are urged not to delay their confessions, but to come as early in the week as possible.

The following rules are suggested for those coming to confession.

1. When ready to make your confession, go and kneel in front of the confessional you intend to enter.
2. Do not sit nearer the confessionals than three pews from the back.
3. Always wait your turn.
4. As soon as the person ahead of you has left the confessional, enter at once.
5. Please invariably use the form printed on the confessional cards.
6. After your confession go to the front of the church for your devotions.

A careful observance of these rules will greatly aid the clergy.

THE EASTER OFFERING.

At the March meeting of the Vestry it was decided to devote the offerings on Easter Day to Missions. The amount received will be used towards paying our apportionment both for Foreign and Domestic Missions, and also for Mission work within the Diocese.

The sum received through the weekly offerings falls far short of the amount we are asked to give as our Parochial share of the sum required to carry on the Mission work of the Church, and it seems most fitting that at Easter we should make a special effort to fulfill what is, to say the least, a moral obligation resting on every true Christian, to spread the Gospel of the Risen Christ.

All offerings sent by the Accounting Warden to the Treasurer of the Board of Missions are designated so far as work in the Foreign field is concerned, towards the support of the work at Ichang, Hankow, being carried on by Fr. Wood.

Offerings for Domestic Missions are designated for work in the District of Salina, and also for work at Sagada, Philippine Islands.

Our apportionment for Foreign and Domestic Missions for the present fiscal year of the Board is $3,380.86, towards which there has been received and forwarded $819.76.

Our apportionment for Diocesan Missions for the present Diocesan year is $854.02, towards which there has been received and forwarded $153.21.

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY.

The last regular meeting of S. Clement's Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary was held on Friday, March 9. Fr. Townsend, Rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd, Rosemont, gave a very helpful spiritual address.

The April meeting marks the close of the fiscal year.

JUNIOR AUXILIARY.

A branch of the Junior Auxiliary has been organized in the Parish. The first meeting was held on Thursday, March 8, when about fifteen were present. It was found necessary to divide the branch into two parts. The younger girls, under fifteen years old, will meet on Thursday afternoon of each week under the direction of Miss Katharine Hunter, and the older girls will meet on Wednesday evenings, under the direction of Miss Ellanor Longstreth. Supper will be served in the Parish House at 6 o'clock on Wednesdays. The meeting will follow.

All girls of the Parish are invited to join.

The following officers of the Wednesday meeting have been elected: President, Charlotte Stokes; Vice-President, Marie Clark; Secretary, Margaret McElroy; Treasurer, Ontamenia Kline.

A LITTLE RULE OF THE CRUCIFIX.

Dost thou on a journey speed,
Pause and kiss the feet that bleed—
Feet that fared so far for thee
Ere they nailed them to the tree—
Bruised feet that yet keep pace
With the sinner fleeing grace.
Kiss My feet, then go thy way;
Danger shall not near thee stray.

Ere thy hands assume their task,
Of these hands a blessing ask—
Hands that spurned not nail and rule—
Cunning hands with Joseph's tool.
Bid My hands, outstretched to bless,
Handy make thy handiness.

When thy mind herself applies
To the things that make men wise,
Pause and kiss My thorn-crowned brow
And thou shalt have wits enow
For the little lore of men
And for things that angels ken.

When at morn or close of day
Thou wouldst set thyself to pray,
That thy lips may learn their art,
Humbly kiss this Sacred Heart;
Then again more humbly yet,
That thy lips their art forget.
While thou dost thy Saviour meet
Heart to heart in converse sweet.

RENTALS OF PEWS OR SITTINGS

Persons desiring pews or sittings are requested to apply to the Accounting Warden after eleven o'clock Mass, on Sundays or communicate with him at his office in the Clergy House.

PARISH NOTES.

The Paschal Candle was decorated this year by Miss Anna Pritchett.

On the rogation days the church will be open as usual from 6 A. M. to 9 P. M.

As usual, the collection on Ascension Day, will be devoted to the Summer Outing Fund of the parish.

The "United Offering" from St. Clement's Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary amounted to $124. This is the largest offering made by the Auxiliary in the history of the Parish.

Persons desiring to make their communions at the 9.15 Mass on Sundays and the 9.30 Mass on week-days, are asked to signify their intention to the celebrant before the service. This custom, which was observed for many years, has been disregarded of late.

During the war those members of the parish who are serving in the army and navy, will be commemorated silently at each Mass. The clergy would urge the congregation to send in the names of any young men of the parish who may enlist, that their names may be added to the rest.

The Parish Building has been put at the disposal of the diocese for any use for which it may be needed during the war, and it is hoped that the members of the congregation will respond willingly to any appeal that may be made to them for work which may lie in our path. It is too early for us to be able to say what may be asked of us, but there will doubtless be many opportunities for service along various lines.

The Altar Guild has completed a most beautiful set of purple vestments to be used at Solemn Mass, including dalmatic, tunicle and cope. They were blessed and worn for the first time on Palm Sunday, instead of the folded chasubles which have been used heretofore. The material is a rich dark blue damask, and the orphreys are conventional in design and beautifully worked in pale shades of pink and green silk and gold thread. The design upon the hood of the cope is a conventionalized pomegranate. The hood is the work of the Sisters of St. Mary at Peekskill.

EASTER.

In every way Easter was a very joyous feast at St. Clement's. The great number of confessions heard during Holy Week and the larger number of communions made at the parish church itself on Easter Day and through the Octave, showed a deep sincerity on the part of our people and the realization of the need of the Sacraments, especially so in our present stress. The church was well filled at each of the five Masses, and one could not help but feel that our Lord's Victory was being shared by those who had come to celebrate His Resurrection.

The Easter offering for Missions and other objects outside the parish amounted to $1,818.98, and for the parish there was received through the envelopes and designated cash offerings a total of $210.30. The Sunday School offerings on Sundays during Lent, together with the mite boxes, amounted to $32.82. This was sent to the Mission of St. Mary the Virgin, at Sagada, P. I.

The music was well rendered by the choir. Gounod's Mass, De Pâques, was sung in the morning. This is the first time in a number of years that this Mass has been heard at St. Clement's.

EASTER ELECTION.

At the Easter election, held on Monday, April 9, the following named gentlemen were elected as Vestrymen, to serve for a period of three years, or until Easter, 1920: Messrs. W. W. Lukens, Stevenson H. Walsh, Edward A. Casey, J. Lawrence Wetherill.

At the meeting of the Vestry on Easter Tuesday, Mr. F. D. Wetherill was appointed Rector's Warden.

Mr. S. McKean Bayard was elected Accounting Warden and Mr. Caleb F. Wright was elected Secretary.

The following members of the Vestry were elected as Delegates to the Diocesan Convention: Messrs. Francis P. Adams, S. McKean Bayard and Clinton Rogers Woodruff.

On Wednesday evening, May 2, at 8.15 o'clock, in the Parish Hall, Mr. Matthew K. Sniffen, the Secretary of the Indian Rights Association, will give an illustrated lecture on the Seminole Indians, among whom he has been working. Members of the parish are cordially invited to attend. A silver offering will be taken for Indian Missions.

FANNY DARRACH.

On Friday morning, April 20, Fanny Darrach entered into life eternal at the advanced age of eighty-five years. Since the time of the Cowley Fathers, Miss Darrach has been a most devoted communicant of the parish. Years ago her work centered largely around the boys of the parish, for she was for a long time "choir mother," and her Choir Club was one of the most successful organizations that the parish has ever seen. Many young men to-day remember with gratitude and pleasure "Miss Fanny's" self-forgetful interest in their behalf.

Of late years, failing health prevented her from taking active participation in the parish life, but until the end she was interested in all that concerned St. Clement's.

She possessed a character of singular sincerity and devotion to what she believed to be right, and her unknown and hidden deeds of charity will be long remembered by many grateful hearts.

May she rest in peace.

That Mary, Clara and James may fully recover their health.

Roman Church, there is St. Patrick's on Twentieth Street, hardly ten minutes' walk from here; or the Cathedral, across Logan Square.

STRANGER—I wanted a real Catholic Church.

REV.—This is a real Catholic Church.

STRANGER — Oh! You see I am a stranger and I wanted to get to a church near the place where I am rooming. It is seven years since I have been in Philadelphia. I have been in Canada all that time, and I have never seen anything like this there.

REV.—That is very interesting, indeed. If you live nearby, the Cathedral will be more convenient.

STRANGER—You will excuse me for making the mistake. You see, you look so much like a priest.

REV.—I am a priest.

STRANGER—It is so easy to make a mistake. You don't mind, do you?

REV.—Not a bit. Do you know the time of the Masses at the Cathedral?

FANNY DARRACH.

On Friday morning, April 20, Fanny Darrach entered into life eternal at the advanced age of eighty-five years. Since the time of the Cowley Fathers, Miss Darrach has been a most devoted communicant of the parish. Years ago her work centered largely around the boys of the parish, for she was for a long time "choir mother," and her Choir Club was one of the most successful organizations that the parish has ever seen. Many young men to-day remember with gratitude and pleasure "Miss Fanny's" self-forgetful interest in their behalf.

Of late years, failing health prevented her from taking active participation in the parish life, but until the end she was interested in all that concerned St. Clement's.

She possessed a character of singular sincerity and devotion to what she believed to be right, and her unknown and hidden deeds of charity will be long remembered by many grateful hearts.

May she rest in peace.

AN EPISODE.

TIME—A weekday morning about ten-thirty.

PLACE—One of the rooms of the Parish House. One of the clergy is engaged in an attempt to find some article which he suspects is hidden under a pile of books. Wall maps and other paraphernalia. A woman enters.

REV. A. B. (turning about and extending his hand in cordial greeting)—Oh, is this Mrs. Jones?

STRANGER—I was looking for a Catholic Church.

REV.—You will pardon me, won't you? I was expecting a Mrs. Jones.

STRANGER—Is this a Catholic Church?

REV.—Yes, this is a Catholic Church; but not a Roman Catholic Church.

STRANGER—But the notice I saw downstairs read that there were Masses.

REV.—Yes, there are Masses. That is what we call the service.

STRANGER — Isn't this an Episcopal Church?

REV.—Probably that is what you would call it, but we usually speak of ourselves as Catholics. If you were looking for a Roman Church, there is St. Patrick's on Twentieth Street, hardly ten minutes' walk from here; or the Cathedral, across Logan Square.

STRANGER—I wanted a real Catholic Church.

REV.—This is a real Catholic Church.

STRANGER — Oh! You see I am a stranger and I wanted to get to a church near the place where I am rooming. It is seven years since I have been in Philadelphia. I have been in Canada all that time, and I have never seen anything like this there.

REV.—That is very interesting, indeed. If you live nearby, the Cathedral will be more convenient.

STRANGER—You will excuse me for making the mistake. You see, you look so much like a priest.

REV.—I am a priest.

STRANGER—It is so easy to make a mistake. You don't mind, do you?

REV.—Not a bit . Do you know the time of the Masses at the Cathedral?

STRANGER—No; I was going over to find out.

REV.—The Masses there are at 6, 7.15, 8.15, 9.15, 10 and 11.

STRANGER—Thank you, Father.

GENERAL SUMMARY.

A comparison of this report with the report submitted for the year ending March 24, 1916, shows that there has been a decrease in cash offerings for parish support of $565.60, an increase in envelope offerings for parish support of $289.36, and a decrease in the amount received from the rental of pews and sittings of $53.43.

But, as was stated in the report of a year ago, cash offerings, as there shown were above the average, as the parish had a considerable floating indebtedness to be taken care of, and, further, had large payments to make for repairs and necessary improvements.

This year the parish is practically free of all indebtedness, as the greater part of the balance, $105.43, still due the Burial Lot Fund of the special account for loans made the general account in 1914, has been received since the books for the year were closed. With this exception, all loans for current expenses have been paid off.

Offerings for Missions show a slight increase over those for the previous year. The small sum given to General Missions was received in envelopes of the preceding year. This year we have specified for what objects Mission offerings are to be used by the Board of Missions, but in such a manner that they have been duly credited on the apportionment of the parish.

Practically all offerings for Foreign Missions have been for the support of the work of Rev. R. E. Wood, Ichang, Hankow. About one-half of the amount given for Domestic Missions went for the support of the work at Sagada, Philippine Islands. where Father Underhill, a former curate of the parish, is now working with Father Staunton. The balance went for work in the district of Salina (Kansas), save in a few instances where offerings were designated for other objects.

A very considerable decrease in the income from the Yarnall Fund during the past year applicable to the work of the parish, made necessary certain expenditures from current income for the salaries of the choir, as well for altar supplies and other items.

By a change made by the city as regards the date at which bills for water rents are presented and become due, the amount expended for water rents covers both 1916 and 1917.

During the summer of 1916 electric light was introduced in the Clergy House, the cost of the wiring and fixtures being paid for from the Yarnall Fund for repairs and improvements. This has naturally resulted in a considerable decrease in the use of gas, and has further resulted in a decreased expenditure for lighting, gas and electricity combined, of $16.27.

A bequest of $2,000 for the Endowment Fund was received in the past year from the estate of Miss Patty D. Neill, and a further bequest of $3,000 was made the parish by Miss Neill for the creation and endowment of the "Neill Fund for Coal and Country Week."

Insurance carried on the church property amounts to $209,800, and the parish is also protected by both liability and compensation insurance.

The parish is this year paying from the Education Account for the tuition of three students: two at Kent School, Kent, Conn., and one at the Donaldson School, Md.

A total of 166 books and pamphlets were added to the Library in the past year, a relatively small number when the amount of income available is taken into consideration, but it has been a practical impossibility to import books. A shipment of considerable size and value is now ready and being hold in London until it can be safely forwarded.

There was a decrease in income from the Yarnall Estate during the past year, as compared with the year preceding of $1,586.56, one-half of which directly affected income for parish purposes through the Parish Maintenance and Repair Accounts. The decrease was due to the Trustee having to make certain extraordinary repairs to property belonging to the estate, and to increased taxes, etc.

BOUDINOT FUND.

During the past year payments were made chargeable against principal, amounting to $2,044.39, and on March 24, 1917, the balance of income amounted to $273.25.

ENDOWMENT FUND.

The annual report of the Pennsylvania Company for Insurance on Lives and Granting Annuities, Trustees, shows that this Fund now amounts to $41,705.70.

Respectfully submitted,

S. McKEAN BAYARD,
Accounting Warden.

We do hereby certify that we have examined the report of the Accounting Warden for the year ending March 24, 1917, have compared vouchers with record of payments made, have examined the assets and find the report to be correct as above set forth.

MATER IMMACULATA

Mother, whose virgin bosom was uncrost
With the least shade of thought to sin allied;
Woman, above all women glorified,
Our tainted nature's solitary boast;
Purer than foam on central ocean tost;
Brighter than eastern skies at daybreak strewn
With fancied roses, than the unblemished moon
Before her wane begins on heaven's blue coast;
The image falls to earth.

Yet some, I ween,
Not unforgiven the suppliant knee might bend,
As to a visible power, in which did blend
All that was mixed and reconciled in thee
Of mother's love with maiden purity,
Of high with low, celestial with terrene.

—WILLIAM WORDSWORTH.

"It is very meet to bless thee, the Birth-giver of God, the ever-blessed and entirely spotless Mother of God, more honorable than the Cherubim, and infinitely more glorious than the Seraphim, who didst without corruption bear God the Word, thee verily the Theotokos we magnify."—From the Russian Liturgy.

PARISH NOTES.

Gifts of flowers for the Altar during the summer will be most acceptable.

The meetings of the League of Intercession have been discontinued until autumn, and also the Tuesday morning Bible class.

The proper for Corpus Christi has been beautifully illuminated and engrossed by Miss Marion Monroe and inserted as an extra page in the new missal.

The Mothers' Meeting held its last meeting for work on May 31. The services in Chapel will be continued throughout the summer as last year.

The annual meeting of St. Saviour's Ward of the Confraternity of the Blessed Sacrament will be held on Wednesday, June 6. Vespers will be sung at 5.15, followed by the business meeting.

Mr. Reginald Genois has received his appointment as Scoutmaster for St. Clement's Troop, and was installed on May 10 in St. John's Chapel. Our former Scoutmaster, Mr. Theodore M. Casey, is at Fort Niagara.

After Trinity Sunday the 8 o'clock Mass on Sundays and the 7.30 Mass on weekdays will be omitted until the autumn. After July first Evensong will be said on Sundays at 5 o'clock in St. John's Chapel and the evening service will be omitted.

Contributions are asked for the Choir Outing Fund. We would like to be able to send the boys away to camp this summer, but last year the funds were quite insufficient to meet the expense. Gifts may be sent to the Rector or the Accounting Warden.

Members of the congregation who are leaving the city for the summer are urged to provide for the support of the parish during these coming months. We hope very much that the Accounting Warden may not find it necessary to borrow money in order to pay our bills.

TALKING IN CHURCH.

Only the most necessary conversation should be carried on in Church. Of late several people have seemed strangely careless in this particular. It is most irreverent to enter upon lengthy discussions in the Presence of the Blessed Sacrament, and the members of the congregation who may wish to speak with one another are asked to use the Church corridor for that purpose.

This, of course, does not apply to those desiring to consult the clergy on some spiritual matter.

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY.

The annual meeting of St. Clement's Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary was held Friday, May 11, at 3 o'clock, in the Parish Hall.

After many years of faithful and devoted leadership, Mrs. George H. Lea resigned as President of the Auxiliary. A rising vote of thanks by all the members present was given Mrs. Lea for her willingness in serving so long, and for her great help in the work of the Auxiliary by her keen interest and judgment, ripened through long experience.

On looking back over the past year there is cause for great thankfulness for the increased opportunities afforded for work.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows:

President—Mrs. Charles Joline.
Vice-President—Mrs. Paul Mowry.
Secretary—Miss Helen E. Sprecher.
Treasurer—Miss Gladys Connelly.

The Flag of the Nation is the symbol of its greatness—not its military or geographical greatness, but its greatness in service.

The red, white, and blue are the colors of sacrifice, of purity, and of loyalty. Let us follow after Jesus Christ our Lord in these three ideals while we "grasp His banner still;

Though all its blue be dim,
These stripes, no less than stars,
Lead after Him."
—From The Messenger.

PARISH NOTES.

Evensong on Sundays will be said, ~~at~~ and 5 o'clock and the 8 o'clock service omitted until further notice.

On St. Barnabas' Day, Father Hutchinson kept the twentieth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood; Father Caine his sixth, and Father Steele the first to the diaconate.

Commencing July 1st, the week-day services will be said in St. John's Chapel, with the exception of the Mass on Mondays, when a requiem will be said in the Lady Chapel at 7 A. M. Matins will be said daily at 7.30.

We offer our congratulations to our good friend, Father Odell, the Rector of the Annunciation, on his election as Trustee of Nashotah, and also that he has received the degree of Doctor of Sacred Theology from the same institution.

Application has been made for the authority to form an auxiliary of the Red Cross at St. Clement's. As yet the official recognition has not been received. Full information may be obtained from Mrs. Paul F. Mowry, chairman, 844 North Sixty-third street.

Contrary to the expectations of some of our friends, we are not starting a potato patch in the church yard. The ground has been dug up and enriched, and grass seed sown, and we are hoping for a more sightly lawn. The bricks along the edges of the walk have been reset and the garden is much improved in appearance.

Up to the present writing about $50 have been received for the Summer Outing Fund. This is not nearly enough for the work that ought to be done and must be done this summer in sending away for a little breath of fresh air those who really need to get out of the city. Contributions are again asked for this work of the parish.

Father Quin is taking a portion of his holiday at Ventnor. He will return the middle of July, and finish his vacation in September. The Rector will leave for New England on the 28th of June. Father Caine will be away from the middle of July until September 1st, and Father Steele will leave on August 1st. During August, Father Bingham will supply and Father Webber-Thompson in September.

THE MOTHERS' MEETING.

On the last Thursday in May there was an exhibition of the work done by the members of the Mothers' Meeting. During the past year two hundred garments were made, beside quite a lot of knitted articles, and a hundred rag-carpet balls. The work was packed and sent to Mrs. Wetmore, Christ School, Arden, N. C. The enrolment shows one hundred and ten teachers and members.

On Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, a moving picture machine furnishes entertainment for the men, and at times some of the local theatrical talent give performances. Outside of the tent are places where handball or quoits may be played.

Besides this type of social and religious work, regular personal visiting of the men is carried on. For this work a number of the Philadelphia clergy are giving one afternoon and evening each week. Among this number are some of our friends, Fathers Niblo, Fairman and Craven, of St. Mark's Parish, Father Veits, of St. Peter's, and Father Steele, of our own parish.

This whole work is most promising, and offers a limitless field where help is most needed. The men are young and in real need of this personal service. They are wonderfully responsive and appreciative of any little thing done for them. The laymen of the Church could help in a very practical way, if they would ask some of these men out for dinner, or to a party, no matter how simple, or furnish money so that some of the poorer boys could go to a "movie" once in a while.

ALMSGIVING, PRAYER, AND FASTING.

We hear a great deal at times of the three notable Christian duties, almsgiving, prayer, and fasting—both in instructions and in the private conversations of Catholics. We now have the opportunity to put to a very practical and personal test our belief in these three Christian duties.

As a country, we have given and will give generously to the work of equipment and relief. For the most part this seems to be the easiest of the three duties to fulfil.

A great body of the Christian people of the United States have answered the call to prayer. Many more might, and this is true also of members of our own parish. The 7 o'clock Mass on Wednesdays is offered for peace. Many more could attend than do, not only this Mass but other Masses.

Lastly, our country, as well as our Church (the Bishop in his Convention Address) is calling each one of us to practice self-restraint. The following is quoted from a letter which Mr. Herbert Hoover has sent to all the clergy in the United States. The italics are our own.

"To meet the needs of the war and of the world, we must produce generously, give freely to our Allies, ourselves eat as much but no more than we need, and especially save the waste. Lasting disgrace will fall upon us if lack of self-restraint should prevent us from taking our proper part in this great conflict against the doctrine of 'might makes right.'

"The waste in food amounts at least to fifty dollars a year for every family in America. The waste of a single ounce of food each day in every home means a yearly waste of nearly five hundred million pounds of food. The waste of a single slice of bread each day in every home means the daily waste of a million loaves of bread. The thousand million dollars of needless waste which thus takes place yearly in the households of America can and should be stopped.

"The ways of thrifty living are not new. In order to practice them we need do little more than return to the frugal habits of earlier days. To purchase wisely; to lose nothing for lack of proper care; to serve no more than hunger demands; to serve again the unusued portion; to preserve in time of plenty against the lean months ahead; to save wheat for France and England by eating more corn ourselves, because they do not bake at home, and corn bread is unknown; these are some of the means of helping to save the waste and win the war."

This needs no further comment. It is a personal responsibility. Don't try to escape it by saying what one person does can't make very much difference. It does.

WORK AT LEAGUE ISLAND.

The Church has realized the seriousness of the responsibility of looking after the thousands of young men now at the Philadelphia Navy Yard, and has taken up with great earnestness the problem of ministering to them. Chaplain Dickins is at the head of the work; and already he has four assistants who are devoting their whole time to organizing and superintending the activities in the Yard. A large tent has been provided by the Clergy Reserve Corps, where services are held on Sunday, and on week-days the "Bee Hive," as it is called, is the centre of the social life of the men. At one end of the tent there is a raised platform, on which is a library, piano and graphophone. The remainder of the tent is filled with benches and tables. All the latest papers and periodicals are provided and a good supply of writing material is kept on hand.

On Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, a moving picture machine furnishes entertainment for the men, and at times some of the local theatrical talent give performances. Outside of the tent are places where handball or quoits may be played.

Besides this type of social and religious work, regular personal visiting of the men is carried on. For this work a number of the Philadelphia clergy are giving one afternoon and evening each week. Among this number are some of our friends, Fathers Niblo, Fairman and Craven, of St. Mark's Parish, Father Veits, of St. Peter's, and Father Steele, of our own parish.

This whole work is most promising, and offers a limitless field where help is most needed. The men are young and in real need of this personal service. They are wonderfully responsive and appreciative of any little thing done for them. SUNDAY SCHOOL REPORT.

October, 1916, to June, 1917

During the past school year eighty-seven scholars were enrolled in the Upper School and twenty-three in the Primary Class. In the Women's Bible Class there were twenty, in the Young Women's Bible Class there were seven, and in the Young Men's Bible Class there were eleven. This makes a total enrolment of one hundred and forty-six, an increase of twenty-five over last year. The teaching staff numbers fifteen.

The curriculum which was followed this year was that recommended by the General Board of Religious Education. As a whole the courses have been very satisfactory. Some changes were made which would better adapt the instructions to our own needs. Most of the scholars kept note-books of their work. The best original work was done by Ontamenia Klein. Others who deserve honorable mention are Florence Erhardt, Irene Adams, Alice Erhardt, Leroy Hoyles, Jonathan Derrick, Stanley Coulthard, and William Boss.

On May 27 the classes were discontinued until the fall. During the summer it is planned to have a short catechical instruction after the 9.15 Mass on Sundays. This year the course will be on the Sacraments.

IN TIME OF WAR.

O Lord of lords and King of kings Who givest to every man his calling and to each nation its work, watch over our President and country at this time, and grant us to do Thy will on earth.

Give Thy guidance to those who bear command by sea or by land; remember all sailors and soldiers (especially . . .) and hold them in Thy keeping in life or death; and turn us to Thy peace again. Hear us, O Lord, from Heaven Thy dwelling place, and when Thou hearest, forgive; for the sake of Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

TWENTIETH AND CHERRY STREETS.

THE RED CROSS

The Auxiliary at St. Clement's is officially known as Auxiliary No. 233, of the Southeastern Pennsylvania Chapter of the American Red Cross. The first meeting was held July 11 at 10 o'clock.

The Auxiliary was organized with Mrs. Paul F. Mowry as chairman, and Mrs. Anna W. Speakman as Secretary-Treasurer. Sixteen members were present and work, real work, was immediately begun—over five dozen surgical towels were done the first day.

There was another meeting at 7.30 in the evening for those who were unable to be present in the morning. In spite of a heavy downpour of rain, six persons came "to do their bit."

The start of the work was most encouraging. There is no calendar on the battlefield—Sunday is just the same as Monday, or any other day of the week, and each day has its long list of wounded and hurt, and so there is no vacation. When it comes to the work of relief, midsummer is the same as midwinter. Any member of the Parish may belong to the Auxiliary. There is work for the men and boys as well as for the women. Materials have to be carried and some of the heavier work is more easily done by the boys. No money is necessary. There are no dues. The only necessary requirement is a willingness to work. One may, if one so choses, become a member of the Red Cross Society by paying an annual due of one dollar, but it is not necessary to become a member of the Red Cross Society before one can be a member of the Auxiliary.

The response to the call for workers has been most encouraging. Up to the present time of writing more than twelve dozen surgical towels, eight dozen surgical dressings, and several surgical shirts have been finished.

In starting the work, some initial expense will have to be met, amounting to about ten dollars. Contributions are asked to cover this amount.

WAR POSTERS

The following is a copy of two calls to prayer that have been posted at the two Twentieth street corners of the church property.

THE WAR.

A CALL TO PRAYER.

This church is open all day for prayer and intercession.

You are earnestly asked to come and pray for our country, our President, and those in authority.

For our saliors, soldiers, and airmen.

For our allies, and for our enemies.

For doctors and nurses, and all who serve in hospitals and camps.

For all prisoners and captives.

For the wounded, the dying, and the dead.

For the anxious, the sorrowful, and for a just and righteous peace.

"Our help standeth in the name of the Lord, who hath made Heaven and Earth."
—Psalm 124.

PRAYER.

Prayer is the soul's sincere desire,
Uttered or unexpressed;
The motion of a hidden fire
That trembles in the breast.

Prayer is the burden of a sigh,
The falling of a tear,
The upward glancing of an eye
When none but God is near.

Prayer is the simplest form of speech
That infant lips can try;
Prayer the sublimest strains that reach
The Majesty on high.

Prayer is the contrite sinner's voice
Returning from his ways,
While angels, in their songs rejoice,
And cry, "Behold, he prays!"

Prayer is the Christian's vital breath,
The Christian's native air,
His watchword at the gates of death:
He enters heaven with prayer.

The saints in prayer appear as one
In word, and deed, and mind,
While with the Father and the Son
Sweet fellowship they find.

O Thou by whom we come to God,
The Life, the Truth, the Way,
The path of prayer Thyself hast trod:
Lord, teach us how to pray.

J. MONTGOMERY, 1771-1854.

HINTS FOR CHRISTIAN COURTESY.

There are points of courtesy which every Churchman should know. Of course, the important thing is to be really reverent, whether we show it in these or in other ways. However, when one is really reverent, one cannot but show it. Reverence is courtesy to God. Here are a few points:

1. THE NAME OF JESUS.

Whether in Church or out, it is an act of open loyalty to bow the head at the name of Jesus; for we are Christians—Christ's men. He is our Captain; therefore, we salute Him.

2. KNEELING.

No thoughtful man is afraid to get down on his knees; he never says his regular prayers in bed (unless he is ill), nor does he "sit and lean forward" at prayers in Church. On the contrary, he is proud to be the servant of the King of Kings, and he is sorry for people who have such uneducated ideas of God that they talk to Him in this discourteous attitude. One also kneels on one knee or genuflects in passing before the Blessed Sacrament in Church or in a house where the Sacrament is being carried to the sick.

3. PASSING A CHURCH.

On passing a Church where the Blessed Sacrament is reserved, it is customary for men and boys to lift their hats in recognition of the Presence of our Lord.

4. FUNERALS.

When a funeral passes by it is a religious custom for men to raise the hat, or, if in uniform, to salute. This is in honor of the Christian dead; for the dead are nearer God; they have begun to understand many things which we do not know.

Besides, we always uncover the head when we say a prayer.

PARISH NOTES.

The 7.30 Mass on weekdays and the 8 o'clock Mass on Sundays will not be resumer until October 1.

Work on our new font is progressing, and it is hoped that it may be finished early in September. A description of this gift to the parish will be given in the October number of the magazine.

The Rector's Bible Class will resume its meetings on the first Tuesday in October, after the 9.30 Mass. A cordial invitation is extended to the members of the congregation, or others who may be interested, to join the class.

A series of National hymns is being prepared for use at St. Clement's. It will be printed as an addition to our hymnal, and of such shape and size as may be conveniently slipped into the books used in the church. We shall be singing one such hymn immediately after the High Mass every Sunday, just before the recessional.

The Sisters of St. Margaret will begin their work among us, God willing, on the first of October. We are sure that they will be warmly welcomed by the congregation. Sister Lydia will be the Sister in charge. The Rector will be glad to receive contributions toward the support of the work. An amount sufficient for house rental and furnishings must be provided. It is hoped that a house near the church in Cherry street may be procured.

The Sunday School will hold its first session on the first Sunday in October. It is important that all the children should be present at the opening of the school. A little earnest co-operation on the part of the parents is much to be desired. It would seem in many instances as if parents regarded the spiritual welfare of their children as a matter of the last importance. All else must have first place, and the formation of moral character and the training of the soul may take care of themselves. Needless to say the result is often disastrous.

THE CALL TO PRAYER.

We hope that many of the congregation will respond to the "Call to Prayer," which has been posted in the church yard. As the great conflict across the sea becomes more and more a reality to us, there ought to be an increasing desire on our part to commend our cause and the lives of those who make up our army and navy into the hands of an all merciful and loving God. There should be an increased attendance at the daily Masses, and individual parishioners should take the time from other lesser duties if need be, to spend a few moments in the church at least two or three times a week, if a daily visit is not possible. It is a time when, as a nation, we should be on our knees.

The "Roll of Honor" in the church vestibule lengthens steadily. Surely we owe it to those splendid young lives that are willing to lay down their all for us, that they shall have for their defence and shield the earnest prayers of the men and women of St. Clement's parish. It is the best and surest help that we can render.

The memorial that has been used at the Masses for the members of the parish who are in the service of their country will be continued as usual, and every Friday night there will be a special service of intercession in St. John's Chapel at 8 o'clock. This service will be incorporated into the serv-

The appended list of services for Base Hospital No. 10 should prove of interest to our communicants. It will be remembered that the Rector of St. Peter's is the chaplain, and that John Kuhns, one of our acolytes, and Miss Bertha Elliott, a parishioner, are on the hospital staff. We hear from many quarters of the excellent work that is being accomplished by Mr. Jefferys.

charge. The Rector will be glad to receive contributions toward the support of the work. An amount sufficient for house rental and furnishings must be provided. It is hoped that a house near the church in Cherry street may be procured.

The Sunday School will hold its first session on the first Sunday in October. It is important that all the children should be present at the opening of the school. A little earnest co-operation on the part of the parents is much to be desired. It would seem in many instances as if parents regarded the spiritual welfare of their children as a matter of the last importance. All else must have first place, and the formation of moral character and the training of the soul may take care of themselves. Needless to say the result is often disastrous.

BAPTISM.

MARRIAGES.

"Those whom God hath joined together let no man put asunder."

great conflict across the sea becomes more and more a reality to us, there ought to be an increasing desire on our part to commend our cause and the lives of those who make up our army and navy into the hands of an all merciful and loving God. There should be an increased attendance at the daily Masses, and individual parishioners should take the time from other lesser duties if need be, to spend a few moments in the church at least two or three times a week, if a daily visit is not possible. It is a time when, as a nation, we should be on our knees.

The "Roll of Honor" in the church vestibule lengthens steadily. Surely we owe it to those splendid young lives that are willing to lay down their all for us, that they shall have for their defence and shield the earnest prayers of the men and women of St. Clement's parish. It is the best and surest help that we can render.

The memorial that has been used at the Masses for the members of the parish who are in the service of their country will be continued as usual, and every Friday night there will be a special service of intercession in St. John's Chapel at 8 o'clock. This service will be incorporated into the service for the League of Intercession and the Confraternity Vespers.

The members of the congregation are urged to make an effort to attend these services—and also to join the League.

CATHERINE DOROTHEA KATES

On the thirteenth day of August, Catherine Dorothea Kates, our oldest and most reverend parishioner, entered into Life Eternal.

Present at the laying of the cornerstone of the church building, Miss Kates had been intimately associated with the parish for the greater part of her life, and throughout its entire history.

She loved very deeply the Church and the Faith to which it bears witness, and gave to each succeeding Rector her unwavering loyalty and support.

Although of late years physical infirmity forbade active participation in the parochial life, her spirit so dominated her frail body that a Sunday rarely passed that did not find her at the altar rail where she devoutly received the Bread of Life.

Modest and retiring in disposition, she shrank from any sort of ostentation, and would have her benefactions and countless deeds of charity hidden and unknown, but the parish owes her a debt of gratitude, and many will rise up to call her blessed.

May she rest in peace.

BASE HOSPITAL No. 10.

The appended list of services for Base Hospital No. 10 should prove of interest to our communicants. It will be remembered that the Rector of St. Peter's is the chaplain, and that John Kuhns, one of our acolytes, and Miss Bertha Elliott, a parishioner, are on the hospital staff. We hear from many quarters of the excellent work that is being accomplished by Mr. Jefferys.

EDWARD M. JEFFERYS, Chaplain

The Church Hut is the Brown Hut, No. 29, near the Officers' Mess.

A WELCOME.

We bid you heartily welcome to this hospital. Hundreds of men have already found here healing and rest. We hope that you, too, will leave us renewed and reinvigorated to face whatever the future may have in store.

AN OPPORTUNITY.

Your time here is in many ways an opportunity. In particular, it is an opportunity to learn more of God. If you have lost your copy of the New Testament, ask the Chaplain or Sister for one. Read about Jesus Christ, how He lived, and what He taught, and what He can be to you. The Gospel of St. Luke (page 62) is a good one for a beginning. Note especially chapters 6, 11, 15 and 23. Then read the fourteenth chapter of the Gospel of St. John.

A SUGGESTION.

Speak to God in prayer. He is your Father. He is very near you, and He will hear you. You have much to tell Him. Tell Him about yourself, your hopes and fears, your ambitions and weaknesses. Tell Him about your pain. Tell Him about your people at home and your friends at the front, in the trenches, with the guns, in the flying corps, or with the fleets. Pray also for the men in your ward, and for those who care for you in the hospital.

The Chaplain will be in the Church Hut for personal interviews on Saturdays, from 12.30 to 1, and from 9 to 9.30 P. M.

If you wish to see the Chaplain about anything, ask the Sister to send a message, and he will be very glad to come to see you. The Sister will also tell the Chaplain when you wish to receive the Holy Communion, and he will gladly bring the Holy Communion to you.

The Chaplain's Den is a sitting, reading and games room in the Church Hut. The door is at the east end of the Hut. You will always be welcome.

When you are able to leave the ward and walk about, come to the services in the Church Hut. Attend evening prayers daily (weekdays), 7 P. M., and Sundays, 6.30 P. M.). Help with the singing.

If you are a communicant, join with us in the Church Hut as soon as you are able, and receive the Holy Communion as a thanksgiving to God for His mercy to you. If you have not yet been confirmed, make up your mind to be confirmed at the first opportunity. The Chaplain will be glad to give you instruction and to arrange, if possible, for your confirmation.

PARISH NOTES.

The Red Cross Auxiliary has changed its meeting day from Tuesday to Friday. The gift or loan of a sewing machine will greatly help with the work which has outgrown the present equipment.

During August Rev. Fr. Bingham, Chaplain, of St. Mary's Convent, Peekskill, was with us as "supply," and the Rev. Fr. Webber-Thompson, of Jacksonville, Fla., was a member of the clerical staff for the month of September.

The Woman's Auxiliary will hold its first meeting on Wednesday, October 3, at 3 P. M. It will be preceded by a short service of intercession in the Chapel. The "evening" meetings will be resumed on Wednesday, October 10.

On the first of October, the Rev. Wallace Everton, a deacon of the Diocese of Maryland, will come to the Parish as one of the regular staff of clergy. Mr. Everton is a graduate of Johns Hopkins University and of the General Theological Seminary.

The members of the Parish will regret to learn that Father Steele will not be with us this winter. He has commenced work at Camp Meade under the direction of the Bishop of Maryland. We need not bespeak the prayers of St. Clement's people for him in his new work.

A new Roll of Honour has been prepared and framed and now hangs in the vestibule. As the number of names increases it will be necessary to confine the Honour Roll to actual members of the Parish who are in service. Other names will be printed in the Magazine and remembered by the League of Intercession.

The Sisters of St. Margaret have succeeded in securing the house at 2046 Cherry street and will come into the residence about the middle of October. The response to the Rector's appeal for the support of this work has been most generous, but he will be grateful for further contributions.

On Saint Luke's Day Father Quin will be celebrating the thirtieth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood. Two-thirds of his ministry have been spent in this Parish. The members of the Parish are asked to endeavour to be at Mass on that day and unite in offering the Holy Sacrifice as a thanksgiving for many years of faithful service.

THE NEW FONT.

The new font is completed and was blessed on the eve of St. Matthew. It has been placed at the end of the north aisle. This change was suggested for practical reasons. The old font was directly in front of the Lady Chapel, and the south door is in constant use as an entrance to the Church, so that baptisms were frequently interrupted by persons wishing to pass in or out. The new location is therefore much more convenient, and the new Baptistery gives an interest to the north side of the Church.

The font is carved from a single block of English red stone, of unusually beautiful texture and color. The cover is of carved oak, suspended by a chain of wrought iron. The walls have been wainscoted with brown stone, and a niche has been built into the wall to hold the Crucifix and candles.

The whole is the gift of a parishioner, and the inscription reads "To the Glory of God and in loving memory of Gertrude Longstreth and Frederic Dent Sharp."

Mr. Sellers has given us a design in perfect harmony with the building, and Mr. Maene, as always, has given his best in time and workmanship for the execution of the plan.

THE WORK AT THE PENITENTIARY.

It may prove of interest to the congregation to know that the City Mission has given the Rector charge of the work in the Eastern State Penitentiary, which has hitherto been carried on by Father Taylor, who, at the age of ninety-two, is the oldest priest in our Communion in "active service."

The opportunity is very great, and it ought to mean much to the Parish to be able to take part in this work. A large room was set aside some years ago to serve as a Chapel, where a proper altar can be set up with all the necessary appointments. Two Masses are celebrated each month at present, one for the men and the other for women. Every week confirmation instructions are given, and the prison authorities most cordially co-operate. The first service under our auspices was held on Thursday morning, September 20. Dr. Jefferys, the superintendent of the City Mission, and Father Taylor made addresses and Father Hutchinson celebrated. There were sixty-five communions. The prayers of the parishioners are earnestly desired for this work.

CONFIRMATION.

The Bishop of the Diocese has signified his intention of visiting the Parish to administer the Sacrament of Confirmation on Septuagesima Sunday, January 27, 1918, at 8 P. M. The clergy request that the names of those who desire to be confirmed, or the names of those who should be confirmed, who are known to members of the Parish, be handed in as soon as possible. Septuagesima seems far off now, but it takes a considerable amount of time to arrange for classes and private instructions, besides the actual time given to such instructions.

A CATECHISM.

ON

THE CHURCH MILITANT
THE CHURCH EXPECTANT
THE CHURCH TRIUMPHANT

BY THE

REV. C. S. GRUEBER

(Out of Print)

I. THE CHURCH

Q. What is the Church?

A. Holy Scripture calls it "The Kingdom of God" or "The Kingdom of Heaven." It is that Kingdom of which Christ is the Head or King.*

Q. Under what different states or conditions may the Church be considered?

A. Under three: The Church Militant; The Church Expectant; The Church Triumphant.

Q. What do you mean by the Church Militant?

A. I mean the Church as it exists on earth in a perpetual state of warfare against the world, the flesh, and the devil; the Church Visible.

Q. What do you mean by the Church Expectant?

A. I mean the Church of the Departed, of those who have died in the Grace of God, who can sin no more, and are now waiting for, and expectant of, the Day of Judgment, the Resurrection of the Body, and their final reward.

Q. What do you mean by the Church Triumphant?

A. I mean the Church of the Glorified Saints in Heaven.

N. B.—The Church is also called in Holy Scripture the "Body" of Christ, as in Ephes. i, 23; iv, 4; v, 30. Christ is the Head. The Church is His Body. Christians are the Members. By this is signified "the mystical union betwixt Christ and His Church."

*See Dan. ii, 44; S. Matt. xii, 28; xiii, 24, 31, 33, 44, 45; S. Mark i, 14; S. Luke xiii, 18, 20, etc.

Considerations of the being and offices of the Holy Angels are not intended to be entered upon in this Catechism.

Happiness goes out from the heart before it comes in. It never by any chance stays at home. You can harvest it for the common good, but you cannot store it for your sole individual use. You can lend it but you cannot borrow it, you can earn it but you cannot buy it, you can spend it but you cannot accumulate it. A man must contribute to the stock of human joys before he can participate in its profits. To seek happiness without giving it is a futile quest, and all our longings for what we have not learned to give to others are as empty bottles in the wine cellar of the soul. —Selected.

A CHEERFUL CHRISTMAS FOR "OUR BOYS."

It is the intention of St. Clement's Auxiliary of the Red Cross to send a "Christmas Bag" to each of the men of our Parish who is in active service. Any one desiring to contribute to this object is requested to communicate with Mrs. Mowry. The following directions have been printed by the "Overseas Committee":

Make a bag of any durable washable material, ten by thirteen inches in size, and fill it with not less than five or more than ten of the following articles: sleeveless sweaters, wristlets, knitted helmets, tobacco, pipe, cigarettes, cigarette papers, stationery, stamped envelopes, postcards, indelible pencil, fountain pen, pocket knife, tooth brush and paste, chewing gum, safety razor, shaving soap, metal mirror, coin belt, coin purse, pocket comb, wrist watch, khaki-colored handkerchief, beef bouillon cubes, malted milk tablets, playing cards, dominoes, checkers and other games, pocket edition of good books, folding drink-cups, strong, brown shoe strings.

Place in the bag a stamped postal if you would like an acknowledgment from a soldier.

Loose articles or money will be gladly received.

SATURDAY CLASSES.

The work which the children do on Saturday mornings is of a much wider scope than most members of the Parish realize. It has made itself felt as far as Ichang, and Sagada. Last June the children sent an offering of "missionary pennies," which amounted in all to twenty dollars. This was divided equally between St. Joseph's Trade School and the Sisters of St. Mary at Sagada.

Mr. Thacher Souder, in acknowledging the offering sent to St. Joseph's, writes from East Cliff, Pei Tai Ho, Chihli Province, China, where he was spending his vacation:

"Dear Father:

"Not two days ago I started a letter and now here comes a letter from you. I most certainly appreciate the money order from the children. It will go right into the work of the school to be used as Father Hayward thinks best. Please thank them and make them really feel that I realize it's meant a great deal for them to give so much, and that I am truly thankful.

* * * * * * *

"Pei Tai Ho is certainly a heaven to many a run-down missionary from the interior, and there are many here. It is on the coast quite far up, near Manchuria on the Chihli Sea, being the northern part of the Yellow Sea."

Sister Mary Sylvia, C.S.M., writes from Sagada, Philippine Islands:

"Dear Father:

"Your note, with its enclosure of $10, came in our last State's mail. Thank you and the children so much for the offering. Later I shall hope to be able to send some pictures of our houses and some of the children, among whom we live and work. * * * We will be glad if you and the children will remember us in your prayers. Conditions here are so utterly different from any mission work at home that one realizes so constantly the need of guidance in teaching and helping these people who come to us knowing nothing of any God. * * * St. Columba and Bishop Patterson are our Patron Saints."

THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY.

The first meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary for the winter was held Wednesday, October 3, with good attendance. It was preceded by a short devotional service in St. John's Chapel, led by Father Quin. The business meeting followed, and Mrs. A. F. Kempton gave an interesting account of the work being done by the Church Periodical Club.

Plans for the winter were discussed, and it was decided to send a Christmas box to the House of the Holy Name, in charge of Deaconess Whitaker, in Mexico City.

The following pledges for this year have been made by St. Clement's Branch:

$75 toward the salary of the priest at Christ School, Arden, N. C.

$50 for St. Clement's Scholarship at St. Mary's School, Sewanee, Tenn.

$25 to each of the five branches of Missionary Work—Colored, Indian, Domestic, Foreign and Diocesan.

$10 to the Daily Bread League of the Leper Hospital, Kumamoto, Japan.

$50 towards the salary of the priest at Shelby, N. C.

$100 for the work at Sagada, P. I.

Besides these pledges, considerable money is given for special purposes which are brought to the notice of the Auxiliary during the year.

It is the desire of the Woman's Auxiliary to have every woman of the Parish attend the meetings and to help by her prayers and personal interest. Auxiliary No. 1 meets the first Wednesday of each month at 3 P. M. Auxiliary No. 2 meets the second Wednesday of each month at 8 P. M.

The next meeting of Auxiliary No. 1, will be held Wednesday, November 7, when Mrs. John Markoe, President of the Pennsylvania Branch will be the speaker.

A CATECHISM.

II. THE CHURCH MILITANT.

Q. In speaking of the Church Militant or the Visible Church, do you intend to treat of the Church before the Advent of Christ as well as since the Advent of Christ?

A. I am now only speaking of the Church since the Advent of Christ, the Christian Church.

Q. By what title do we usually call it?

A. The Church "Catholic." We say in our Creed, "I believe in the Holy Catholic Church."

Q. What is the meaning of the word "Catholic"?

A. The word "Catholic" means Universal; and when we speak of the Church of Christ as being Catholic, we mean that it is not confined to any particular time or place or nation, as the Church of Israel was, but that it is to be extended to all times, all places, and all nations.

Q. What other reason is there why the Church is called Catholic?

A. The Church is also called Catholic, because it teaches all truths necessary to be known, and administers all the means of Grace necessary to be received.

Q. And why do we call it Holy?

A. Because its Head, Jesus Christ, is Holy; its Doctrines are Holy; its Sacraments and means of Grace are Holy; and the end and object of its institution is to make its members Holy.

Q. What are the three chief branches of the Catholic Church as now existing?

A. The Anglican (i. e., English and American); the Roman; the Greek.

TWENTIETH AND CHERRY STREETS.

PARISH NOTES.

The Clergy will have their hours as usual for confessions on Christmas Eve.

The Children's Christmas Festival will be held on Thursday evening, December 27, at 8 o'clock.

The number of Communions during the year, from St. Clement's Day, 1916, to St. Clement's Day, 1917, was 7,192. This is an increase of 839 over the year previous. It is an encouraging sign that the Parish is growing spiritually, and we hope that there will be a still greater increase in the future.

Again we must request those who intend to make their Communions at the 9.30 Mass on weekdays, or the 9.15 Mass on Sundays, to give notice to the priest before the service. Although this request has been made several times, it is constantly ignored. Hereafter no provision will be made for those who fail to conform to this rule.

The Sisters of St. Margaret are settled in their Mission House at 2046 Cherry Street, and expect to have their Chapel blessed the first week in Advent. The house lends itself very well to its purpose, and is exceedingly bright and cheerful. The Rector would be grateful for further contributions toward house rent and telephone.

On Sunday, the twenty-fifth of November, our friend, the Rector of the Church of the Annunciation, celebrated the fortieth anniversary of his ordination to the Priesthood. Father Odell has spent twenty-six years of faithful service in teaching and upholding the Catholic religion in Philadelphia, and we were glad as a congregation to keep his anniversary.

Owing to present conditions and the demands made upon us all in the interest of many good causes, the festivities in connection with our Christmas observances will necessarily be much simplified. It will be impossible this year to have our usual "turkey supper." When there is such real need of food conservation, we cannot, with clear consciences, give indulgence to our appetites. The large amount ordinarily expended for this one dinner would be better spent upon Christmas charities, of which the need is greater this year than ever before. The congregation is asked to send generous contributions to the Sisters, that they may provide for Christ's poor on the Feast of His Nativity.

THE PARISH FESTIVAL.

St. Clement's Day was very beautifully and appropriately observed. Masses were said at 6, 7 and 8 o'clock, and a Solemn High Mass was sung at 11 o'clock. The attendance at all the Masses was good, especially so at the late Mass, when a number of the Clergy of the Diocese, together with some of the delegates to the Provincial Synod, were present to help us keep the Feast. The music was Gounod's Troisième Messe Solennelle. It was exceptionally well sung, and added much to the joy of the festival.

The preacher at the Mass on the Sunday in the Octave was the Very Rev. Hughell Fosbroke, Dean of the General Theological Seminary. His sermon, on the expression of the love of God through worship, was most helpful and fitting, especially when one remembers the traditions of St. Clement's Parish and that for which it stands.

Solemn Evensong was sung at 8 P. M. Father Kellogg, of St. John's, Portsmouth, N. H., was the preacher.

THE PARISH RECEPTION.

The annual Parish reception was held in the Parish Hall on the evening of Monday, November 26. The response to the invitations was gratifying, many of our friends as well as members of the Parish being present.

Messrs. Willard Cornman and Clarence A. Wilson and Master George Wells sang for the entertainment of our guests. Thanks are due also to the Girls' Club for their part of the musical program.

Later in the evening, after the refreshments were served, the younger people enjoyed an impromptu dance.

THE CHRISTMAS OFFERING.

The Christmas offerings have ordinarily been devoted to the Christmas Fund of the Diocese, a fund providing aid for aged Clergy of the Diocese, or their widows and children. This year, by resolution of the Vestry, the offerings on Christmas Day will be used toward the payment of our Parochial Assessments for the Church Pension Fund. These now amount to over $600.00 per annum.

THE NEW FISCAL YEAR.

The General Convention, meeting in 1916, adopted a Canon changing the fiscal years of all Parishes and Church Organizations so that they will run concurrently with the calendar year.

The Diocesan Convention, at its meeting last May, made such necessary changes in the Diocesan Canons as would make them conform to the General Canons, and the Vestry has since duly changed its By-Laws. Hence the fiscal year of the Parish will end on December 31, but will date from January 1, and the Annual Report of the Accounting Warden will cover a full twelve months' period.

Treasurers of the various Parish Organizations who customarily hand in their reports in the spring, are requested to see that their reports are ready as soon after January 1 as possible, and that they cover the whole of 1917.

THE APPORTIONMENT FOR MISSIONS.

The fiscal year of the Board of Missions closed October 31, and while the final report of the Treasurer has not been received in time to give definite information in this issue of the Magazine as to whether there was a deficit or whether receipts were sufficient to meet appropriations, yet it is possible to report that the apportionment of this Parish ($3380.86) was overpaid by a sum approaching $200.00. That this is so is due to the fact that our offerings on Easter of this year were given to the Mission work of the Church.

Many people have a very hazy idea of what the apportionment really is, and it should be understood that it is the minimum amount asked of each Parish to enable the Board to meet its appropriations.

St. Clement's offerings were devoted chiefly to the work carried on by Father Wood at Ichang, Hankow; to work at Sagada, P. I.; and to work in the District of Salina (Kansas). We have a special interest in the work at Sagada, as Father Underhill is there, working with Father Staunton.

The new fiscal year of the Board of Missions will cover fourteen months, or from November 1, 1917, to December 31, 1918, and the apportionment for that period for this Parish is $4255.56, a sum in reality not much larger than what we have just raised, when it is remembered there is the additional time in which it is to be contributed.

The Magazine will be mailed to those contributing fifty cents a year.

GREETINGS to our friends, old and new:—In issuing the MAGAZINE under a new form,, we bespeak the support and co-operation of the Congregation. The Editorial Staff is not over sensitive. We invite kindly criticism, by which we mean, not merely picking flaws and voicing complaints—an occupation to which human nature is prone—but that intelligent and enlightened attitude of heart and mind, which with the revelation of our shortcomings, brings a suggestion for improvement. If there is aught to praise, we would like to hear that also. A word of encouragement now and then is not amiss.

The MAGAZINE has become more or less of a "family affair." The printer is one of our own young men, Mr. John McLauchlan, and the beautiful little sketch which adorns the cover is the work and gift of our good friend, Mr. Stanley Woodward, of Boston, who was a member of the Choir last winter.

Our improved appearance involves some initial expense. The MAGAZINE will be distributed without charge as heretofore, and mailed to those who supply the cost of envelopes and postage, but we trust that generous souls may be found among us, who will gladly contribute toward the support of the MAGAZINE. Small monthly sums will be gladly received.

The motto that we have chosen is a quotation from the writings of Blessed Clement, our Patron. May it be for us all an inspiration for the coming year.

¶ On Thursday, the sixth of December, the Rector blessed the Altar in the Chapel of S. Margaret's Mission House. There were present, besides the Clergy of the Parish, Father Ward, of S. Elisabeth's, the Sisters of All Saints, and many friends from various parishes. The Sister Superior of the Community came on from Boston for the occasion. Tea was served after the service, and an opportunity was given to inspect the Mission House.

¶ On December 14th, a service flag was hung from the Church tower. The pole has been placed directly over the door on Twentieth Street. We are displaying forty-seven stars at the present writing. Three of our young men are now in France. Paul Casey and John Kuhns are with Hospital Units, and Thomas Winston is a Lieutenant in the Signal Corps. The list is constantly growing. We trust that the members of the Parish are remembering each one of our boys daily by name in their prayers.

¶ The "comfort" bags sent by our Red Cross Auxiliary were much appreciated, if one may judge from the grateful letters that come to us from the training camps.

¶ The Services of Intercession are being continued every Friday night in the Church. It ought not to be necessary to urge Christians to come together for prayer, especially at the present crisis. The Rector believes that many who do not come on Friday nights fail to appreciate either the need or the privilege, or else are more anxious for their own bodily comfort than for the welfare of the men who are fighting their battles.

¶ Considering the extremely inclement weather, the service held at S. Mark's Church on the evening of December 13th, under the auspices of the Guild of All Souls, was very well attended. Dean Vernon, of the Cathedral, Portland, Maine, gave a remarkably able and appealing sermon on the state of the faithful departed and our relation to them in the Body of Christ. Every member of S. Clement's should become a member of this Guild. It has as its object intercession for the faithful departed, and has been in existence for many years. Those who may desire further information may apply to the clergy.

¶ In the December issue of the MAGAZINE, it was stated that the Parochial Apportionment for Missions (Domestic and Foreign), amounting to $3380.88, had been overpaid by a sum approaching $200. The report of the Treasurer, since received, shows that our apportionment was really overpaid by $295.66, the variation in the figures being due to the fact that certain sums credited on our apportionment were sent direct to the Treasurer, and hence were not included in the figures furnished by the Accounting Warden.

¶ On account of a change in the Bishop's plans, the Confirmation will be held at four o'clock in the afternoon of January 27, instead of in the evening.

THE first Tuesday in November was chosen by the Girls' Club as the day for the annual election. Whether or not the young ladies have any longing for the "vote" has not been divulged. However, the election was properly carried through, and after all the ballots had been counted these officers were declared elected for 1918: President, Mrs. James McElroy; Vice-president, Miss Olive Daniels; Secretary, Miss Mary Rothwell; Treasurer, Mrs. Frank Homan.

The new President then took the chair, and appointed two standing Committees, namely, the Hospitality Committee, Miss Jessie Forrester, Chairman, and Miss Christobel Strachan and Miss Lucy Decker; the Committee on Entertainment, Mrs. Benjamin Taylor, Chairman, and Miss Geordie Joline and Miss Bessie Elliott.

It was voted that the meetings should be held in this order; the first Tuesday to be devoted to the business meeting, the dancing class to meet on the second Tuesday the singing class under Mr. Fry's direction, on the third, and the Rector's class for the study of the Prayer Book on the fourth.

STATISTICS are never good reading, except to a certain type of mind. Most of us have such a hard time keeping pace with reports reliable and unreliable, that we find a column of figures really alarming. When, however, these figures represent the result of work done, that is an entirely different matter. The S. Clement's Auxiliary, No. 233, of the American Red Cross, has been in existence just six months. During that time the following amount of work has been finished: 2100 surgical dressings, 684 hospital garments; 150 knitted articles, from wool requisitioned, articles such as socks, sweaters, helmets and wristlets. Besides these, the Auxiliary has sent the following gifts: an afghan to Father Jefferys, with Base Hospital No. 10, in France; and 198 other gifts of comforts for soldiers. This does not include the 45 Christmas bags sent to our own boys in service.

There is a very fair enrollment of workers, but there is always room for more.

BEGINNING Wednesday evening, January 9, there will be a series of five organ recitals given at S. Clement's Church, under the auspices of the American Organ Players' Club, for the benefit of the Emergency Aid War Relief Committee. The Executive Committee of the Club has arranged for these recitals with a twofold purpose in view, to give an opportunity to hear organists who have won fame in their respective countries, and who are volunteering their services; and to secure funds for the relief of the war sufferers. The subscription for the series is $1.25.

The following is the list as arranged:

Jan. 9—T. Tertius Noble (formerly of York Minster), representing England.

Jan. 16—Pietro A. Yon (formerly of Vatican and Royal Church, Rome), representing Italy.

Jan. 23—Firmin Swinnen (formerly of Antwerp Cathedral), representing Belgium.

Jan. 30—Charles Heinroth (Organist Carnegie Institute, Pittsburgh, Pa.), representing France.

Feb. 6—Henry S. Fry, Ralph Kinder, Rollo F. Maitland, Frederick Maxson, S. Wesley Sears, Andrew Wheeler (all of Philadelphia), representing America.

These gentlemen will officially represent their countries (with stand of colors) at the recitals:

MR. G. P. PORTER, British Consul-General.
SIGNOR GUISEPPE GENTILE, Italian Consul Protem.
MR. PAUL HAGEMANS, Belgian Consul-General.
MR. A. S. ANDERSON, Belgian Consul.
MONSIEUR VICTOR FONTANO, French Consul.
BRIGADIER GENERAL L. W. T. WALLER, U. S. Marine Corps.

A Letter from the Front

ANY letters addressed to me as above will, or ought to, reach me safely. I am not living in Paris as the address might lead you to suppose, but right out at the front. The first three days were occupied in getting settled in our quarters and in learning the various routes between the postes de secours and the evacuation hospitals. On the third day of our arrival we were walking along a road when, without any warning, the Germans, having observed us, commenced to fire shells at us. We did not do a thing but duck, and by walking on our hands and knees we gained a place of safety without any mishap. Several of the shells that were fired at us failed to explode, owing to the muddy condition of the ground. I am glad to say that we are now busy in our work. I am on duty at night. It gave me a creepy feeling at first to hear the shells, both German and French, screaming over our heads, but we are now getting used to that. Yesterday I passed through an empty village, or what was once a village. The only thing left standing was a crucifix. Everything else was a complete ruin. Nearly every French village has its crucifix. I have met several Roman Catholic priests, nearly all in uniform. I found them extremely friendly and glad to meet an American.

My work for the past two days has been ridiculously easy, only one sick man to take to the hospital. When I have no work to do I get down into a dug-out and take it easy, and sometimes get a little sleep between whiz-bangs. Whiz-bang is the slang expression for a cannonade from a large gun. Every day here is like a Fourth of July celebration. The fireworks commence at nightfall with the sending off of big sky rockets of different colors. Then comes the cannonade of guns roaring. You hear a distant gun speak. You hear the moaning of the shell overhead. The instinct of self-preservation prompts one to duck, as one expects the shell to drop at
